CHINESE LOP OFF HEADS

Swordsmen Busy in Shanghai

Executioners Kill Victims on Streets in Attempt to Stop Strike

Natives Flee Into Foreign Settlements as Reign of Terror Increases

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20. (AP)—Beheadings started yesterday by Chinese executioners to stop a spread of the general strike called on Saturday continued today. Reliable Chinese sources estimated the number of beheadings at twenty-eight, while Nationalist supporters said that there had been ninety beheaded.

The victims were mercilessly caught in the act of distributing strike literature or speaking seditious speeches, and beheaded on the spot by soldiers who patrolled the streets with drawn swords. The reign of terror resulted in an exodus from the native quarter to the foreign settlements which are beyond the jurisdiction of the Chinese authorities.

The strike was called ostensibly as a protest move, but in reality was a diversion of the Nationalist capture of Nanking, important city south of here.

STRIKE SPREAD

Drastic repressive measures, amounting to a reign of terror so far as the Shanghai-controlled parts of the city are concerned, were put in effect by Gen. Li Po-chang, Marshal Sun's representative in Shanghai. In spite of such measures, the strike showed no signs of spreading.

Gen. Li issued a proclamation that all persons found inciting strike or disorder with workers will be summarily punished.

Small minor disorders were noted, only in the factory district, Yangtzepoo, where boys and loafers and the quarter of a small detachment of British and Punjab troops who were ordered not to resort to arms unless the mob entered the foreign zone. After breaking down the police lines, the police were called out and dispersed the rioters who were found in Ziccawei and turned over to the Chinese authorities.

MILL STONED

Before the gathered crowd and on their arrival in the Yangtzepoo district, a Chinese-owned cotton mill, was stoned by the police who charged forcibly and arrested a few. In other parts of the city there were occasional small brawls and a few arrests.

British troops were ordered not to leave camps in groups of at least four men.

Because it was Sunday, it was difficult to accurately gauge the total number of strikers, but the city re-

Force of 800 Sent Ashore to Protect Towns in Fighting Zone

Railway Between Managua and Sea Remains Open, Washington Edict

CORINTO (Nic.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Eight hundred United States marines and bluejackets were landed at Corinto from American warships this morning. About 350 of them will be stationed at Chinandega, scene of heavy fighting recently between the Conservative and Liberal factions, 400 will take up posts at Leon, while the others are to be scattered along the railway route, guarding bridges and water tanks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Decision to land additional American naval forces in Nicaragua immediately in order to keep open railway communication between Managua and Corinto was announced today by the State Department.

While official word of the actual landing at Corinto had not been received when the announcement was issued, the forces were believed to have been set ashore at Corinto this morning and to have been stationed at Leon and Chinandega.

The announcement said that the landing was for the purpose of protecting American and foreign lives and property and to maintain communication between the American Legation and legation guards at Managua and the sea.

CONSENT OF GOVERNMENT

The department's announcement said:

"Minister Eberhardt and Admiral Latimer, after consultation, have found it advisable for the protection of American and foreign lives and property and to maintain communication between the American Legation and the American Legation guards at Managua and the sea to land additional naval forces to be stationed at certain points along the railway. This action will be taken with the full consent and approval of the Nicaraguan government."

No details as to the size or composition of the landing force was given, although Managua dispatches previously have indicated that approximately 800 bluejackets from the American cruisers at Corinto would be set ashore to guard the railway temporarily, pending the arrival of additional marine detachments now on the way.

The town of Chinandega was the

WINDY CITY READY FOR VOTE FIGHT

Police Guns and Bombs Prepared to Meet Possible Rows at Polls Tomorrow

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Chicago's Washington Day Mayoralty primary tonight was about ended except for the voting.

The hottest political campaign in a generation wound up today and as the echoes of frenzied oratory died away, preparations were made to try to conduct the election with pencils instead of pistols.

Sixty detective-bureau squads were marshaled today, each squad being given a machine gun, two rifles, one shotgun and a supply of tear bombs. They were ordered to tour the city in search of trouble. In addition several hundred uniformed policemen will guard the upward of 2000 voting-places.

The only real race in the Mayoralty primary was between William Hale Thompson, former Mayor, and Edward R. Litzinger, member of the Board of Control, both contesting for the Republican nomination. Mayor Dever had no strong opposition for the Democratic nomination and Dr. John Dill Robertson, chairman of the West Park Commission, running as an independent candidate, has not entered the primary, but said he will run in the April election.

The Republican campaign resolved itself into a fight between factional leaders with Senator Deneen supporting Litzinger and Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney, behind Thompson.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—At least one man was killed and five seriously injured in a snowslide Friday afternoon near the Alta Tunnel and Transportation Company's here until this morning when an apmiles southeast of here.

The slide and subsequent ones destroyed all telephone communication and word of the slide did not reach are expected to be laid before Gov. peal was brought to the city for physicians.

Names of the known dead and injured were unavailable.

Crews Fight to Keep Mississippi Behind Levees

FERRIDAY (La.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Two hundred men worked here tonight to save the levee which holds back the flood waters of the Mississippi and Lake Concordia from the city.

The river at this point is several miles from the city, but the present high waters have overflowed into Lake Concordia, which now is several feet above the city.

The water, still several feet from the top of the levee, was seeping under the bank and it is feared that the levee will give way unless the seepage is stopped.

URUGUAYAN FLYER ON WAY

Trans-Atlantic Pilot Leaves Pisa for Malaga as Race With Italian Develops

MARINA DI PISA (Italy) Feb. 20. (AP)—The Uruguayan aviator, Maj. Tadee Larre-Borges hopped off today on his projected trans-Atlantic flight to Montevideo. The plane took the air at 10 o'clock this morning with Malaga, Spain, as its first scheduled stop.

Maj. Larre-Borges plans to make the voyage in six hops, including a nonstop flight between the main lands of Africa and South America, which project was abandoned last week by Commander Francisco de Pinedo, Italian aviator, who started a week ago on an aerial voyage to South America. The Uruguayan's itinerary calls for landings at Malaga, the Canary Islands, Dakar, Senegal; Pernambuco, Brazil, Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo.

The seaplane used by Maj. Larre-Borges was built here expressly for this flight. The other members of its crew are Capt. Jose Ibarra, second in command; Glauco Larre-Borges, wireless operator, and Jose Figolu, mechanic.

Maj. Larre-Borges's machine is a single plane hydroairplane, similar to that of De Pinedo, but it is carrying 3850 kilograms (about 8500 pounds,) which is 450 more than De Pinedo.

Larre-Borges will be guided, if necessary, by signals from the steamer Mendoza, which left Marseilles on the 10th inst., with Senora Larre-Borges and their four children aboard.

Like De Pinedo's plane, that used by Larre-Borges, has two 500 horsepower motors. It can make about the same speed as the Santa Maria, but its cruising radius is 4000 kilometers, as compared with 3000 for the other, and it consumes 170 liters of gasoline per hour instead of 180, and carries 4200 meters, instead of 3500.

Aeronautical experts here, in comparing the two flights, contend that it is not quite fair to consider them as a contest, since the Uruguayan is merely aiming to reach Montevideo, while De Pinedo is seeking to reach Buenos Aires as the first part of a more ambitious enterprise.

Latin Americans in Italy, however, are overjoyed at the prospect of a race between Uruguay and Italy and fervently pray: "God speed both, and may the better man win."

ITALIAN FLYER FAILS TO GET PLANE IN AIR

PORTO PRAYA (Cape Verde Islands) Feb. 20. (AP)—Several times last night Commander De Pinedo, the Italian aviator attempted to force his hydroairplane Santa Maria into the air, but without success.

His next port of call if it is possible to make the distance, is Port Natal, on the Brazilian coast. That will necessitate a flight of 1750 miles, and means many pounds more of fuel. It is largely owing to this extra weight that the Santa Maria failed to leave the water. At any rate one of the two mechanicians probably will be left behind at Porto Praya.

Great crowds gathered last night in the moonlight to witness the departure of the Italians, but the flyers remained perforce, and slept at the palace till 9 o'clock this morning.

The Portuguese gunboat Zaire arrived from Port Vincent with fresh petroleum supplies for the Santa Maria, and it is possible that she may take the hydroairplane in tow to some more favorable jumping-off place.

SWEDEN AND BELGIUM IN PEACE PACT

Pledge Never to War on Each Other Sequel to Matrimonial Alliance

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 20. (AP)—The royal Swedish-Belgian matrimonial alliance of last fall between Princess Astrid and Crown Prince Leopold has been followed by an agreement between the two countries never to go to war over any cause, even those usually excluded, "vital interests" and "national honor."

In submitting this pact for ratification to the Swedish Riksdag, Foreign Minister Eliel Lofgren said this was the first time Sweden ever had exchanged such sweeping pledges with any nation outside those of Scandinavia.

The methods of arbitration resemble those already agreed upon with Czecho-Slovakia. Treaties making war formally "illegal" under every conceivable circumstance are in force between Sweden and Denmark, and Sweden and Finland, while a corresponding pact with Norway is pending before the Norwegian Parliament. Thus war has been "outlawed" in the North of Europe, where formerly there were almost constant hostilities.

Pan-American Flyers Guests of Ambassador

Maj. Dargue, flight commander, announced that the four-plane squadron will leave for Valdivia Wednesday by way of Talcahuano, where they will halt to replenish their fuel tanks.

RIVER LOOSE AT BORDER

Crews Fight to Seal Levee

Thousand Acres South of Mexicali Inundated by Colorado Waters

Torrents Escaping Through Gap Below Pescadero Dam Peril Lands

BY JACKSON BERGER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

CALEXICO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Flood waters from the Colorado River, escaping from the channel through a wide gap in the Pescadero levee, below the Pescadero Dam, which was ripped out during last year's flood, tonight had inundated approximately 1000 acres of cultivated land below Mexicali, despite efforts of hundreds of men and teams to check the flow.

Although the flood waters were believed to have not reached their peak and higher marks were anticipated today, the levee building crews were continuing their efforts to prevent the rushing waters from gaining access to the old Bee River bed, which would release them on thousands of acres of other cultivated land.

At Pescadero Dam, the strategic point in the battle against the flood, the water was standing eighty above seventy-six feet while the big bulwark of stone was receiving a merciless pounding of drift-laden water, flowing at the rate of 61,000 second cubic feet, an increase of 4000 cubic feet over Saturday's burden.

RISE CAUSES ALARM

Reports from the United States Reclamation Bureau at Yuma tonight stating that the Colorado River had risen from a height of 28.2 feet at 8 p.m. to 29 feet at 11 o'clock caused grave concern among engineers guarding the dam here. Reckoned in second feet this rise means an increase from 62,000 cubic feet of water flow per second to 98,000, according to the engineers.

The peak of the flood is not yet past Yuma, the report stated, for measurements showed the stream was still rising. This report led authorities to believe that the crest of the flood probably will reach 110,000 feet as originally predicted.

With the dam strained under the present river flow engineers expressed deep concern over its ability to withstand the huge wall of water approaching from upstream.

The break in the Pescadero levee, through which the flood waters are escaping, and eventually reaching cultivated area, presented an alarming problem, according to H. M. Rouse, chief engineer in charge of the defense forces. Out of the gap hundreds of tons of water are flowing daily and are gradually eating away the Pescadero levee. About 500 feet of the levee, which bears a railroad to assist in carrying material, have been eaten away and the rails fallen victim of the flood waters.

OVERFLOWING CROPS

From the break in the levee the waters are rushing through lower areas to penetrate the agricultural district and flow over growing fields.

The efforts of the levee-building crews on the ranches immediately below Mexicali have been confined to throwing up temporary earthworks across the lower washes and the water already has piled against the obstructions. Engineer Rouse said the battle front was strung over fifteen or sixteen miles bordering on the rich ranch section.

The levees have been constructed in the lower places and connected with levees of other years and natural obstructions in an effort to halt the progress of the waters. This has been accomplished to some success. Mr. Rouse said, however, he was apprehensive lest the water proceed through some unguarded place in a remote section and form an attack on the rear of the temporary works.

WARNING FOR SPRING

Along the Pescadero levee, the immediate first line of defense, gangs of workmen were kept busy filling bags with earth to be thrown in the path of the flood waters. The rail track along the top of the levee has been raised three feet and blocked up on stone piles to remove them from the menace and assist in heightening the levee.

EASTERN COAST SCOURGED BY FIERCE NORTHEASTER

Score Die and Havoc Wreaked as Seas Rake Seaboard From Delaware to Halifax

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—From Delaware to Halifax, the Atlantic seaboard was scourged Saturday night and early Sunday by a howling northeast gale, reaching blizzard proportions at many points. From a minimum of twelve, the estimated loss of life ranged up to a score: Millions of dollars in property was destroyed and tremendous damage occasioned to telegraph lines, roads and seaside improvements.

North from Delaware Beach, the shore line is strung with debris of small craft.

Accompanying winds of terrific force were tides of record height, undermining summer bungalows and more pretentious homes, particularly along the Jersey ocean front.

GUARD CREW LOST

The principal loss of life came with the destruction of Coast Guard patrol boat 238 off Provincetown, Mass. Her crew of eight men was swallowed while sister-craft of the Navy strained to reach the doomed craft. A schooner went ashore off Nantucket and two others were reported in distress.

While the brunt of the storm appeared over, several sections reported extremely high winds continuing and steadily upreaching tides.

Sections well back from the coast—in Pennsylvania and Upper New York—felt the storm through heaping snow drifts.

Summer resorts along the Long Island, Staten Island and New Jersey shores suffered heavily as the highest tides in many years swept in. Martha's Vineyard, Mass., still was being battered tonight. The Coast Guard patrol boat 241, of the Woods Hole base, was torn from the wharf where she lay early today and thrown high on the beach. None of the crew was injured.

HEAVY DAMAGE DONE

Between 400 and 500 persons were marooned along the south shore of Staten Island. Property damage in that section probably will amount to more than $100,000. The tide rose to four feet above normal in a number of places, washing docks, bungalows and movable property. Police, firemen and Coast Guardsmen set out in boats to rescue those marooned.

On the Long Island coast damage to Long Beach, Rockaway and Coney Island property by high tides was reported. At Long Branch, N. J., the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad were undermined and no trains were running.

At Perth Amboy, N. J., the bodies of two unidentified men were washed ashore. Many bungalows were wrecked at near-by summer resorts. Railroad traffic was tied up.

Far out at sea the storm swept, disrupting shipping schedules. Vessels were delayed from twelve to twenty-four hours.

The tide in New York Harbor was the highest seen in twenty years by many of those stationed at the barge office. Hundreds of thousands of dollars damage was done to piers and stores. Telegraphic communication with Sandy Hook and quarantine was broken off when wires snapped under the pressure of ice.

Coast Guard headquarters at Asbury, N. J., reported the rescue of three men from the barge Wm. Penn Point, which was grounded at Little Egg Station, sixty miles south. The combined forces of three New Jersey stations were attempting to launch boats to take off the crew of the barge James Howard, aground a few miles north.

CITIES IN DARKNESS

In up-State New York the blizzard hindered transportation services and piled up huge drifts across highways in country districts. It was especially severe in the Adirondack sections. Towanda, Pa., reported a snowfall of nineteen inches.

The towns of Lavalette, Seaside Heights and Seaside Park, in New Jersey, were cut off from the world by water. Autoists who crossed the bridges north and south of these places before the sea washed over them reported that whole lines of bungalows and many unoccupied summer cottages were washed away.

All towns from Long Branch north to Atlantic Highlands and from Belmar south to Seaside Park were without lights and many without means of communication.

In the inlet section of Atlantic City covering a score of city blocks residents were marooned for hours.

SLIDES SHUT OFF CITY

Eureka Railroad Links Blocked

Northwestern Pacific Halts Service Due to Storm; Espee Hard Hit

Better Weather Forecast for Southland, While North Suffers Hardships

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The city of Eureka, seaport and lumber center of Northern California with a population of approximately 20,000, is cut off from rail communication with the outside world tonight as the result of numerous and terrific landslides which have put the Northwestern Pacific Railroad's through line completely out of commission.

Advices reaching here tonight are to the effect that at least a score of landslides directly traceable to excessive rainfall in the mountains, particularly in the northernmost part of California and in Southern Oregon, have occurred in the last twenty-four hours. It is pouring rain and further damage is feared.

The Southern Pacific has suffered heavily in Southern Oregon, according to messages to officers of the line here. Several slides have interrupted communications. Tracks have been washed out at several points and at Tunnel No. 6, between Reuben and Brandt, Or., water to a depth of between five and six feet is reported flowing unchecked through the bore.

The Northwestern Pacific's local office tonight announced that all through train passenger service has been abandoned temporarily and freight service is virtually at a standstill. The line is impassable between Willetts and Scotia. One through train is held at Scotia and another at Bell Springs.

RIVER OVER BANKS

The Eel River is over its banks, adjoining lowlands are flooded and the stream is still rising.

The Southern Pacific's Shasta Limited, which left the Oakland mole northbound at 7:40 p.m., yesterday, is held in two sections at Ashland, Or., because tracks are out beyond that point. The southbound Puget Sound Express of the same line is held at Medford, Or. Officials said they could give no definite information as to when these trains will resume their runs.

All water levels for thirty years have been shattered on the Willamette and Umpqua rivers in Southern Oregon, it is reported, and further destruction is anticipated. Rain has fallen continuously for forty-eight hours and there is no sign of a letup.

Several small slides in Feather River Canyon have delayed service on the Western Pacific's line from San Francisco to Ogden. None is of serious proportions, company officials declared, and work crews are clearing them as fast as possible. An average of six hours behind schedule time was being made tonight. No attempt to restore normal schedules will be made until the conditions are safer, it was said.

At Eureka 6.78 inches of rain had

EIGHT KILLED IN WILD SURF

Coast Guardsmen Meet Death as Storm Smashes Patrol Boat on New England Shore

PROVINCETOWN (Mass.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Eight coast guardsmen, the crew of the seventy-five-foot patrol boat 238, went to their deaths in the surf which hammered the beach at High Head near here early today. For twelve hours men pitted their strength and resourcefulness against the brutality of a seventy-mile gale and cutting snow, and then lost when another hour might have meant rescue. The staunch boat smashed to fragments when the angry sea which had torn her from her anchorage yesterday hurled her onto the sands and trampled her hrutsed hulk under its pounding surf.

The gale held off two destroyers which fought doggedly through a fifty-mile run to reach their beleaguered comrades while it rendered impotent the land forces gathered along the strand.

It was 5 o'clock last evening when the towerman of the Highland station caught blinker signals of distress from the 238 at anchor three miles off the tip of Cape Cod. The watch found on one of the dead which the sea cast back had stopped at 6 o'clock, the moment this morning when the water took the life of man and mechanism.

The story of the intervening twelve hours never can be written except from the viewpoint of the shore watchers, straining their eyes to penetrate three miles of dark confusion where snow whirls danced with abandon to the shriek and whistle of the gale.

The blizzard had been in progress thirty hours when the little coast guardian dropped her two anchors in a vain hope of riding it out. The blinker flashed the message ashore that engines and radio were disabled. The towerman shouted the word to

BRITISH AND EUGENE CHEN ENTER PACT AT HANKOW

Parley With Northern Government Set for Today and Tension Over Shanghai Lessens

HANKOW, Feb. 20. (AP)—An agreement defining the rights of Great Britain in Chinese territory now controlled by the Canton Nationalist forces was reached here today by Eugene Chen, Cantonese Chinese Foreign Minister, and Charge d'Affaires O'Malley, representing England. The contents of the agreement were not divulged.

Announcement was made also that Great Britain will begin conversations tomorrow with leaders in Northern China looking to a similar concord with the northern administration.

Messages from Peking say that Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Foreign Minister for the Peking government, and Miles W. Lampson, British Minister to China, will begin conversations there tomorrow for the purpose of reaching an agreement in the north.

TENSION MAY BE RELAXED IN SHANGHAI

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Agreement between the British diplomatic representatives at Hankow and Eugene Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister, reported today may serve to relax tension at Shanghai over the approach of Cantonese troops to that city, although the Hankow negotiations are not understood in Washington to have any direct bearing on the international settlement status at Shanghai.

No report on the Hankow negotiations indicating their successful conclusion had reached the State Department tonight. The Washington government has had only an indirect interest in the British-Chinese discussions there since they have involved the question of the future status of British concessions at ports controlled by the Cantonese.

Should the British government and the Cantonese de facto authorities have reached an understanding as to these strictly British concessions, however, there is little doubt in Washington that Nationalist agitation at Shanghai, where the United States and other countries have concessions, will subside.

Thus far the official reports from Shanghai do not show that the strikes called in that city in celebration of Cantonese military victories have had any antiforeign aspect. This fact has further encouraged Washington officials to believe that Shanghai again will escape from serious disorders as it has so many times in the past in periods of revolutionary turmoil in the immediate neighborhood of the city.

LONDON SEES NEW PEACE CORNER-STONE

LONDON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Signature of the agreement between the Cantonese Foreign Minister, Eugene Chen, and the British Charge, Owen O'Malley, is gratifying to British officials, since it smooths out the problems arising from the forcible seizure of the Hankow concession. It is thought this agreement will form the cornerstone for new relations between China and Great Britain.

The Foreign Office tonight still was awaiting details as to whether the agreement entered into concerns Hankow alone, or also embraces Kiukiang. It is probable that certain details will have to be worked out.

News of the signing of the agreement was communicated to all the members of the Cabinet who remained in London for the week-end in order to keep in touch week-the latest developments in China. Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, received the news at his home at Mayfield, Sussex, and is expected to make a statement tomorrow in the House of Commons outlining the important points of the agreement.

Although Sir Austen had told Premier Baldwin and his other colleagues that he hoped the Cantonese Foreign Minister would sign the agreement this week-end, the news of the accomplished fact came as an agreeable surprise owing to previous disappointments on the eve of the expected signature.

It is understood that the leading principle of the accord is withdrawal of the Hankow concession from exclusive British control and placing it under a joint commission for administration, similar to that of the former German and Russian concessions. The Chinese will participate actively in municipal affairs with increasing rights and responsibilities.

It is reported that final signature was brought about by Sir Austen's agreeing to divorce the Hankow problem entirely from the larger question of British concessions in China generally and naturally the agreement has nothing to do whatsoever with the Shanghai problem.

Official news has been received from Shanghai that the general strike is spreading, but that there has been little disorder. Gen. Sun's forces intend to make a stand against the onmarching Cantonese at Sunkiang, about thirty miles south of Shanghai. It appears that the strike in Shanghai was timed to synchronize with the Cantonese victory in Chekiang province.

According to press dispatches from Peking, discussion on the new British proposals will be resumed tomorrow between Minister Miles Lampson and Wellington Koo, the Peking Foreign Minister.

MORE TROOPS AT NICARAGUA

scene of recent heavy fighting between Liberal and Conservative forces, and through traffic on the Managua-Corinto Railroad was interrupted for that period. The decision reached by Admiral Latimer and the American Minister is understood to reflect their information as to further impending Liberal attacks upon towns now held by the Conservative forces either on or adjacent to the railway line.

At the time the marine guard was re-established at the legation in Managua, supplies for three months were sent with it to insure against any scarcity due to interruption of the railway. The new landing indicates, however, that the Washington government has determined to permit no interruption of traffic by fighting between the factional forces for possession of towns where there are Americans or other foreign residents engaged in business.

Whether the operation would be extended to towns farther away from the railway as additional marine forces become available to Admiral Latimer has not been disclosed.

mains without postal or transport services and workers in other mills joined the walkout.

The steamer President McKinley sailed for Seattle without mails.

One noteworthy phase of the strike thus far shown is the fact that there has been no marked anti-foreign tendency, despite the stoning of the British billets. The fact that hostile demonstrations have been largely confined to foreign-ruled parts of Shanghai is because within those limits strikers are protected against Marshal Sun's vengeance.

EDICT ISSUED

The General Labor Union issued a statement of its aims, including continuation of anti-imperialist propaganda; elimination of the militarist formation of a peoples' government; freedom of speech and press; an eight-hour day; higher wages, and recognition of the unions.

However, Chinese papers state the real object of the strike is to "welcome the Nationalist armies toward Shanghai. This strike is political not economic, Sun Chuan-Fang is the real target."

It is also regarded as a preliminary test of the union's organization for effective political action. Tonight it still was uncertain whether the strikers would be content with a two-day labor holiday or whether the trouble would continue.

Intimidation is playing a large part in the swelling ranks of strikers and an effort to continue bus services in the international settlement broke down for this reason. Today public transportation was confined to rikshas.

Chinese crews on several British and Chinese river and coastal vessels also struck today.

First details of the withdrawal of Marshal Sun's troops from Hangchow began to come in today. The first Cantonese detachment entered the city on Friday. Soldiers carried a banner saying "First Division of the Revolutionary Armies." After their arrival, shops began to reopen. The Nationalist flag was displayed everywhere, while union mass meetings celebrated the taking of Hangchow by the Cantonese.

PILLAGING HALTED

Looting of the city was blamed on troops of Gen. Chow Jin-Jen, ex-Governor of Fukien Province, who after losing the former Province, also shared Marshal Sun's defeat at Chekiang. These forces, the last northerners to leave, began pillaging, but it was cut short by heavy rains and rapid approach of the Nationalists. About 400 houses were looted.

Further northward withdrawals of Marshal Sun's forces is reported, but there are 40,000 soldiers between Kashing and Sungkiang, which is taken as evidence of another stand. The southerners apparently are not yet advancing, as their forces at Hangchow are still believed small and it is necessary to await reinforcements and supplies before beginning the next stage of the adventure.

A number of armed robberies in the environs of Shanghai are blamed on Sun Chuan-Fang stragglers, while Nationalist sympathizers are believed responsible for some tampering with the railway line encircling this city.

CHURCH EXPLOSION FRIGHTENS WORSHIPERS

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20. (AP)—A boiler explosion in the American Community Church during services tonight caused a panic, owing chiefly to the general feeling of nervousness in the foreign settlement. There were no casualties, but the church was quickly emptied.

Many declared that they thought the church had been bombed by strikers or that the city was being bombarded. The explosion was entirely accidental, and the damage was small.

WU'S MEN DISARM SOLDIERS OF CHANG

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20. (AP)—Gen. Wu Pei-Fu evened his recent military score with his traditional rival, Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian dictator, today when troops of the northern leaders had a brush in Honan Province, the Manchurian's troops being disarmed by those of Gen. Wu. This was reported in a Japanese dispatch received here from Peking. Gen. Wu's troops also seized an ammunition train belonging to Gen. Chang.

In his action today Gen. Wu reversed the situation reported in Honan Province recently when Gen. Chang's troops disarmed a number of Wu's soldiers.

The fighting that has taken place between the troops of Wu Pei-Fu and Chang Tso-Lin has been merely skirmishes and does not indicate a real alignment of the forces of these two war lords.

Wu, ousted last fall from his control of Central China, a few days ago notified Chang Tso-Lin that his troops must not advance southward through Honan province to attack the Cantonese until conference could be had with Wu. It is not certain what position Wu will take in the impending struggle of North and South China. He has been acting independently ever since he was driven from his capital at Hankow last August.

Women's Federation Want More Articulate Yes's and No's From Flappers and Boy Friends During National Better Speech Week

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—The General Federation of Women's Clubs wants better "Yes's" and "No's" put into circulation and the flapper and her boy friends generally to quit using their "fearful and wonderful language."

The two most commion short words of the English language, Mrs. Katherine Knowles Robbins, Chicago, chairman of the better-American speech committee of the federation, said today, issue from the throats of most Americans in strange ways.

"Yes" is usually Yep, Yeah, Uh-huh or Ya, and "No," Nup, Nope or Uh-uh.

In pleading for more and better pronunciation, Mrs. Robbins called attention to the national "Better Speech Week" sponsored by the federation, starting Monday. Women's clubs and civic organizations the country over have been asked to arrange suitable methods to help expurgate the American vocabulary.

A "Better American Speech Pledge" has been prepared for school use. Its tenets include the pledging of allegiance to "my country's language."

STORM SWEEPS EASTERN COAST

Rowboats were used along streets from three to five feet under water. Plate-glass windows in many parts of the city were blown out by the seventy-two-mile gale and telephone and telegraph wires were down.

A check with the Coast Guard base in Boston tonight established the identity of the two bodies washed ashore as those of Clark and Freeburn. Identification was made by tattoo marks in the case of Clark.

This little village on the tip of the cape was too wrapped up in the disaster off its shores to take much time for a check of its own storm damage today.

The anemometer at the government weather station blew away after registering seventy-five miles an hour at 2:30 today, while the Associated Press correspondent, who watched the CG-238's struggles throughout the night from an upper window of her house, reported several windows on the ocean side blown in, with probably similar damage to other structures throughout the town.

The word also came from Boston that the four rescue ships, fears for whose safety had been entertained, had rounded the tip of the cape and were making for Boston again after their gallant, though unsuccessful, race against the elements.

FOUR DIE OF COLD IN PITTSBURGH STORM

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 20. (AP)—Four deaths, the result of snow and cold weather were reported today in the Pittsburgh district, which is buried under fifteen inches of snow, the season's heaviest fall. Other sections of Western Pennsylvania reported from six to twenty-four inches.

A 13-year-old boy who took refuge in a large tool box during a blinding flurry was found dead by searchers. It was believed he fell asleep and was frozen to death. Martin Cridge, 66 years of age, slipped and fell to the sidewalk suffering a fractured skull from which he died, and two negroes whose bodies were found in snowbanks were said to have died from exposure.

Northern West Virginia also was included in the snow belt. Fairmont reported seventeen and one-half inches of snow in forty-eight hours, and similar conditions existed in other sections accompanying hindrance to railroad, trolley and automobile traffic.

LAST HOPE FOR FLYERS SWEPT AWAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—The last hope for the safety of the two army aviators believed to have crashed in the surf Thursday near Island Beach Station, N. J., was swept away in last night's blizzard.

With wires a hopeless tangle under the double beating of wind and sleet, no reports came today from the force of fifty which was scheduled to keep the search throughout last night, but the most optimistic were ready to concede defeat. Even had the flyers—Lieuts. Willard J. Harris and William A. Gray—made their way safely to shore, it was considered improbable they could have survived the weather of the last thirty-six hours.

They were last seen flying low near Island Beach Station in a heavy fog. Findings of an "airways" plane propeller on the beach led to first fears for their safety.

DELAWARE COAST STREWN WITH WRECKAGE

WILMINGTON (Del.) Feb. 20. (AP) A northeast gale caused $200,000 damage at Delaware City, partly wrecked a number of Delaware Beach resorts and strewed the shore line with small water craft. The banks of the old Chesapeake and Delaware canal were broken in several places. The Thomas Clyde, a Delaware Beach Company steamer, filled and sank at its winter dock at Delaware Beach.

Fort Dupont, the government reservation near Delaware City, was flooded and traffic in the streets is confined to launches and rowboats. A ten-foot tide went over the seawalls. Several bridges were afloat.

All telephone lines between here and Rehoboth were down. Part of the Rehoboth pier was washed away and the Rehobth schoolhouse partly unroofed.

At Lewis, water rose two feet in some streets and in Milford the Mispillon River flooded streets. Residents salvaged household furniture in rowboats. Bowers Beach was badly damaged, and at North Bowers Beach five cottages were blown away, with a twenty-foot sea flooding into the streets. At Slaughter's Beach the board walk was swept away. Shipping in the Nanticoke River was at a standstill. Sussex county roads were blocked by trees and debris and water covered many fields.

THREE RESCUED BY COAST GUARDS

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—Three men were rescued from the steel tug West Point today by Coast Guards after the tug had caught on a sandbar off Little Beach Island last night during the height of the storm and was in danger of breaking up.

A few minutes after rescuing the crew of the West Point the guards from the Atlantic City, Little Egg Harbor, Bonds and Little Beach stations went to the aid of the tug Jones Howard, which had gotten into difficulties two miles down the beach. The crew was not taken off, although guards stood by throughout the day. The tug carries a crew of four men.

BARGE HELPLESS IN HEAVY SEAS

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—The barge Calvot tonight was in distress in heavy seas eighteen miles east of Ambrose Light, the Independent Wireless Company reported. It was believed the Calvot's rudder was disabled.

The wireless company said it had received a message from the Belgian steamer Suevist, which left New York yesterday, saying she had sighted the Calvot flying distress signals. The Suevier tried to put out a boat to aid the Calvot but heavy seas smashed it against the side of the steamer. The Suevier said she was standing by.

A later message from the Suevier said, "Lost second officer and several men hurt." No further details were given.

EIGHT KILLED IN STORM WRECK

his commander, who by telephone and radio relayed the cry of distress to Base No. 5 in East Boston. Two cutters and two fleet destroyers slipped the leashes which held them in secure harbor and pointed keen noses into the wind.

The crews of the Highland, Peaked Hill and Race Point stations gathered on the beach with guns and breeches buoys ready, and faced the wind-swept sea, waiting for an opportunity that never came.

The blinker light stopped its signals. The men ashore hoped that meant the men at anchor were holding their own.

It was impossible to keep in sight the tiny boat tossed by the mountainous waves. At 2 a.m. she was there, apparently holding fast.

A steamer—they though it was a passenger ship—came past. The Coast Guard station signalled frantically in hope of drawing attention to the plight of the 238. The steamer went on. It may have been that her commander could not see the desperate lights on shore, or he may have held passengers' lives in trust, which he dared not risk by creeping nearer the shore.

Shortly afterward, before any rescue craft had been sighted from the shore, the 238 disappeared. The sea had snapped her anchor cables and was rushing her to destruction on the beach at High Head. There she was slammed down and rolled over, picked up and huled again and yet again. The men on shore were still helpless. The 238 broke up.

Men who saw her wreckage said that the only thing to come ashore intact was the gun which had been mounted on her foredeck. The sea soon cast back two bodies. The waiting beach patrol took them from the surf before the waves could claim them again. Through the morning the men of the Highland station still fought for foothold on the wintry beach to recover what they might.

Boatswain Jesse K. Rivenback of Oak Bluffs, who had just been transferred from the Woods Hole station, commanded the 238. With him were Raymond N. Clark of Dorchester; Cornelius Shea of Charlestown; Charles A. Freeburn of Philadelphia; Frank C. McCausland of Waterville, Me.; Joseph V. Maxim of Dorchester; Leo S. Krzyanowski and Clarence Alexander. The home addresses of the last two were not available at their base.

The 238 cost $41,000 when she was built at Greenport, L. I. Once before her engines were disabled off the cape, but after a three-day drift she was taken in tow by a cutter.

The bigger ships, which made a gallant dash from shelter in the hope of rescue, did not escape unscathed. The Palding reported back by radio that several of her boats and her small antennae had been carried away and the Jouette, another destroyer, during the night said that she had been forced to lie to while an overheated bearing was repaired.

Illness that sent him to the Chelsea Marine Hospital in Boston a few days before the CG-238 shoved off for her ill-fated voyage saved the life of Edward S. Cronin, the ninth member of the picket boat's crew.

URUGUAY FLYER LEAVES PISA

departure of Baj. Larre-Borges, the Uruguayan aviator, on his flight to South America today, fanned to fever heat the already intense interest of Italians of all classes in the progress of Commander De Pinedo, but the throngs which besieged the newspaper offices watching for bulletins from Porto Praya met only with disappointment. No word was received all day long from Santiago Island, of the Cape Verde group, whence the Italian ace hopes to hop off for Natal, Brazil, while the Air Ministry maintained complete silence.

As all three members of the Santa Maria's crew are known to be in excellent condition, and the machine in perfect shape, the absence of definite news, it is feared, may mean circumstances similar to those which foiled De Pinedo at Bolama.

The aeronautical authorities discourage any tendency to regard the coincidence of the Larre-Borges and De Pinedo flights as a race, pointing out that the intentions of the two flyers are not at all identical. Even if Commander De Pinedo were forced to remain at Porto Praya or some near-by place for a week, either through bad atmespheric conditions or difficulty in taking off, it is asserted that the success or failure of his enterprise still must be judged only after completion of the entire four-continent flight.

NICARAGUAN POLICY HIT

Borah Bewails Use of Force

Protection for Rights of Weak Nations by Strong Urged in Speech

Calls It Crime to Interfere for Sole Plan to Protect Property Rights

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—The policy of the United States toward Central and South America should not rest solely upon mahogany and oil or depend for its execution upon warships and marines, Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared here tonight in an address to the American Jewish Congress.

"There is an infinitely stronger power and a home-compelling influence in working out the proper relationship between this country and the Latin-American countries," the Idaho Senator said.

"The truth is that the great problem in international affairs at this time is the growing out of the relationship between strong nations and small or weak nations. China, Syria, Nicaragua and Mexico all present the same problem and reveal the same sinister policy.

"Are small nations' or helpless people to be deprived of their natural wealth, their governments set up and broken down, their own way name of protecting them, all in the name of protecting life and property? Or are we to adopt such methods and such means of adjusting the controversies which will inevitably arise, as will insure settlement upon the basis of justice rather than upon the basis of force?

THEY MUST ABIDE

"People who acquire property in foreign lands should at all times be willing to submit their property rights, if brought in question, either to the laws and courts of the country in which their property is situated, or at most, to arbitration.

"It ought to be regarded as a crime to defend by force and with American Marines a title or a claim for property which can not stand the inspection of an arbitrator. The American taxpayer should not be called upon to protect property or titles which the claimants are unwilling to have adjudicated according to the methods now adopted by civilized countries for the settlement of such questions.

"The time has passed when people will go to war to uphold titles which exploiters and investors are unwilling to submit to the scrutiny of judicial investigation.

"I do not believe, furthermore, when we are called upon to protect the property of our nationals that we are at liberty to disregard everything except the naked technical rights of our nationals, that we are permitted to consider nothing save the cold value of our claims.

"Property values are not all that are involved in such controversies or under such circumstances. We are bound in national honor and as a proper rule of decency to give due weight to the rights, the liberty, the independence, and the physical and moral well being of the people in whose country such property is located or which we are asked to invade.

"The narrow, sordid theory that we must have dollar for dollar, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, can never be made to fit into the right of every nation to determine for itself what it is to do and best for it to do. Substantial justice is all any nation can ask for under such circumstances.

"We should deal in justice in such controversies, and justice in such matters involves the rights and interests of the people with whom we deal as well as the rights and interest of our own nationals."

CREWS FIGHTING BORDER FLOOD

stone have been thrown on the water side of the Pescadero Dam to refill a wash which was created by the swirling murky flood. One danger which beset the dam, engineers said, is the fact that the water flows directly against the face of the structure on its southward journey and is then, thrown sharply to a right angle to proceed on its course.

Pescadero Dam was htrown across the channel of the river after the disastrous flood of 1905, where the river cut through to the channel of Bee River, where it is naturally inclined to flow, but which, if released there now, would wreak havoc over thousands of acres of land. Yesterday the river was within five feet of the top of the dam.

The general belief here now is that the Gila and Williams rivers failed to combine their flood with the natural rise of the Colorado to form a dangerous high mark. However, if that opinion proves true, the farmers and ranchers agree that the present menacing situation is an ample illustration of the tremendous possibilities for havoc should conditions prove unfavorable when the melting snow caps on the distant mountain peaks rush irresistibly toward the sea in the annual flood tide of early summer. This is a menace which hovers over the valley like a sinster cloud, but one which could be dispelled by prompt action which Congress, through petitions addressed by well informed organizations and individuals to Senators Johnson and Shortridge, and Representative Swing, could bring into effect by the adoption of an emergency flood control appropriation before adjournment on March 4.

CHINESE BEAUTIES TO STRUT IN STYLE SHOW

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Ten of the most attractive Chinese girls in Northern California assembled here today to participate in a colorful blending of oriental and occidental styles at a fashion show to be held here tomorrow night in connection with the "feast of the lanterns" in San Francisco's Chinatown. Sponsored by civic organizations, the stylists will be under the direction of Carlos Sebastian, producer of several dress shows in eastern cities.

FLOOD RECEDING

Flood conditions on the Sacramento River are controlled, according to reports from cities along that stream. Levees are broken through in several places, but the river is receding in volume and no further damage is expected.

The Pacific Ocean, outside the Golden Gate, is unusually rough, it is reported by incoming mariners. Adding to the difficulties a heavy fog set in tonight in the district off the Farralon Islands, known as the heads, and ships are proceeding with utmost caution. Incessant buffeting by winds and waves has broken the danger buoy off Point Bonita from its moorings and it is adrift in the ocean somewhere.

Forecaster Reed said tonight that the outlook is for unsettled weather tomorrow, with probable rains.

DISTURBANCE AT END IN SOUTHLAND

Following a day of intermittent sunshine and clouds Col. H. B. Hersey of the United States Weather Bureau last night predicted partly cloudy weather today and tomorrow, with no more storms expected in Southern California in the immediate future.

Moderate temperatures will prevail, according to Col. Hersey's report, and gentle northeasterly winds are expected. Weather observers stated that the storm which swept the Southland last week is ended definitely and no more violent rainstorms are anticipated.

Yesterday streams and arroyos, which a few days ago were running brim full with storm waters, were reported rapidly receding and on every hand crews of workmen were rushing repairs to bridges and highways.

From farming districts throughout Southern California reports indicated that the heavy rainfall will more than make up for the damage to homes, highways and bridges by the bountiful crops which it assured.

OREGON GETTING TORRENTIAL RAINS

PORTLAND (Or.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Torrential rains throughout Western Oregon last night and today brought reports of flood conditions, which threaten to become serious if the rain does not cease soon. Marshfield, Or., reported three inches of rainfall within the last twenty-four hours, with the downpour continuing, while Medford, Ashland, Cottage Grove, Eugene, Albany and Salem were facing high water in the Willamette River and tributary streams.

Traffic on the Southern Pacific south was reported interrupted near Medford and Ashland by washouts.

Special dispatches to the Oregonian stated that with all Southern Oregon streams on a rampage from heavy rains and melting snow, Grants Pass has been cut off from railroad and highway communication with other parts of the State. No trains had arrived there since noon and none is expected until late tomorrow. Highway travel in every direction has been closed.

The Rogue, Applegate and Illinois rivers have reached the highest stage for more than twenty-five years and their waters were still rising late tonight. Reports from Prospect, Or., indicated that the Rogue would not reach its high point for many hours. It was rising at the rate of a foot an hour.

A Southern Pacific bridge at Tolo has gone out and the track is covered with water for several miles. Between Medford and Ashland, the track also was washed out. All travel through the Cow Creek Canyon is impossible with that stream at the highest stage in its history. Southern Pacific trains 11 and 15, northbound, were turned back at Fork.

The walk across the top of Savage Rapids Dam near Grants Pass was taken off by the water early this afternoon. There has been no damage to the dam but the upper end of the structure is covered with water. The amount of water there has not been estimated.

The Rogue River is the highest since 1902. Farmers living near the junction of the Rogue and Illinois rivers were forced to transfer personal effects to higher ground.

STORM RENEWED IN NORTHERN COUNTIES

REDDING, Feb. 20. (AP)—Heavy rain from the south renewed the storm in California's northern counties tonight, and train and highway travel were tangled. Railroad tracks were flooded by swollen streams and numerous downpours. Bridges on both sides of the Sacramento River were suspended their substructures, and trains were marooned while detours and trips between valley towns and Southern Pacific points were made. Reports from Red Bluff, Chico, Gerber and White River and announced that Shasta Limited trains would be delayed by seven hours at least.

The Southern Pacific sent a special stub train tonight, it is said, to take care of stranded passengers. The special train left the city at 8:30 o'clock, a train delayed by No. 18, a train delayed by No. 18, a train delayed by No. 18 through the Cow Creek Canyon was impossible with that stream at the highest stage in its history. Southern Pacific trains 11 and 15, southbound, were turned back at Bieber Fork.

The walk across the top of the Savage Rapids Dam near Grant's Pass was taken off by the water early this afternoon. There has been no damage to the dam but the deluge of rain has broken the canals in the district at numerous points. All ditches were running full.

The Applegate Valley was completely inundated this afternoon by the highest water since 1894, according to old residents. The low lands were covered with many feet of water. The amount of damage there has not been estimated.

The Rogue River is the highest since 1902. Farmers living below the junction of the Rogue and Applegate were forced to transfer possessions to higher ground.

STORM RENEWED IN NORTHERN COUNTIES

REDDING, Feb. 20. (AP)—Wind and rain from the south renewed the storm in California's northern counties tonight, and train and highway travel were impeded. Redding's streets were flooded by an almost continuous downpour. Stages on both sides of the Sacramento Valley suspended their schedules, and travelers were marooned while attempting trips between valley towns. The Southern Pacific reported landslides at Hilt, Cal., and White Point, Or., and announced that Shasta limited trains would be delayed by several hours at least.

The Southern Pacific made up a special stub train tonight at Weed to take care of southbound travel. The special train took the schedule of No. 15, a train delayed in the north.

Snow fell at all the higher altitudes and telephone and telegraph lines suffered heavily north and south of here. Between Red Bluff and Sacramento eight miles of wires were down, and officials said it would be several days before full communication was re-established at all points. Emergency crews have been summoned, and San Francisco was said to have sent out men in trucks with equipment for repair work.

RAINS CUT DOWN MOUNTAIN SNOW COVER

RENO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Drenching rains on the Sierras today served to cut down the snow cover and make imminent a heavy run-off. The depth at Summit Station, above Truckee, dropped from 126 inches to 110, and at Lake Tahoe from fifty to forty-four inches. Mountain streams are at flood stage.

SENATE TO RESUME DEBATE ON BOULDER DAM TODAY

Smoot Threatens to Displace Bill With Prohibition Measure, but Backers Still Hopeful

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—While simulating a feverish activity with prolonged day and night sessions, Congress is in a position to quit within twenty-four hours if the need should arise. As a consequence the ten legislative days remaining before the gavels fall at noon March 4 will be given over to driving through a flock of pet measures of individual members with some consideration given to several major measures, but without much likelihood of final votes.

During its daylight hours tomorrow, the Senate will resume debate on the Boulder Canyon dam bill, which faces a filibuster by the Senators from Arizona, Utah and Nevada.

When the night lights begin to burn, the Senate will take up the House bill authorizing the Veterans' Bureau to make loans to World War veterans on their adjusted-compensation certificates and if that is disposed of the alien property-return bill will become the order of business.

COOLIDGE TO SPEAK

Tuesday both houses will do honor to the memory of Washington with a joint session at which President Coolidge will speak and Tuesday night the Senate will meet again to consider private pension claims and other measures to which there may be no objection by any individual Senator.

The program after Tuesday remains to be made up, but Senator Smoot, Republican, of Utah, has given notice that he will move to displace the Boulder Canyon dam bill with the prohibition and customs reorganization measure. There also may be one or two additional night sessions to take care of some of the 214 subjects on the calendar, which will be forced over Tuesday night.

The House will devote Monday and Wednesday to bills on the calendar and Thursday and Friday it will perfect and send to the Senate the last of the necessary supply bills. A second deficiency to take care of the excess of appropriations by the government departments over the amount Congress allowed them for this fiscal year.

Tuesday will be prohibition day in the House in all probability, as the leaders now plan to call up Representative Hawley's bill providing for the manufacture of medicinal whisky under government supervision.

RIVER FRIENDS HOPEFUL

Friends of the Boulder Canyon dam bill still are hopeful that the Rules Committee will unsaddle the Swing-Johnson bill and propose a rule under which the House could express itself at this session on this long-sought legislation.

Efforts will be made in both Houses to force Muscle Shoals once more into the Congressional picture, but there remains little doubt that this will be one of many problems which the Sixty-ninth Congress will bequeath to the Seventieth Congress.

The battle between the Senate and the House over authorizing the immediate construction of three more of the scout cruisers which Congress provided for in 1924 may be settled during the week with the House taking a separate vote to determine whether there has been any change of sentiment since it refused to approve the cruiser proposal.

SENATE COMMITTEE TO REOPEN FUNDS QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Inquiries into the Pennsylvania and Illinois Senatorial primaries will be reopened tomorrow by the Senate Campaign Funds Committee in order to give recalcitrant witnesses another opportunity to answer questions.

The witnesses are Samuel Insull, Chicago public utilities operator; Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney of Cook county; Daniel J. Schuyler, Chicago attorney for Insull, and Thomas W. Cunningham of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Republican Committee.

During the visit of the committee to Chicago last summer, Insull, Crowe and Schuyler refused to answer any questions relating to contributions to an expenditure by the Crowe-Barrett or regular Republican organization of Cook county.

Cunningham declined to disclose the source of $50,000 which he contributed to the campaign fund of Senator-elect Vare, whose right to a Senate seat now is contested by his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson.

Should these witnesses persist in their refusal to answer questions, the committee unquestionably will certify the fact to the Senate for such action as that body may deem necessary.

Decision to recall the witnesses and give them another opportunity to testify instead of reporting them directly to the Senate was made by the committee because since their first appearance the Supreme Court has determined the question of the right of the Senate to compel the attendance of witnesses before its committee.

WALSH BILL WOULD MAKE TESTIFYING COMPULSORY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. (AP)—Witnesses could no longer fall back on their constitutional rights in refusing to testify before Federal grand juries or courts under a bill introduced by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Should a witness hold that his testimony would tend to incriminate him he would be not excused from testifying, but there could be no criminal prosecution of him afterward as a result of such testimony.

EFFECT TO CALL UP LONGSHOREMEN BILL FAILS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—An effort to call up the Longshoremen's bill providing a workmen's compensation law for several classes of maritime employees failed in the House when a group of opponents forced adjournment.

DRY BILLS WILL LOOM IN BOTH HOUSES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) Prohibition measures will figure prominently in controversies in both houses during the remaining days of the Congressional session.

The medicinal-whisky bill reported from the Ways and Means Committee is scheduled for action in the House early this week.

A determined drive is in prospect on the Senate side to force action on the bill creating a separate prohibition bureau in the Treasury Department.

Debates on the general subject of prohibition which will be precipitated may prevent the enactment of either or both of the bills. Both bills have the support of the drys, but a few opponents by resorting to filibustering tactics may keep them from reaching the statute books.

PASSAGE SEEMS LIKELY

Passage of the medicinal-whisky bill in the House is considered likely. There seems little chance, however, of its being reported from the Senate Finance Committee in time to obtain sufficient consideration to insure final action in the Senate.

The bill is approved by the Treasury Department as an acceptable substitute for the original proposal of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews for the creation of a medicinal-spirits corporation. The Ways and Means Committee rejected the first bill, but decided that the granting of some additional authority to the Treasury Department to deal with the medicinal-whisky situation was desirable.

The Treasury under the pending bill would be authorized to concentrate existing whisky stocks and to designate not fewer than two nor more than six distilleries to manufacture supplies needed in the future. Control over prices is also given to the Treasury.

Both retail and wholesale drug interests are opposing the bill. The retailers object to various provisions, including a requirement that the price which they pay to the distillers shall be printed on a label on each bottle.

The wholesalers are up in arms because the bill requires direct distribution by distillers to retailers.

WETS BLOCK ACTION

The Treasury reorganization bill was passed by the House last spring and has been pending on the Senate calendar since that time. Thus far action has been blocked by a few wet Senators, some of whom have now withdrawn their opposition and it may be possible to bring the bill to a vote.

The bill creates a bureau of prohibition separate from the Internal Revenue Bureau of which the present prohibition unit is a part. It also creates a customs bureau.

Roy Haynes, who still holds the title of Prohibition Commissioner, although he has exercised but little power since Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews took charge of prohibition enforcement, has been lobbying among Senators for the reorganization bill. It is understood that he hopes to be appointed prohibition commissioner if the pending bill is enacted into law. James E. Jones is now director of prohibition and in immediate charge of administrative affairs of the prohibition unit. The pending bill creates a prohibition commissioner, an assistant commissioner and two deputy commissioners.

LA FOLLETTE CALLED MAN FOR PEOPLE

Memory of Late Senator Honored in Speeches at Services in House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Robert Marion La Follette was described as a man for the people in memorial services for the late Wisconsin Senator today in the House, where a score of his friends from half a dozen States and all parties eulogized his "practical idealism" and his readiness to fight in the people's interest.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin presided and addresses were made by Representatives Nelson, Browne, Schneider, Schafer, Beck, Peavy, Berger, Lambert, Voight and Frear, all of Wisconsin, and Rathbone, Illinois; Laguardia, New York; Howard, Nebraska; Kvale, Minnesota; Sinclair, North Dakota, and Huddleston of Alabama.

The late Wisconsin Senator's son, Robert M. La Follette, Jr., attended the services.

Representative Nelson pictured La Follette as "a faithful friend, a political leader and an immortal counsellor," while Representative Rathbone said his whole life had been given over to a long, hard and sometimes discouraging battle for the "welfare of the common people."

"He was a practical idealist, a commonsense reformer and a man of the people," Rathbone said.

Insurgents Not Unit on Coming Back Into Fold

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Republican insurgents in the House are divided as to whether they should attend the Republican caucus tomorrow night at which the party organization for the next Congress will be perfected.

All of them have received invitations to attend, although they have been barred from party councils for supporting the La Follette Presidential movement in 1924.

Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, generally recognized as head of the group, said he will attend, while Representative Schneider of Wisconsin recently announced that he would not. Other members of the insurgent bloc have not indicated what course they will pursue.

ONE DIES IN GAS WELL BLAST AND FOUR HURT

HENRIETTA (Okla.) Feb. 20. (AP)—William Spurgeon was killed and four other men were seriously injured in an explosion at a gas well on an oil lease nine miles west of here today. The men were members of the drilling crew. The explosion came when the flow of gas from the well was ignited from exhaust of a gas engine.

ARMS PARLEY MOVE DELAYED

Japan Sets June as Earliest Conference Date

Tokio Acceptance Complies With Forecast

Speculation Rife on Nature of Italy's Reply

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Prospects of an early action by President Coolidge in connection with his proposal for a supplemental naval conference at Geneva were further removed today, due to the fact that Japan, in accepting the suggestion, set June as the earliest date by which her delegates could be prepared to proceed with negotiations.

The Japanese acceptance, made public very early today under the arrangement of the Tokio government, complied closely with forecasts of the Japanese attitude as made in the Parliament at Tokio. Due to this advance notice the Japanese intimation that the Tokio government would not accept the 5-5-3 capital ship ratio of the Washington treaty to be applied rigidly in any tonnage limitation agreement for auxiliary craft which might be reached at Geneva, came as no surprise.

The Japanese communication still is to be studied by Secretary Kellogg and his advisers, and it is anticipated that Mr. Kellogg will issue a formal statement as he did in connection with the French rejection of the American plan. It has been indicated at the White House, however, that President Coolidge will defer any comment until the British and Italian replies also have been received.

Japanese acceptance presumably leaves the door open for consideration of a three-power understanding should the British accept as had been indicated unofficially in London.

In some quarters there was a tendency to speculate on the reason for Italy's delay in transmitting an unfavorable reply which an official statement in Rome early last week said would reach Washington before the end of the week. It has not come, and some observers believed it possible that the Rome government has decided to redraft its answer in view of the French reply. Whether this would amount only to a change in form or would involve an alteration of the Italian attitude on the conference proposal itself, these observers would not predict.

PARIS DISMAYED AT JAPAN'S ACCEPTANCE

PARIS, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The reports that Japan has accepted President Coolidge's proposals for a naval disarmament conference at Geneva are causing dismay in Quai D'Orsay, which is awaiting feverishly Italy's reply.

The French government believed that Tokio would demand that Great Britain abandon the Singapore naval base, and the United States dismantle the Hawaiian forts as the price for accepting, and Rome reports state that Premier Mussolini certainly will reject the American suggestion for further limitations of the Italian fleet.

It is realized here that France would be put in an unenviable light if it was the sole power refusing to accept the invitation to the conference, and the sole champion of the submarine.

JAPANESE PRESS APPROVES ACCEPTANCE

TOKIO, Feb. 21. (Monday) (AP)—The morning newspapers gave prominent positions today to Japan's reply to the American naval conference proposal.

The Chugai Shogyo suggests that the Miyako Shumbun, the only journals to editorialize on the note, expressed satisfaction with it and a hope that France, despite its rejection, will come into the conference. The Chugai Srogyo suggests that America, having nothing to fear from other powers, ought to set an example by reducing armaments to the minimum.

The Jiji Shimpo printed expressions from leading statesmen, from which it appears that the government's attitude is approved unanimously.

NOT ON TOUR TO GUM-SHOE SAYS HILLES

Ex-Party Chairman on Way Here Denies He Acts for President

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Charles D. Hilles of New York, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, took the first opportunity after alighting from a train in Chicago today to deny that he was on a political mission for President Coolidge.

Mr. Hilles, now a vice-chairman of his national party organization, expressed an opinion that the story of his errand—to sound public sentiment on the prohibition issue and the question of another term for President Coolidge—had originated out of the air.

"Really," he said, "I have been trying for a long time to get clear enough of politics to take a vacation. That is what this is. I stopped off in Chicago between trains, and I shall go directly to Los Angeles, where I hope to rest about three weeks."

Mr. Hilles devoted more time to getting information from his interviewer than in imparting it. He wanted to know about the Lowden sentiment in these parts and the feeling hereabouts toward Vice-President Dawes.

MRS. M'PHERSON CREATES FUROR

Rafters Ring With Shouts at New York Meeting

Charges Devil Plotted Her Ruin With Scandal

Tabernacle Overflows With Cheering Multitude

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson told the story of her life in the Glad Tidings Tabernacle this afternoon—an engaging narrative punctuated with many hallelujahs and resplendent with her own physical and spiritual abundance. The first chapter of her spiritual history she likened unto that of Samuel. Her mother had prayed for a baby girl to preach the Gospel.

The second chapter dealt with her conversion at 17 years of age by an evangelist—"such a beautiful man, six feet two and with dark curly hair." Later he returned and proposed to her.

"I said, 'Yes' to God and I said 'Yes' to Robert," Mrs. McPherson announced in her most joyous intonation.

This was Robert Semple, the evangelist who died in China two years later, a month before her daughter, Roberta, was born. Then came a few blank pages covering the period of her second marriage and the evangelist made a bold plunge into the tempestuous waters of the last few months.

RANS OPERATORS

"I have always been interested in radio," she exclaimed. "I have been interested in my radio audience, in the antennae, the receiving sets and the amplifiers, but I have never, never been interested in radio operators."

Shouts of approval swept in a tidal wave around her swaying figure. She bowed and smiled and waved her arms as the crowds overflowing in the aisles and even up the pulpit steps. No names were mentioned, but every adult in the tabernacle knew that Mrs. McPherson was disowning Kenneth Ormiston, the radio operator whose name was linked with hers in a conspiracy charge in California growing out of her tale of kidnaping by Mexican bandits.

She likened the case that had been built against her to the Tower of Babel—a tower built on a foundation of lies, deceit and the word of a jealous woman. Then God came down to look at the tower and flipped His finger and pouf! what was left? Nothing but greater magnificence for Mrs. McPherson and her followers!

This is her own way of putting it.

RAFTERS RING

And after her chummy reference to God's intervention her hearers jumped to their feet. The rafters rang with hallelujahs. Men flung out their arms toward her and women sobbed into their handkerchiefs. They called on heaven to witness the vindication of their idol. There was no quieting them.

Mrs. McPherson's lips parted in her most effulgent smile. She waved her crimson roses and her voice dripped honey as she gave thanks to heaven that so many New Yorkers believed in her. It was an orgy of emotionalism from the pulpit and the floor—a triumph for the magnetism of the evangelist from Los Angeles. It took time for the uproar to subside.

Mrs. McPherson insisted that the case against her was hatched by the devil at a conference in hell. He wondered what he could do to hamper her work. She was saving too many souls. She gave her idea of what she thought the devil had to say about her.

"Just touch her with the breath of scandal and she'll be done," his satanic majesty whispered into the ears of her enemies. "That will stop her revival. The whole thing is built on that woman's personality. Her work will be wrecked because it's her." Thus spoke the devil.

"Well, glory to God, his plans came to naught," Mrs. McPherson exclaimed.

WOMEN CARRY COAL TO VESSEL

West Indian Natives at Queer Vocation

Serving as Pack Humans

ST. THOMAS (Virgin Islands) Feb. 20. (AP)—Stolid women, clad in knee-length skirts of burlap and with pads of sacking on their heads, have an important part in the coaling of vessels in the harbor of St. Thomas.

When the whistle of an incoming steamer screeches into the hills—the signal that it is putting in for coal—they gather at the docks and, for 2 cents a basket, haul coal on top of their heads from the big piles into the hold of the vessel. Carrying such burdens develops in many of the women an unusually graceful poise, although it produces minor deformities in some of the weaker ones.

Due to lack of a steady, nourishing diet, however, the natives are unable to work with the vigor of the white man. Their low wages, therefore, do not result in much, if any, saving for the ship owners when compared with the higher pay given stronger and more efficient workers at other coaling ports.

RAINS UNCOVER OLD MAYA CITY

Remains of Town Four Miles Long Found in Mexico

Ancient Structures Antedate Ruins in Yucatan

(Copyright, 1927, by Chicago Tribune.)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Recent floods have washed up an ancient Maya city four miles in length, stretching along the banks of a stream near Tixmucuil, in the State of Campeche. For unknown years the rains have been gradually laying bare the ancient city, which lies among the foothills, but last fall the floods assumed unusual proportions, covering great districts of Campeche, once the home of the ancient Maya tribe and probably earlier civilized races, leaving exposed numerous tall pyramids whose sides are covered with carefully cut stone blocks.

Between these pyramids can now be traced great streets of highways of an ancient city. In numerous places the stream is crossed by magnificently constructed stone bridges, probably built while Rome was in the height of its glory. Along the river are long stone-faced terraces and on the plain below the site of the ancient metropolis are vast quantities of cut stones, washed out of the city by floods in the course of from fifteen to twenty centuries.

The ancient Maya hieroglyphics on the stone pillars show that the city belonged to the early Maya period in Southern Mexico and Central America and therefore long antedates the great Toltec Maya city of Chitchen Itza, now being unearthed by the Carnegie Institute under the direction of Sylvester G. Morley. The newly discovered city lies in the great Campeche archeological era which tradition says was in the early days of Maya city building, and was the scene of wonderful activity. It is reported that within twenty miles of the new city are a score of city regions comprising numerous buried mounds and pyramids as yet unexplored.

A prominent archeological connected with the government archeological activities said today:

"In campeche lie vast cities which were flourishing a thousand years before the Mayas began city building in Yucatan. When the Carnegie Institute finishes the work at Chitchen Itza there still will be a completely new archeological world to conquer in Campeche."

CAPS LIVING DOWN UNSAVORY REPUTATION AMONG PARISIANS

PARIS, Feb. 20. (AP)—The cap, insignia of the "tough" and the Apache in France for many years, is living down its bad reputation.

The cap, in Paris, is becoming the universal head covering for those interested in sports. People in automobiles more often than not wear caps, but usually they carry hats for use when they get out of their cars.

In the provinces the cap is still looked at askance by the conservative generations.

The opprobrium of the cap dates back many years. There still are dance-halls in Paris where there are signs: "Persons wearing caps not admitted."

The cap, it might be said, is proper when the person wearing it is proper. Young men of doubtful pedigrees, picked up by the police still are described in newspapers as "wearing caps," which is an indication of how the French in general still regard what they consider an altogether too negligee top-piece.

Cap-makers, nevertheless, insist there are 2,000,000 caps in France, which is one for every fifth person. Certainly a count of people in the streets wouldn't show one person in twenty wearing a cap.

Keeping that Schoolgirl Complexion

Beware of using any but true complexion soap on face

THE modern way to beauty starts with skin cleanliness; with never letting powder, rouge or make-up remain on your skin over night. That means careful washing with soap and water regularly.

But be sure you use only a true complexion soap for that purpose. Be sure it is a beauty soap.

Before Palmolive Soap was perfected, women were told "use no soap on your faces." Soaps then were judged too harsh. This soap creation largely changed the skin care of the world.

Made of true cosmetic oils, made Palmolive is the purest beauty soap in the world today for complexion use. In Paris it is a favorite planting domestic soaps.

For true skin beauty, use today. Cleanse the skin with balmy olive and palm oils particularly, and particularly every night.

Do that for one week and much better your skin. Only 10c a cake. Take care that you get the genuine Palmolive. Countless imitations. The Palmolive Peet Co., Chicago, U.S.A.

Border Farming Empire Planned by Capitalists

TUCSON (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Opening of a new agricultural empire along the Colorado River on the Sonora border with an initial outlay of at least $1,000,000, was announced by James C. Cleary, New York attorney, who represents a group of capitalists headed by Frank H. Hitchcock, former Postmaster-General.

Other visitors interested in the colonization plan were A. F. Andrade of Yuma, Henry Clay Mount of New York, and Ernesto Camou, attorney of Hermosillo, Son.

"The tract we plan to develop will constitute an important gateway into Arizona from the Gulf of California," Cleary said.

ILLNESS HALTS COMEBACK PLAN

Boston Receiving Offer for Maloney Struggle

Considers Boston Star Good Title Contender

Jack Dempsey, the well-known ex-champion, is undecided, completely at entirely, about his forthcoming plans. The former king of all the known heavyweights made this plain yesterday on remarking that he had not been advised of a proposed outdoor battle between himself and Jim Maloney, said bout to be staged early this summer at the Yankee Stadium, New York, under the kindly and guiding hand of Tex Rickard.

"My plans are indefinite," Dempsey said. "I have been so sick that I haven't been able to consider the matter. Perhaps in two or three months, when I have fully recovered, I will be able to state whether I will continue boxing or retire."

The so-called Manassa Mauler recently was confined to his bed for more than a week due to an attack of blood poisoning in his left arm. He is up and around, now, however, and plans to go ahead with a proposed training grind. He will be unable to do any boxing, due to the comparative weakness of his left hand, but plans to stick to his road work.

To boost "Boston Strong Boy," Dempsey, Mr. Maloney whose savvy count to all and sundry portions of the anatomy of one Ovila Demers, who is known to all heavyweights as Jack Delaney, champion, brought him into a new and more lustrous spotlight in the heavyweight division, is more or less entirely unknown to our Mr. Dempsey. "I don't know anything about Delaney, except through the reports of the fight," said the ex-champion, "but I consider him one of the leading contenders for the heavyweight crown. After his win over Jack Delaney in New York Friday night there is no doubt of that."

Dempsey was extremely reticent regarding the proposed bout which Tex Rickard, the former Alaskan miner, is reported to be shouting about. "I'll not go for a few days yet, and see if my throat illness has seriously affected my health. Then if I feel all right I'll talk with Rickard and see what he has to offer."

Haynes Pilots Newport Hydro to New Record

NEWPORT BEACH (Fla.) Feb. 20. (AP)—The Hallicrafters, piloted by Dick Haynes, Long Beach, Cal., captured the first heats of the 151-cubic-inch hydroplane-type speed boats in the races events today in the opening of the Pilot Beach Yacht Club's annual regatta on Lake Worth.

The California established a new record for the five-mile course in travelling almost eighteen miles an hour during the greater part of the race. In the first heat the boat was clocked at 7m. 22 2-5s., and in the second heat at 7m. flat.

The expected clash between Gar Wood, ace sportsman, at the helm of the Hi, and W. J. Conners, Buffalo (N. Y.) publisher, at the helm of the Conners II failed to materialize. Mr. Wood gave an exhibition of his super-express cruiser, covering the course in 9m. 41s.

PIRATE SAILS OFF WITH SERIES

Ace Here From North for Trophy Races

BY EDWARD LAWRENCE

ANYONE who has ever seen a whippet flash down the track intent on its master several hundred yards away, or a thoroughbred horse prance eagerly before the barrier, could have seen the same qualities in the sweet sailing R-sloop Pirate as she slipped through five miles of blue Pacific Ocean off San Pedro yesterday afternoon to win the eighth and deciding race of the first midwinter racing series ever held in North American waters.

Responding to every demand of her smart young skipper, Tommy Lee, who took full advantage of every favorable bit of stray breeze, the Pirate romped over the course a winner by a good five minutes over Owen P. Churchill's Galliano IV, skippered by L. F. (Ted) Geary of Seattle, and by eleven minutes over Al Christie's Heather, which was completely outclassed in the light and freaky winds. The Pirate and her crew were "right" for the race and the combination was unbeatable, although the Galliano gave her a race until the Pirate caught an advantageous slant which carried her out in front to stay.

ACE ARRIVES

Interest in things Corinthian now center on the Don Lee trophy series Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Arthur Rousseau's famous Ace, the champion of San Francisco Bay, arrived yesterday and will receive her first trial probably on Wednesday afternoon, when the R-sloop skippers plan a tune-up spin over the course. Commodore Owen Churchill of the Skippers' Club said yesterday that the three San Diego R's, Aloha, Angela and Canuk, would be here for the races. The Alert III, last year's Southern California champion, is down from Santa Barbara. Ben Weston has the Debra out on the ways, and she will be ready for the series. Besides the sloops mentioned, Churchill's Galliano IV, "Pier" Davis's Patricia, Tommy Lee's Pirate, and Al Christie's Heather, are entered, which makes the series an outstanding event of the year.

Geary, who designed the Pirate, also created the Galliano IV. He is working on Churchill's new craft to

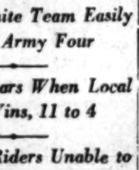
CAVALRY POLO PLAYERS LOSE

Midwick White Team Easily Defeats Army Four

McCarthy Stars When Local Squad Wins, 11 to 4

San Mateo Riders Unable to Show for Contest

Four army horsemen of the Tenth Cavalry from Fort Huachuch, Arizona, who substituted at the last minute for the veteran, Hugh Drury, and his San Mateo polo team at the Midwick Country Club yesterday afternoon proved easy victims for Teddy Miller's White Midwick squad. The Midwick players with Neil McCarthy playing the star role simply toyed with the cavalrymen, defeating them in an easy fashion by an 11-to-4 score after spotting the visitors two of the goals. Drury's team was unable to show for the contest due to the illness of Kenneth Walsh, No. 1 man of the San Mateo outfit, who was taken down with the flue on Friday night.



TEDDY MILLER

The Cavalry players agreed to substitute at the last moment, although their horses were not in the best of shape. Miller's team rode rings around the Army players throughout the afternoon, while a fair sized crowd yawned through the eight chukkers. Although the army players displayed fairly good horsemanship they were sadly lacking at the knack of hitting a polo ball. Neil McCarthy of the Midwick forces offered what there was in the way of excitement with his riding and hitting of the ball. McCarthy scored four goals during the game.

Teddy Miller, who is ranked as one of the best players on the coast, was big hearted enough to play under wraps in order to give the Army players a chance to make a showing but it didn't work very well as the Cavalrymen did not seem able to take advantage of it. Wrightsman and McCarthy played as though they had at one time suffered under some fresh shavetail lieutenant in the Army. They rode the Cavalry players all over the field, making life miserable for them by taking the ball from under their noses at every turn. Wrightsman scored three goals, while on his riding spree, Miller couldn't help accounting for three more and Jack Holt's pony saw to it that the motion-picture rider got credit for a tally. Holt played an exceptional good defensive game throughout the afternoon.

The Army players were unable to add to their handicap allowance until the seventh chukker when Capt. Taylor walloped the ball across the Midwick goal line. This so surprised the crowd in the bleachers who were playing tiddle-de-winks that it came near breaking up their game.

In the last chukker Maj. Foster of the Army team made another goal for the Army team, while the Midwick players were counting the house.

HAGEN WINS OVER SARAZEN BY THREE UP IN THIRTY-SIX HOLE EXHIBITION GOLF MATCH

MIAMI (Fla.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Walter Hagen, national professional golf champion, won three up in the thirty-six holes of the seventy-two-hole match with Gene Sarazen in the first half of their match played here today.

Walter Hagen

GENE SARAZEN

Eighteen holes of the remaining 36 will be played Friday at Sanford, the match being finished Sunday at Pasadena, Fla.

Three up at the fifth hole of the morning round with the aid of birdie threes on the third and fourth and a bad slice by Hagen on the fifth, Sarazen saw the honors evened when the ninth hole had been reached. From that time on it was see-saw position and the morning round of eighteen holes ended with the match all square.

Sarazen found the sand trap on his second, a wood shot approaching the ninth hole, but got out nicely, the ball going two feet from the pin. Hagen, who was on the green in three overran the cup, and it seemed that Sarazen would finish the morning one up on the champion. Sarazen, however, muffed the putt and Hagen holed out on his next. This halved the hole.

On the seventh hole of the afternoon round after Sarazen's approach carried within seven feet of the green, Hagen, whose ball lay slightly to the left of the green, holed out with a fifteen-yard putt and took the hole. An orderly gallery followed the two professionals.

HANSEN, PAULINO HOOK UP

Rival Heavyweights in New York Bout Friday Night

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—The last of the foreign heavyweight threats—Paulino Uscudun of Spain—will bid for a place among the husky-elect of Tex Rickard's heavyweight elimination tournament in Madison Square Garden next Friday night. The basque wood-chopper of the Pyrenes has drawn Knute Hansen, Wisconsin blond, for his testing clash as a possible challenger for Gene Tunney's championship laurels next September.

TEX RICKARD

Uscudun has yet to be tried in competition with first-class American heavyweights, although he scored knockout victories over Martin O'Grady, Homer Smith and the Cuban champion Ferro in his three tune-up engagements. Hansen already has performed a minor elimination by disposing of Monte Munn, the larupping Nebraskan, in the early stages of the tournament.

Although Rickard hopes to discover in the broad shouldered Spaniard another terrific puncher of the Luis Firpo mold, the way of the winner of Friday's bout is clouded with doubt as to future matches in the series. A definitely outstanding performance will gain the victor the possibility of a match with the conqueror in the Jack Sharkey-Mike McTigue melee scheduled for March 3.

POOR JUDGMENT LOSES ASCOT FEATURE RACE FOR WINFIELD

Poor judgment as to the number of laps covered cost Ed Winfield first place in the fifty-mile feature race at the Ascot ark yesterday. Instead of gaining first honors nd first money, Winfield was forced to accept third place, while Lou Moore nd Bert Spencer finished one-two.

ED WINFIELD

Winfield led the field in a terrific battle with a lot of challengers. Thinking he had nearly a two-lap lead on his rivals, he slowed down during the final lap, and both Moore and Spencer blazed by him to take the checkered flag first, and second. Winfield, however, according to officials, had only a fraction of a lap lead, and consequently was defeated when the two cars passed him. The time was 46:19.2.

SEEK REMATCH

Winfield naturally protested, and the arguments after the race equaled the feature event itself for heat and intensity, but the official ruling stood. The proper thing for Promoters Lutz and MacDougall now would be to present a match race between the three drivers at fifty laps, with a winner-take-all.

The race was marked by one serious accident, which resulted in serious injury to Ray Armstrong, driving a Frontenac owned by J. H. Thiel. Losing control of his car on the stretch turn, he shot through a gate, plunged down an embankment, and piled up under the grandstand.

He was rushed to the General Hospital, where it was said that his injuries consisted in a possible fracture of the skull, a broken left arm, possible internal injuries, and bad cuts and bruises. He lives at 123 A street, San Bernardino. H. L. Olewise, a police officer stationed close to the site of the accident, saved himself from death or serious injury, by leaping into the air as the car hurtled toward him. He suffered severe lacerations and bruises on his legs.

Moore and Spencer staged a great battle behind Winfield all during the contest, Spencer was piloting the Redlands special, owned by Ed Meyers, Jr., which was wrecked a month ago when Harry Jacques went through the fence. Meyers announced himself anxious to take on Winfield and Moore any time in a match race.

McLarnin and Cello Finish Work for Bout

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (AP)—In a flashing workout today, Tommy Cello, San Francisco lightweight, completed training for his ten-round feature bout with Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver B. C., next Tuesday afternoon. The San Francisco boy previously had planned to take things easy today but switched to an eight-round boxing program. Meanwhile, McLarnin confined his efforts to gymnasium routine.

For the first time in many years, betting odds fail to favor one of the principals of an outstanding bout. Even money is quoted on the outcome.

McLarnin and Cello are around the 133-pound mark for which each has posted a $500 forfeit guarantee.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb 20. (AP) The Olympic Club soccer team retained its lead in the San Francisco Soccer League by defeating the Thistles, 3 to 0, today. Other results were: Burns, 3; Sons of St. George, 3; Italia Virtus, 1; Teutonia, 1; Barbariana, 4; Sportiva, 1.

RESUME HORSE RACING AT TIA JUANA NEXT SUNDAY

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Horse racing at the Tia Juana track probably will be resumed next Sunday, officials of the Tia Juana Jockey Club announced today. Crippled transportation lines and highways are rapidly being repaired after the severe storm.

The oval itself was not damaged seriously by the torrential downpours. For the past three days horses have been working out on the track.

The Tia Juana Oaks, $5000 purse, scheduled for today, probably will be held next Sunday.

CUB UNIES ON WAY HERE

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—The Catalina gesture has been made by the Chicago Cubs. More than a ton of paraphernalia for ball playing tonight is on its way to the Pacific island training camp of the club, to be ready when the Cubs themselves report for kink removal next Monday.

Twenty-four Cubs will leave Chicago Thursday afternoon—two days ahead of the White Sox who train at Shreveport, La. When the complete roster is assembled, however, there will be at least fifty players assembled at the training camp.

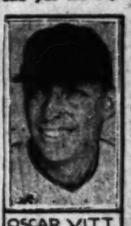
ANGEL REGULARS REPORT TO SKIPPER MARTY KRUG

Cherub Batterymen, Rookies Joined by Vets at Wrigley Field; Vitt Gathers Stars at Hollywood

BY BOB RAY

Messrs. Martin Luther Krug and Oscar Vitt, respective managers of the Los Angeles Angels and the Hollywood Stars, will become busy men again this afternoon after having enjoyed a winter of leisure. In case you don't know, the reason for their resumption of activities is that spring training gets under way in full blast today for both the Angels and the Stars from Flickerville.

Mr. Krug will gather his Seraphic flock in the confines of Wrigley Field and put the boys to work so that they may be in shape for the opening gong of the coming campaign. Marty had the Angel batterymen and rookies playing catch out in the auto park of Messrs. Weber, Belchow and Stull last week when it didn't rain, so the only new additions at today's workout will be the regular infielders and outfielders, as well as those chuckers who failed to arrive for the play-catch performances.



OSCAR VITT

Down at Santa Monica Oscar Vitt will gather probably about thirty Stars around him, outfit them with unies, toss out a few bats and balls and let them go to it. The Stars at present have about thirty-five men on their payroll and most of them are expected to report today and get in on a flock of eats at H. William Lane's expense.

The Hollywood club originally planned to train at Gilmore Field in Hollywood as last year but the recent rains left the diamond in such bad shape that Santa Monica was selected instead. The Stars will work at the Santa Monica ball park, Twentieth and Colorado streets.

Several players blew in last night, among them hurlers Bob Cantrell, James Hansen, George Hollerson and John Joseph Molloy.

Roy Leslie also showed up. Leslie's arrival was one of the tragedies of baseball. Roy lives in Bailey, Tex., and he made the trip here via auto, driving through all the recent storms. Arriving here, he discovered that in the meantime he had been sold to the San Antonio Club. Telegrams sent by Hollywood officials to Leslie's home

SHEIKS GET SLAPPED IN GRID SCRAP

Sons of St. George Eleven Upsets H.A.C. Soccerites at Loyola Field

The Hollywood Sheiks met their masters yesterday. In a hard-played rousing game they went down to defeat of the year, 3 to 2, before the aspiring Sons of St. George at Loyola Field. Over 3000 fans saw the game and they were treated to a brilliant display of association football.

The Sons were the first to score, Harold Brown getting across a perfect corner kick, which crossed the line without being played. Shepard followed the ball through in order to make sure, but his effort was not necessary.

Hollywood came right back and equalized. This goal also had its inception in a corner, taken by Jimmie Elder, Collier sagging the net. Both goals came late in the first half and the period ended without further scoring.

With the resumption of play, the Sons began to dominate the exchanges and took the lead when Pearson broke through on an error by Walker. Racing down the field, Pearson dribbled to within shooting distance and then sent in a pile driver, which Rankow was helpless to save.

This advantage was held by the Sons for fifteen minutes with Hollywood trying valiantly to get on even terms. Their chance came when Parkinson put Collier in possession close in and the latter headed through.

Thus the teams stood, each bat-

Bruins Meet Whittier in Championship Basketball Game at Olympic Tomorrow Night

San Diego	5	4	.556
Pomona	3	4	.429
Redlands	1	6	.143
La Verne	1	6	.143
Caltech	0	6	.000

Games Tomorrow
Bruins vs. Whittier at Olympic.

Games Saturday
Bruins at Whittier.
Pomona at Occidental.
Caltech at Redlands.

Tomorrow night at the Olympic Auditorium basketball teams representing U.C.L.A. and Whittier clash in the first of two games to decide the Southern Conference championship. The tilt is billed for 8:15 o'clock, the Bruin Babes playing a preliminary encounter with the Bakersfield Junior College tossers. Saturday night the Ponta entertain the Bruins at Whittier.

LEO CALLAND

It is no new thing — these two teams tangling for the title. They've been doing it now for the past four years. In 1924 Whittier won after a terrific battle. The Bruins came back and thumped their rivals in 1925 and then repeated the performance last season. So the year of our Lord, 1927, finds the old court foes at it again.

As in previous years the Bruins are slight favorites to win, Caddy Works's athletes seem to have a wee bit of an edge on their rivals but it certainly isn't enough to get cheesy about—if the Bruins had any inclination to do so, which they haven't. They know Whittier too well for that.

In Saturday night's game with Pomona, U.C.L.A. had an easy time, winning, 42 to 16. The Poets, in the meantime, were trimming Occidental, 39 to 12. The other two conference games saw San Diego upset Redlands, 36 to 13, and La Verne defeat Caltech, 27 to 22.

Leo Calland's Whittier team has not had its full strength in the field throughout the entire season and as a result the Poets have not rolled up the impressive scores credited to the Bruins. Capt. Tom Denhey, out with football injuries, only recently returned to the game. There is no denying that his presence means a lot to the Quakers and with him in there Calland's team will be hard to beat.

The Bruins have had comparatively easy sailing in all their games and also bumped Stanford off twice. The Poets, on the other hand, almost lost to Redlands, squeezing out a 21-to-20 victory when Bob McWhirter, subforward, shot two field goals in the last three minutes of play.

Whittier, with the sensational Bill Buckadorf at one forward berth, excels at a long-shot game. Denney, and Clem Reece, last year's captain, are liable to loop one through the net from midfloor any time. Jack Ketchum is by far the best long-shot artist on the Bruin squad. Milo Young contributes a lengthy toss now and then.

CHANGING THE SCENES IN BASEBALL

GEORGE MORIARITY DID A QUICK CHANGE ACT

BY BRIAN BELL

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—If any baseball fan followed the example of Rip Van Winkle and fell asleep on the closing day of the 1926 season he has a rude shock awaiting him. He will need a guide when he sits up to take notice on the opening day of the 1927 season.

No one who has failed to read the papers during this winter of managerial discontent will recognize many of the major-league clubs by their players when the new season gets under way.

Eight of the sixteen managers have been displaced and the overturn in playing talent has been on a correspondingly active basis. Even the umpires have felt the blast.

If George Moriarity was Rip's favorite umpire this well be the first shock, for George, the song writer, has doffed the umptrical blue to don the gray of Detroit, where he is perched in the driver's seat. Promotion of McCallister from coach to manager at Cleveland and the conferring of the title of manager, along with catcher for Schalk in the Chicago White Sox camp, will be other revelations.

If Rip wants to know what has become of Cobb, Collins and Speaker, all managers when he went to sleep, he will have to look to the Athletics and Washington, Ty and Eddie joining Connie Mack, while Tris was moving to the Senators to lead Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris a hand.

The major-league fan who has been dreaming of pennant fights will recognize the new St. Louis Browns' manager, for Dan Howley was once a Detroit coach, but he will have to look among the coaches for two former managers. Art Fletcher, late of Philadelphia, now with the Yankees, and Bill McKechnie, taking up as Cardinal coach where he left off as Pittsburgh manager.

A search among Pittsburgh players for McInnis will be useless, for Stuffy is master minding with the Phillies.

The great shock for the baseball enthusiast coming up for air will be his first glimpse of the New York Giants. He will see Rogers Hornsby at second base, Eddie Roush and George Harper in the outfield and Burleigh Grimes pitching.

Frisch will be missing, but may be found at St. Louis, along with Ring. John Scott will be warming up to pitch in Philadelphia.

Rip will think he has waked up ten years back when he sees Bill Carrigan directing the play of the Boston Red Sox and although he will recognize Donie Bush, managing Pittsburgh, he never saw him before in a National League uniform.

He will rub his eyes when he glimpses Enoch Wheat in the colors of the Athletics and may decide that he is seeing things when he finds Aaron Ward and Roger Peckinpaugh, last together with the Yankees, on display in White Sox uniforms.

Expecting to see Marty McManus with the Browns, this baseball Enoch Arden will find him with Detroit and O'Rourke and Mullin gone to St. Louis. Henline, with Brooklyn, will be no greater shock than George Kelly with Cincinnati.

He will wonder again when he finds the "B" on Jacques Fournier's shirt stands for Boston and not Brooklyn.

A peep into the Yankee dugout will not show the face of Sad Sam Jones, but he may be found doing his smiling with the Browns. This will account for how Durst and Giard got in there with Miller Huggins.

Rip will think that Joe Harris has lost his way when he finds him at Pittsburgh, but will know that Washington did not leave him there two years ago.

A call on Bill Killefer and Otto Williams will be useless when the Cardinals are in St. Louis, but Rip can see them both if he waits until the Browns come home.

FAVOR BEARS IN CAGE TILT

California Five Expected to Defeat Stanford

Second Game of Big Series Set for Saturday

Winner Will Represent South in Conference Race

BERKELEY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The second contest of the California-Stanford "big series" to determine the representative of the Southern half of the Pacific Coast Conference in the circuit championship series with the winner of the northern division will be played Saturday evening in the Stanford University gymnasium.

California, on the strength of its showing against the Palo Alto quintet last Friday night at the Oakland Auditorium, will enter the game a heavy favorite to win, although the margin of victory may not be a great one.

Should the Stanfordites put across an unexpected win, the third and final game would be played in the San Francisco Auditorium, where seating accommodations would be rearranged for the event. Starters in the Oakland Auditorium are still quivering with the tremendous five-minutes ovation tendered George Dixon, California's all-Coast guard, when he left the contest Friday evening with four personal fouls. Dixon played a superb game at guard. As the calmest player on the floor, he served as the key man of the California attack, and defense. His guarding, interception of passes, and head work were the marvels of the contest. Capt. Fran Watson also rose to his greatest heights to earn 12 points and chase the Reds to cover repeatedly.

If California should defeat Stanford Saturday evening, the win would give the Bears their thirty-second victory in thirty-nine games, and the fourteenth "big series" of sixteen since 1913, when basketball relations were first introduced.

Civic Leaders to Cavort on Oakmont Links

The Co-operative Club, comprising some 125 prominent business and professional men in the city, is to be entertained by Milliech William Downs, president of the Alta Canyada Corporation, at the Oakmont Country Club on Thursday.

Oakmont is one of the few courses that it was possible to play on immediately after the recent heavy rains.

Robert S. Weaver, president, is well known as president of the Weaver-Mason Company, and president of the Pacific Coast Association of the A.A.U. Ervin Widney, trust counsel of the Security Trust and Savings Bank is vice-president.

Superior Judge Arthur Keeteh, Judge Frederick W. Houser of the Appellate Court, Horace W. Cutler, William Gibbs McAdoo, now taking an active part in welfare work as president of the Abraham Lincoln Home for Boys; John B. Elliott, vice-president of the Jameson Petroleum Company; Pierson Hall, City Councilman; Underscherff Eugene Ditmallun, George Mjelte, superintendent of playgrounds and recreation; Fred Rodina, president of the Club Internationale of Ensenada; J. W. Spradling, president of the California Lands Club, are prominent members of the co-operative organization.

The Los Angeles Co-operative Club, organized in 1922, is a live bunch of forward-looking men and a very active agency for good in the community.

Young Wills Starts Work for Tendler

Young Harry Wills will begin training today at the Manhattan gym for his ten-round bout at Vernon on March 8. Wills knocked out Jimmy Duffy at Oakland last week with a right cross.

C. L. Sivils, manager of Wills, says that Wills came near ruining the whole Duffy family by that knockout.

"Mrs. Duffy, who sat close to the ringside, fainted when her good-looking husband took the count," says Sivils. "It took longer to bring her to than it did Jimmy. They worked over her for fifteen minutes before she regained consciousness. It took five minutes to rally Duffy after he was hit."

Wills is still under 21 years old. He has had about sixty-five fights, thirty-five of which have ended in knockouts.

TIGERS TO TRY OUT FOR A.A.U. CARNIVAL

With the Amateur Athletic Union track carnival slated for the Los Angeles Coliseum Saturday afternoon, Coach Joe Pipal, veteran Occidental track mentor, will stage the Oxy tryouts on Patterson Field tomorrow afternoon.

Of course, the Tiger instructor has his entries lined up already after the Tigers' victory over the Redlands Bulldogs last Saturday at Patterson Field, for the leader witnessed his athletes in action. Capt. Irvin Tanner and Atward Scovell, hurdler and distance runner, respectively, are two sure Bengal entries. Harold Webb is sure to enter the weight events for Oxy, but the remaining entries are guess work to date.

BALTIMORE MAN WINS WAY TO SQUASH FINAL

DETROIT, Feb. 20. (AP)—Two straight-game victories today won for Laurence Balliere of Baltimore the right to face W. Palmer Dixon, New York, national champion, in the quarter finals of the national squash-rackets championship tomorrow.

Balliere overcame C. Sewell Clack, Philadelphia, semifinalist last year, and Mortimer Newhall of Toledo, who had defeated Magee Wyckoff of Buffalo. Dixon defeated W. F. Greening of Canada in straight games.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE SPORTSMAN-STRANGLER, BILL HENRY

THE track and field prospects of the Southern California Conference don't look like anything to write home about after the results of Saturday's meets. Of course there are quite a few bright spots in which individual performers shone brightly but the all-around strength seems to be sadly missing. As time goes on the situation as to the probable winner doesn't seem to clear up very much. Caltech has the strongest nucleus of veterans with Pomona second, the Bruins third and Occidental fourth. The chances are that Pomona and the Bruins have more all-around strength than the Engineers however, and that tells heavily in a dual meet. Coach Stanton at Caltech doesn't have to take a back seat to anybody in the matter of making the best possible use of his material and he's likely to fool all of the boys.

At the present moment the outstanding performers of the conference look like Schultz of Caltech in the sprints, Darling of Caltech in the quarter, and Scovell of Oxy in the middle distances, Skinner of Oxy looks good in the low hurdles and there seems to be a sort of a toss-up in all of the field events with no particular outstanding stars except the Caltech javelin throwers. The absence of the seasoned performers on most of the teams makes it difficult to predict the outcome of the average meet because the youngsters may star one Saturday and fall down miserably the next, all of which is very disconcerting to the coaches.

It looks very much to yours truly as though the prize fight woes of the year had been handed by Dick Donald in the Ace Hudkins-Bert Colima fight. There we have a couple of the biggest individual drawing cards that ever did their stuff in a local ring, both tossed in together. If Colima doesn't get scared to death we'll see Hudkins against the hardest hitter he has ever faced but a lot of folks will be willing to gamble that the Mexican wilts before the relentless attack of the Nebraska whirlwind. Our own guess is that Dick will have a hard time proving that he didn't make and money on this battle—most of the community will be out to see it.

One of the country's most widely read sport writers connected with an eastern paper seems to have confirmed himself again as the world's worst picker of winners, not even barring Dan Cortesi. He spent columns and columns of valuable space trying to convince folks that Eddie Huffman could fight, thereby costing the folks who believed him a good many thousands of dollars when they were silly enough to bet, and now his latest sensation, Jack Delaney, seems to have been equally thoroughly exploded. All of which once more proves that just because you are a marvelous writer you don't necessarily know the good ones from the punks, in the fight game, particularly.

SERAPH STARS OPEN TRAINING

Jim Bailey naturally didn't reach the former Star first sacker as he was bowling along en route to Los Angeles.

There will probably be more doing over at Wrigley Field because the Angel hurlers, who have put in about four days of arm exercise, will be able to throw over a few for any and all who might care to take part in batting practice.

The only Angels not expected in camp today are Art Weis and Dick Cox, both outfielders. Weis will be detained in St. Louis until Friday, while Cox is still busy playing for the Shell Oils against the Royal Giants in the playoff for the Winter League championship. Neither are holdouts.

Among those liable to be missing at the Hollywood gathering of Stars are Augustus "Lefty" Johns and "Cotton" Tierney. Johns, a southpaw hurler, will not be turned over to Hollywood until he gets a chance to show his worth to Manager Moriarty in the Detroit camp. Tierney, a third-sacker, is on his way here from Kansas City and may or may not get here.

Among the new Hollywood players who will be out are John Anderson, outfielder purchased from Louisville; Denny Murphy, catcher secured from the Missions, and Jimmy McDowell, first-sacker from the Monks.

Dudley Lee, Johnny Kerr, Chuck Gooch, Johnny Frederick, Les Sheehan, Leo Cook, Frank Shellenback, Hank Hulvey, Curtis Fullerton and a number of other Stars are present and accounted for, so it is presumed that they will report today.

BILLIARDS

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP) — Jake Schaffer, world champion at 18.1 balk-line billiards, scored a convincing triumph over Willie Hoppe, 18.2 title-holder, in a 3000-point 18.1 exhibition match that ended here last night. Scheffer won eight of the ten blocks played during the past week for a final score of 3000 to 2223.

After running out the ninth block in seven innings for a score of 300 to 249 this afternoon, Scheffer clicked off the last 300 caroms tonight while Hoppe counted 353. The match, billed for the "supremacy of 18.1 balk-line" but without the title at stake, produced little exciting play with Schaffer maintaining a sizeable lead from the start.

California Players Due This Week to Meet Bruins, Pomona, Oxy and U.S.C.

BERKELEY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Four ranking tennis players of the University of California, accompanied by Manager Claude Mackenzie, will invade Southern California this week for a series of four matches with that region's strongest net teams in collegiate institutions.

The first match will afford the Bruins of the University of California at Los Angeles an opportunity to redeem their decisive defeat on the local courts a short time ago. This match will be on Wednesday.

Occidental, Pomona and the University of Southern California are to be encountered in that order on their respective courts on successive days. Since only four players are to make the trip, the schedule looks on paper as a rather hefty one.

With the eligibility of Johnny Risso still in the air, the battle for listing with the "first four" teamlisers is waging merrily between Rimo, Bradshaw Harrison, Capt. Tom Stow, Andy Burks and the Hoags brothers, Al and Dick, who have come up the ladder tournament with a rush the past weeks.

It is considered more than probable that both Harrison and Capt. Stow will make the trip, but as to the others, they are no more certain of inhaling the Southland's sweet ozone than the boss is sure to soften his hardened heart to the extent of an unexpected rise in the weekly stipend.

SHEIKS BEATEN IN SOCCER TILT

tling doggedly to get the lead until within seven minutes of time. At this stage, Rankow, Hollywood goalie, pulled a boner by leaving his charge and permitting Chester a free shot at goal. Brown covered the goal but his clearance went to Sheperd who bulged the net for the winning counter.

Sons showed better stamina than did their opponents and this factor had much to do with their success. Their defense, however, was practically perfect. Southern covered himself with glory in the first half when the Sheiks were at their best. Chester and Wallace were redoubtable in backfield, while Chester was brilliant at center half. Due to Chester's great playing, Parkinson was well marked and seldom allowed unimpeded shots at goal.

The Hollywood forward line failed to impress, although this was due in large measure to the brilliant tackling and defensive playing of the Sons.

The defeat virtually puts Hollywood out of the running as a contender for league honors. Hollywood must now beat the club, and the leaders would also have to taste an additional defeat in order to give the Sheiks the right of a play-off for the honor.

In celebration of the victory, the Sons of St. George Soccer Club will be hosts to its players at a whist drive and dance tonight in the Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, on Figueroa street. The affair will be started at 7 p.m. and all soccer fans are invited.

Scots defeated Long Beach, 2 to 0, in the preliminary game.

BEAR BOXERS COMING FOR H.A.C. RINGFEST

The University of California's crack boxing team is coming south to engage the boxing team of the Hollywood Athletic Club Thursday night in a seven-bout program.

One boy by the name of Tom Elliott will make things interesting for his opponent Thursday night if the dope runs true to form. Elliott is the Pacific Coast amateur heavyweight champion and will perform before the members of the Hollywood Athletic Club for the first time. He will be anxious to show them how he won over Harry Beum in the finals of the Pacific Coast championships and his opponent is going to take a sleep, make no mistake about that.

DEL MONTE DOWNS MIDWICK QUARTET

DEL MONTE, Feb. 20.—Del Monte today defeated Midwick Country Club in one of the hardest fought polo games the West has ever seen by a score of 10 to 6. Midwick was out to win. Eric Pedley was going at top speed and the entire Midwick aggregation was functioning as a team and looked good. But Del Monte was too strong. Too strong in spite of the fact that the Del Monte leader, Harry Bast, was severely injured in the fourth chukkur, and a substitute was selected to attempt to fill his shoes. The British players, Wing Commander F. E. Wise and Capt. Selby McCreery, gave the crowds a thousand thrills in their wonderful defensive and offensive play. Bast was playing his finest when in the fourth period he spilled while riding the $10,000 beauty, Piredy, and had to be removed to the Del Monte Hotel, where he was placed under the care of a physician. Harry Hunt was never out of position and played most creditable polo. Wise, McCreery and other Del Monte players, seemed to take delight in boxing and riding off the two noted Midwick stars, Elmer Boeseke of Santa Barbara, and Eric Pedley of Pasadena. Following the accident, which took Bast from the game, Fred Foe, late of the Monterey Cardinals, substituted, and took up the burden of making life miserable for Boeseke. Strange as it may seem, even after Bast was taken from the game, Del Monte showed to better light than did Midwick.

Carleton Burke and Pedley were playing fine polo and Boesch was going well. Boeseke was missing, partly because the Del Monte players were riding him hard and partly because he was simply a butt of his hitting.

TRAPSHOOTING

DEL MONTE, Feb. 20.—Fred Bedesen of Merced packed into Del Monte late last night and early this morning packed out to the Del Monte Gun Club to win the first annual Grand Hotel Del Monte handicap with a score of 97x100 birds from 21 yards.

Vic Fuller was second in this event, breaking 94x100 targets from 21 yards.

Mrs. Gus Knight of San Bernardino was high lady, shooting from 20 yards and breaking 88x100 targets.

Fred C. Vertress of Denver surprised the fifty shooters here for this tournament by leading the entire field of amateurs with a total of 757 targets out of the 800 thrown. Len Hawkhurst was high professional on the same number of targets with 748 kills out of 800 chances. Gus Broker of Ogden, Utah, won the doubles with 92x100 birds, and B. Gillespie of Los Angeles was second with 91x100. Fred Vertress of Denver was third with 98x100.

Los Angeles won the team race with the following scores: Loured, 469; B. A. Gillespie, 462, and M. C. Somers, 466, giving a total of 1397x1500. Washington was second, Oregon third and Del Monte fourth.

lap affair, went to Francis Quinn, who piloted his Raja special to a sensational victory. Bill Spence and Winfield were battling for the lead, when Quinn suddenly shot out of the last turn, ran high on the track and flashed across the line in front. Spence took second honors. "Red" Grange presented the coveted trophy to the winner. Time was :32.8.

The second event, a four-lap race staged in place of the scheduled motorcycle race, went to Bert Spencer in the Redlands special, after he and E. W. Church, in a kind special, had finished in a dead heat. Church led during the extra-lap event until the last turn, when he skidded, and Spencer zoomed home in front. The time was :32.2.

The twenty-five-lap consolation fell to Mel Kneelley, driving Harry Schmidt's Frontenic-Ford. Kneelley took the lead at the first lap, and held it to the end, winning in 14:18.2. Fred Loynes and Earnest Trippett staged a lusty battle for second honors, Loynes getting the verdict.

Barney Klopter, driving No. 24, led for the first quarter of the feature event, but his car caught fire, and he was forced from the race. He burned his right hand, but otherwise was unharmed. Several other minor accidents considerably enlivened the program, which was by far the best yet staged by Luis and MacDougall.

The results:

Ballot, fastest dash, one lap—Won by Frisch Baldwin (Rain Special); Bill Spence, second; Ed Winfield, third. Time—:32.8.

Four laps, motorcycle event—Won by Bert Spencer (Redlands Special); E. W. Church, second; Lloyd Elliott, third. Time, :32.1. (Extra lap, Spencer, Church, established dead heat for second position. Re-run—Won by Mel Kneelley (Frontenac-Ford); Fred Loynes, second; Ernest Trippett, third. Time, 14:18.2.

Twenty-five laps, 20 miles—Won by Lee Moore (Fox-McDowell special); Bert Spencer, second; Ed Winfield, third. Time, 46:39.2.

R-SLOOP RACES WON BY PIRATE

an effort to get her tuned up to a fine pitch for the series So far the Galliano has not been sailing her best, but after looking over her well-proportioned hull there is no doubt but what she will be one of the toughest sloops to beat in Southern California. At present the Galliano's sails are a bit flat for the soft winds prevailing at this time of the year and when that is remedied, she will show a keen pair of heels.

Lee's sailing of the Pirate has made him quite a favorite to cop off his father's trophy. Young Tommy began sailing the Pirate last year and since that time has won more than his share of glory on the billows. Davis's Pat is another R that likes soft weather and she will be the choice of many if the winds keep under cover.

SIR TOM OUT

In case it should blow up, the Debra and Ace will have an edge, as they sail best when the winds blow stiff. The local boys are gunning for Rousseau and his Ace, which trimmed the Southern California sloops on the bay last summer.

Geary did not bring the Sir Tom down from Seattle, but it is probable that she will be seen at Santa Barbara in August at the Pacific Coast and Southern California regattas, which will be held together. With the champions of Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco's best out after the big Lee trophy, however, the race becomes one of the most important ever held on the Coast and marks another achievement for yachting in the waters of the southwestern end of the United States.

Strong Hockey Squads Clash at Winter Garden

Oilers Confident They Will Capture Struggle

Detroit Millionaire hockey team, which, after a lengthy series of notable victories East and West, ran into its first defeat in the last Thursday night when it was bumped hard by the Richfield Oil team, is out to demonstrate that the Richfield defeat was only one of those upsets which have occurred in so many fields of sport.

The Detroit team will take the Oilers for the second time tonight at the Winter Garden and will have one supposed advantage over Thursday night, namely, it will play under what is known as the open-play system. The chief difference between this system and the National League rules, in vogue heretofore, is that not more than two men, besides the goal tender, will be allowed behind the blue line when the defending team's goal is being attacked.

"Having beaten Minneapolis, Chicago, Duluth and two Texas teams before we landed here," said Manager Mackenzie, "we want to prove that the brand of hockey we play is not inferior to that in the Los Angeles pro league. And, anyway, our team hasn't played up to form. Shappert was fairly good in the first game, but he and all the others were decidedly off in the second."

But many Los Angeles hockey fans believe that Richfield is just good enough to beat Detroit again, under any system of rules. They concede that the Millionaires are a classy outfit, especially that forward line, Sheppard, Clark and Peltier, but Richfield has undoubtedly hit its best stride and has the strongest line-up of the season.

The probable teams are:

Richfield.		Detroit.
Murray	Goal	Kydd
Newell	Defense	Rankin
Crockwell	Defense	Sheppard
Lawrence	Center	Clark
Irvin	Right wing	Peltier

WAGNER VETERAN OF SPEEDWAY

Starter in Game Twenty-nine Years

Fred Wagner

BY GASON OYLE

TWENTY-NINE years on the roaring road of racing.

And the worst that ever happened to him was getting a couple of teeth knocked out of their anchorage.

That's Fred J. Wagner, internationally known sportsman and the most colorful figure in the history of automobile racing.

Just twenty-nine years ago on a dirt track outside Chicago, a certain young man who has since immortalized himself in sport annals as "Wag," climbed over sundry fences to the center of a dust-clouded course, and then and there started his career as the original "man of many griefs," the race starter.

Just a little while before, Elwood Haynes had received the first recorded tag from a bicycle policeman for daring to drive his strange contraption, the horseless carriage, down "Rural Mile" in Chicago. When he must have been going all of eighteen miles an hour. Ladies of the packing-house aristocracy, driving their spanking pairs of horses, had complained that the fiendish device made their teams unmanageable.

GONE ON HIS WAY

But from that first race on the old Hawthorne track, in the days when Barney Oldfield gave one H. Ford the laugh when offered a partnership in his prospective automobile factory, until now, "Wag" has gone his own serene way.

Not a single great racing event in America, but has seen his wry self flashing the flags at the thrilling ging of the winning cars. The old ging of the winning cars. Vanderbilt cup races, run on that famous Long Island course when the booming cars shot away to the start in the darkness of early morning, the hazardous classics of the Santa Monica road races, old Sheepshead Bay speedway, the picturesque dashes on the historic straight-away at Daytona Beach, all these and hundreds more have seen "Wag."

When his knicker-clad figure, never without the loudest of golf stockings, waves the red flag for the start here at the famous Culver City speedway on the afternoon of March 6, starting the latest and most thrilling innovations in racing, the 91.5-inch motors he'll be just the same Wag as he has been all these years.

Tommy Milton declared a few months ago, when a crowd of racers were released after the spring stasis here, that the worst job he knew was Wag's. Once the first car is cranked before the pits and roars away in the first practice laps, down through the days and days of tuning motors and endless adjustments, the trying hours of qualifying, when he has to catch them flying by to the hundreth of a second, until the very last man has been flagged in the end of the race, and Fred J. Wagner has nothing but grief, as any of them will tell you.

IS BRIDGE FIEND

And it has been so through all these years, with the wonder of it being Wag himself. He will be the first man out of bed in the morning, pretending his usual fake grouch, and the last one between the sheets at night. He'll play you a game of golf if it was raining by the bucket, and, after thirty-six holes, be frankly puzzled why you don't want to sit up half the night playing shark bridge. He's one of the country's leading players, and a lifelong friend of Milton Work, internationally known authority.

tomorrow, in honor of Washington's Birthday.

The regular semimonthly professional sweepstakes event will be staged at Brentwood today. It will be the first big-gun competition under the supervision of Wee Willie Hunter, club pro and newly elected G.S.C.P.C.A. president. Local amateurs are invited to participate in the event.

GLASS LEADS AT PARKRIDGE

Mac Glass, 81-14-67, won first prize in the medal play sweepstakes for Parkridge members yesterday. John Lamar, 91-16-75, was second. Results in the match play event for Riverside Elks were as follows: Phil Lucius defeated C. G. Stansell, 2 and 1; A. D. White defeated W. H. Nuner, 1-up; Ray Schultz defeated C. B. Troxel, 3-up; H. G. Wilson defeated V. W. Grubbs, 5 and 4; O. R. Vanderhoof defeated Steward Barton, 4 and 3.

AMATEUR CHAMP IN TEXAS EVENT

HOUSTON (Tex.) Feb. 20. (AP)—George Von Elm, national amateur champion, paired with Jack Neville, five-time winner of the California state tournament, turned in a 3 and 2 win over Ossie Carlton, Texas amateur champion, and Howard Hughes, Los Angeles, in a best-ball match at the Houston Country Club this afternoon.

The California golfers arrived here today, and one hour after they had left the train they boarded in Los Angeles last Wednesday were making their way around the course where on Tuesday the twelfth annual Houston Country Club invitation tournament will get under way.

Hughes, a member of the club, now living in Los Angeles, paired with Carlton for the match, but the Pacific Coast players were a bit too tough, having a best ball of 67 for the 18. Von Elm, the lone member of the foursome to complete every hole, tallied a 72, just one shot over par.

Oxy Nine May Start Season on Saturday

If plans go through that are now under way, Occidental College's 1927 baseball season will open Saturday afternoon at Patterson Field. Graduate Manager Ellsworth is making efforts at lining up the Los Angeles Athletic Club for a practice game, and should this fall, he hopes to land a professional team for a contest.

With eight letter men returning even through the loss of a few stars by ineligibility and scholarship rulings, Coach Clarke has a squad that appears groomed for its third straight conference title. The old and popular reliables of the Tigers, Solly Mishkin, Bud Teachout, Les Maserot and Vic Conde, a quartet of snappy and clever diamond stars, are slated to make their last appearance under the Orange and Black this season.

FURRELL TO TACKLE JACKSON AT EL RIO

The card of bouts that is booked for El Rio American Legion Stadium Wednesday night is one of the best yet signed this year. Two six-round bouts and three preliminaries of four rounds each comprise the bill.

Benny Furrell, Filipino bantamweight, meets Vernon Jackson, colored favorite, in the final six-rounder. Both are well known to the Ventura county fans and are able to give a snappy exhibition of fisticuffs. Hard-punching Billy Clark of Long Beach will mix with Manuel Quintero of Santa Paula in the six-round semi-wind-up. A knockout is expected in this bout. Other bouts are Jack Rogers vs. Bobby Gray, 150 pounds; Ralston De Weese vs. Twain Marks, 145 pounds; Johnny Aguilar vs. Ray Valdesolo, 116 pounds. "Fearless" Johnny Schiff will referee.

CHESS

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (AP)—Resuming the remainder of the opening day's play, six masters engaged in the international chess tournament finished only one match, and that to a draw, in three games of the second round today.

Frank J. Marshall, champion of the United States, drew with Dr. Milan Vidmar of Jugo-Slavia, in seventeen moves. Jose R. Capablanca, world title-holder from Cuba, could not complete his game with Aaron Nimzowitsch of Copenhagen before the time limit expired tonight, although the champion, playing in brilliant form, had developed an almost overwhelming attack. The game between Dr. Alekhine of Paris and Rubin Reinfeld of Vienna was adjourned after forty moves with neither boasting an appreciable advantage.

Capablanca drew with Reinfeld in the only decisive game yesterday. These players, along with Marshall and Vidmar, are tied for first place in the standing, all with 2½ points. Alekhine and Nimzowitsch have each 2 points.

THOMPSON AND MEYBERG MEET IN COLLEGIATE GOLF FINALS

DEL MONTE, Feb. 20.—Stanford will face University of California at Los Angeles tomorrow afternoon in the finals of the Pacific Coast intercollegiate golf championship when Harold Thompson of the Southern California University faces Eddie Meyberg of Stanford. Today was a hectic one in this tournament. In the second round of play Bobby Syer of Stanford, defeated W. L. Shattuck, of Stanford, but lost in the semifinals to Harold Thompson of U.C.S.B. Thompson is the playing-through champion and today was close to par in both rounds.

In the lower bracket of the championship Edmonds of Stanford defeated one of the foremost players in the tournament, Johnny Gaines of Redlands, 2 and 1. Gaines shot the Pebble Beach links in 76, but even so lost to the Stanford player.

Meyberg sprang one of the real surprises of the tournament by winning from Edmond, 1 up. Meyberg is a splendid golfer, and he is playing his best golf right now. He will go into the finals practically on even terms with his rival as far as golfing ability goes. However, it is to be expected that Thompson's tournament experience will count heavily in his favor in the finals.

Today's results, first flight: Second round of play, H. D. Syer, Stanford, defeated W. L. Shattuck, Stanford, 7 and 6; Harold Thompson, U.C.S.B., defeated Amos Tuthill, U.C.S.B., 2 and 1; Edwin Meyberg, Stanford, defeated M. J. Well, Stanford, 7 and 5; Ward Edmonds, Stanford defeated John Gaines, Redlands, 2 and 1. Second flight: M. F. Hellman, California, defeated J. R. Murray, California, 6 and 4; C. M. Fox, Stanford, defeated G. E. Kerr, U.S.C., 3 and 1; Felton Turner, California, defeated W. L. Oliver, California, 2 up; L. G. Devlin, Stanford, defeated R. W. Bucker, California, 4 and 3. First flight, third round: Harold Thompson, U.S.C., defeated R. D. Syer, Stanford, 3 and 2; Edwin Meyberg, Stanford, defeated Ward Edmonds, Stanford, 1 up. Second flight, third round: M. F. Hellman, California, defeated C. M. Cox, Stanford, 6 and 4; Felton Turner, California, defeated L. G. Devlin, Stanford, twentieth hole.

KOTSONAROS CONFIDENT

George Is Sure He Will Flop Paul Jones Quickly in Mat Match at Olympic Wednesday

If confidence means anything, "Rough-house" George Kotsonaros will flop Paul Jones for two falls so hard and quick when they meet Wednesday night at the Olympic Auditorium, that the shock will be felt all the way back to Jones's home town of Houston, Tex.

"Kotsy" is training at the Manhattan gymnasium in preparation for this match which he expects to be the first step in a successful "comeback." The fiery Greek is down to 194 pounds after a week of toil which included the administering of beatings and twisted ligaments to his training partners.

"I realize that Jones is fast and clever," ejaculated "Kotsy" yesterday. "I am not underestimating this young fellow's ability. He uses that hook body scissors more effectively than I have ever seen it used. But I know I will beat him. I am confident that I am stronger than he is. I have had more experience, and when I get through roughing him he will think he has been through a threshing machine."

Jones, like Kotsonaros, has been training diligently. Paul is down to 196 pounds—minus an ounce of fat. This usually means plenty to each of them—a bout with Joe Stecher for the world's heavyweight title on March 9.

The identity of the 225-pound grappler who will meet Frank Judson in the semi-wind-up, remains a mystery to the curious ones who have unsuccessfully sought to learn the giant's name. Judson, who threw three men, all inside seventeen minutes' time, at the last show, is facing tremendous odds in weight this time. The former Harvard coach scales at 220, just sixty-five pounds less than his adversary.

Matty Matsuda is meeting Pete Wisley, the "Rochester Butcher Boy," in what should prove the toughest match the Japanese has been given here. Chris Michaels and Reginald Siki, the colored heavy, will settle an argument in a handicap match. Siki has bet $100 that he can throw Michaels in fifteen minutes.

WON'T DRESS UP

"Beetle" Juelg, Texas golfer, dresses in civits, refusing to don regulation golfing paraphernalia even when engaged in tournament competition.

Bert Colima and Hudkins Risk Fortune

Bert Colima and Ace Hudkins will have thousands of dollars at stake when they meet in the ten-round main event of Dick Donald's show at Wrigley Field in March 5.

Upon the decision depends nearly $100,000 for Colima and possibly twice that amount for Hudkins. Ace is matched to box Joe Dundee in New York the latter part of March and if he should drop the nod to the Mexican boy it is possible that the bout will be called off.

Colima is matched to box Wolcott Langford at the Olympic Auditorium on March 15 and if he "blows" the decision he may have the bout called off on him.

Donald, realizing the importance of the match, insisted that both boxers post sufficient guarantee for their appearance. Both boys put up $3000, the largest forfeit any boxers have been called upon to post since the ten-round game went into effect.

IOWA CAGERS IN TIE FOR SECOND POSITION

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—The Big Ten triumvirate of Michigan, Purdue and Wisconsin has been dethroned and tonight the conference basketball percentage table is ruled by Indiana alone.

Iowa rode into a four-way tie with Wisconsin, Michigan and Purdue for second place. Of all the ten conference teams, Illinois and Minnesota remained stationery in sixth and ninth place, respectively. Chicago, although victorious remained eighth in the list.

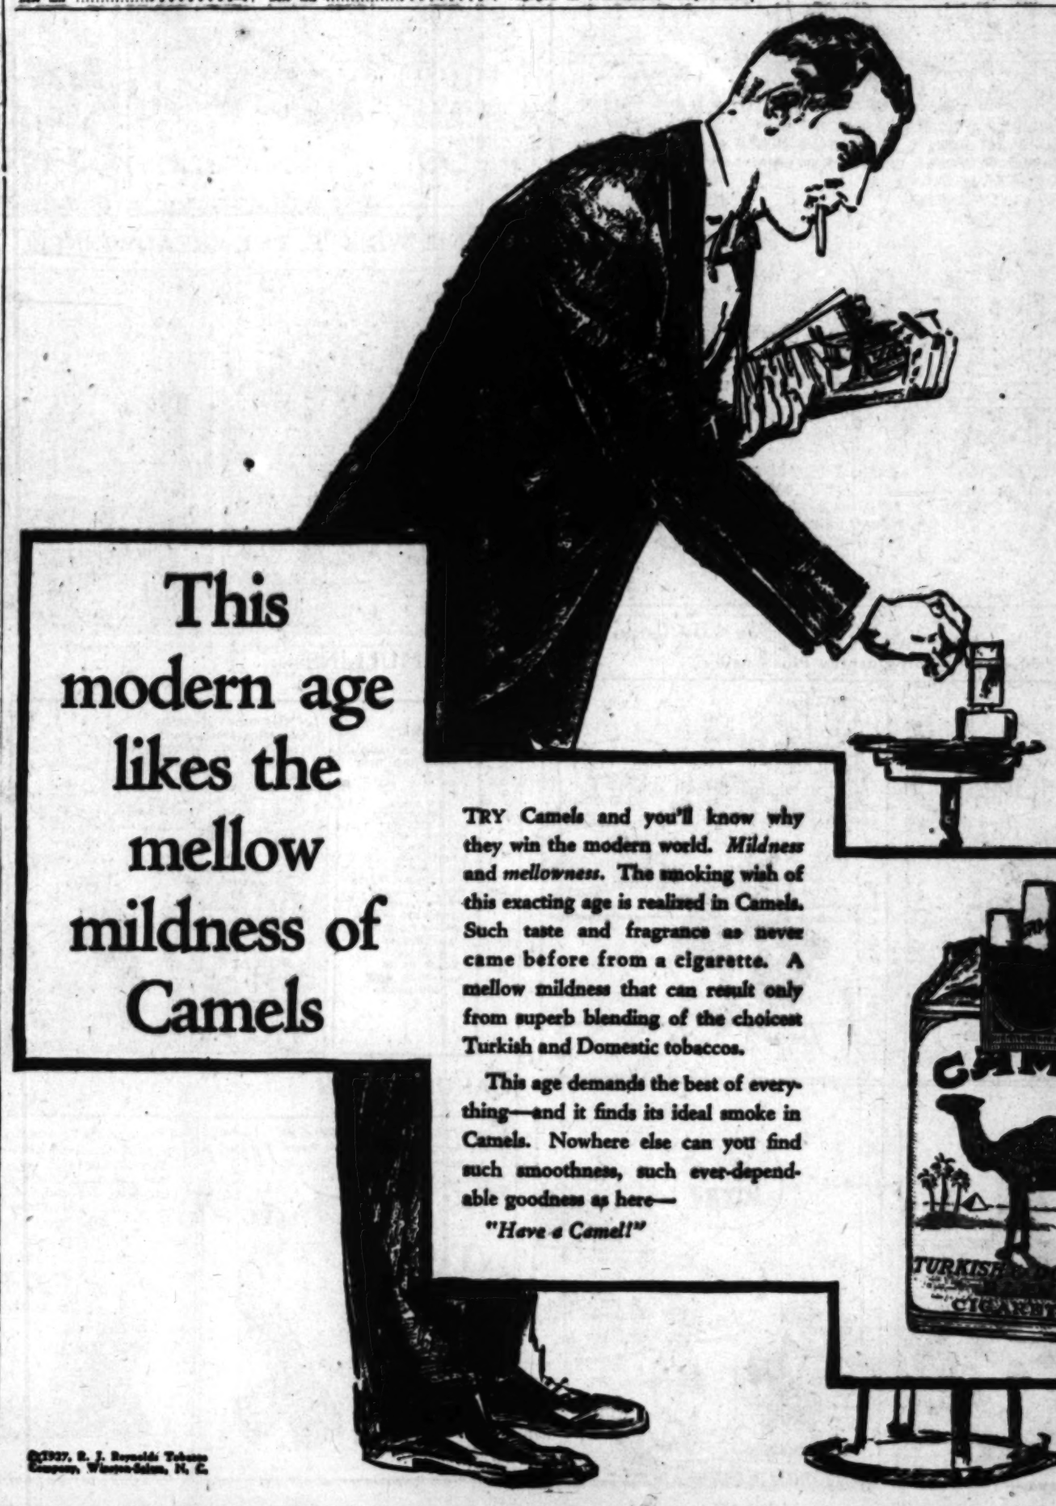
This modern age likes the mellow mildness of Camels



TRY Camels and you'll know why they win the modern world. Mildness and mellowness. The smoking wish of this exacting age is realized in Camels. Such taste and fragrance as never came before from a cigarette. A mellow mildness that can result only from superb blending of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos.

This age demands the best of everything—and it finds its ideal smoke in Camels. Nowhere else can you find such smoothness, such ever-dependable goodness as here—

Kipling Theory Given Support by Cagewomen

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP) — Kipling was just partly right when he wrote that "a woman is only a woman." He never saw two women's teams playing for the world's basketball championship.

What started out last night to be a very lazy-like affair finished in an epic of Amazons using hands, feet, knees and bodies recklessly, relentlessly in a basketball battle.

The Cleveland girls were defending their world's basketball title, and it looked almost to the last that the championship would slip from them to the Chicago Taylor Trunks, but Cleveland won, 17 to 15, though it was only after boys' rles uhad been discarded and the more strenuous regulations of men's professional basketball were substituted.

CHUCKLES from LIFE

Visitor: Of course, closing the saloons has raised your husband's standing in the community?

Mrs. Jones: On the contrary, mum. In the old days he was pointed out by everyone as the village drunk, but now you'd think he was just anybody.

An Educational Clinic

PRESIDENT ELIOT has given the following directions for educating children. Our service department has worked out the specific details.

1. Enlist the interest of every pupil in every school in his daily task. This may be done by finding out what the pupil is interested in and giving him only that to do. At the end of the term an exhibition may be held showing the work which has been accomplished, including the following exhibits: (1) Dismembered clocks; (2) snow men; (3) cores of apples eaten; (4) frogs caught; (5) little girls teased by little boys; (6) little boys' caps snatched off by little girls; (7) moderately trained dogs; (8) half-smoked cigars.

2. Cultivate every hour in every child the power to see and describe accurately. Place each child in a strait-jacket and keep him there during school hours. Blinders may also be used in cases of roving eye.

3. Make the training of the senses a prime object every day. This will be a very popular course. Laboratory work will include training in sensory stimuli, such as heavy eating, elementary drinking of light wine, grading gently into Scotch and gin, evening work at the "Follies" and general revelry.

4. Teach every child to draw, model, sing, or play a musical instrument, and read music. Those teachers whose duty it is to teach the playing of musical instruments to the entire class will be divided into fifteen-minute shifts, with a two weeks' vacation in a sanitarium between classes. A cordon of mounted police will be drawn up around the building to keep the children at their practicing.

DANCING MANIA BEGAN IN 1877

Resurrected News Dispatch Tells of Waltzing Grocery Clerk

STAMFORD (Ct.) Feb. 20. (AP) Evidence that a dancing mania fifty years ago anticipated the negro waiters in New York who Charleston to their tables, is found in a resurrected dispatch from Litchfield to the "Postal King," a weekly newspaper discontinued in 1877.

"Ask the gentlemanly clerk for a pound of sugar,' says the dispatch, "and he waltzes to the sugar barrel, whirls solemnly around to the scales, all in perfect time to the imaginary tune that is running in his head. His leisure moments are spent in prancing up and down between the two counters.

"And we hear it whispered that the usher in St. Michael's turned three times in his aisle last Sunday to show a lady a front seat."

ELECTRICITY MAY REVIVE DAYS OF '49

Engineer's Invention Will Make Old Mines Yield Profitable Income

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—California's mining camps again may take on the activity of the days of '49 if the prediction of U. N. Tainton, electrolytic engineer, representing California and South African mining interests, is any criterion. According to Tainton, here for a conference with F. W. Bradley, president of the Bunker Hill mine, largest silver mine in the world, a new electric process will enable mining men to obtain mineral from ore previously considered worthless from a production standpoint.

He declares that the invention, which permits extracting of minerals from ore with electricity, will increase profits several millions of dollars yearly.

Tainton also asserted that the invention, when perfected, probably will result in the reopening of numerous mines now considered played out and unprofitable. He said at present the invention applies only to silver and zinc, but predicted that it soon will include gold and other ores.

X-RAY USE LESSENS CHILD BIRTH DANGER

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Use of the refined X-ray has greatly lessened chances of a mishap to a prospective mother. Roentgenology will determine whether there will be twins, whether the child will be normal and whether or not a Cesarian operation will be necessary. Advance knowledge on those points, it is said, lessens the danger to the mother by fully 80 per cent.

Last Reporter of Chicago Fire Called by Death

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Michael Ahern, last surviving reporter of the famous Chicago fire of 1871, and who denied the authenticity of the story of Mrs. O'Leary's cow which was credited with kicking over a lamp in a barn and starting the fire, is dead here.

In 1921 Ahern, in writing an anniversary story of the fire, said that he and two other reporters, John English and Jim Haynie, concocted the explanation of the cow starting the fire, and admitted that he afterward learned that spontaneous combustion of hay in the O'Leary barn probably was the cause.

At the time of the fire Ahern was a police reporter for the Chicag Republican.

STORMS FORECAST BY WELL

Rush of Air Tells Oregon Rancher of Approaching Weather Disturbances From Twelve to Twenty-four Hours Before Elemental Disruption Takes Place

THE DALLES (Or.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Rheumatism has long been considered by many an accurate forecaster of weather changes, but Joe Biggles, a rancher on Juniper Flat, near here, does not have to suffer the pains of that ailment to know when to get under cover for a storm. He goes out to the ranch well and listens.

This remarkable well announces the approach of a storm by exhaling, first gently and later with a roaring draft. It begins forecasting from twelve to twenty-four hours before the storm, and continues until the elemental disturbance ceases. Then it begins inhaling, apparently filling up cavities that have been left. Sometimes during very heavy storms the outgoing draft is so violent as to throw up a mist.

Biggles's explanation of the phenomenon is that the well opens into a subterranean chamber which reaches back to the mountains on the west. The opinion of forest service men who recently investigated the natural barometer, however, is that the well cuts through a large number of air pockets in the basaltic rock, the draft being caused by varitation of above-ground air pressures.

The unpopular newspaper tax in New South Wales is being fought in court.

Romance Dies as Dredge Digs 'Pirate' Hoard

CAPE MAY (N. J.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Capt. Kidd's "buried treasure" is still safe, wherever it is cached.

A lot of sand diggers here became excited when it was reported that a chest full of silver coins dated 1686 had been found at Cape May Point.

The coins were discovered when they came through a crusher at the plant of the Cape May Sand Company, three miles from where the sand was dredged. Some other material found in the sand was believed to be bits of copper bands that bound the supposed chest.

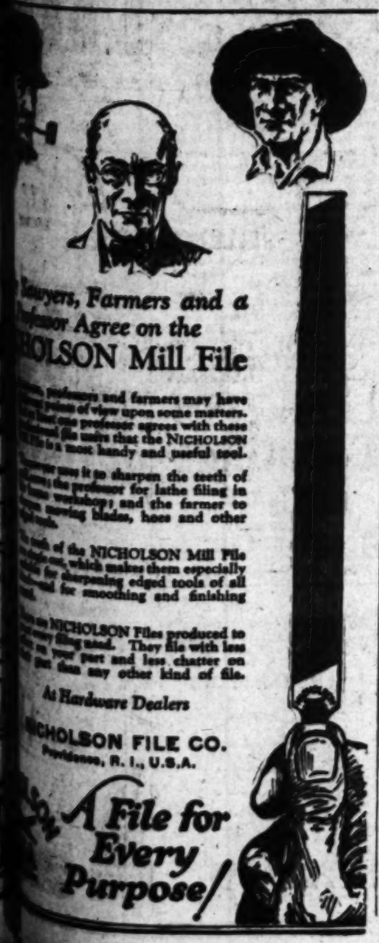
Officers of the sand company confirmed the findings of the coins, but said that none of them carried a date further back than 1887.

Bandit Menace Gains in Russia Despite Penalty

MOSCOW, Feb. 20. (AP)—Although the State punishes highway robbery with death, banditry is so prevalent throughout Russia that it has become a national menace. New outrages are reported daily.

With the sole motive of stealing an amount equal to 40c bandits in the town of Riasan, near Moscow, murdered Theodore Kunin, his wife and five children. In Tangrog bandits in a year have robbed and murdered nearly 150 peasants. It was their habit to bind the arms and legs of their victims and drag them along the road by a rope. The bodies were allowed to remain in the fields, a prey for vultures.

File User's Point of View



Lawyers, Farmers and a Professor Agree on the NICHOLSON Mill File

Lawyers, professors and farmers may have different points of view upon some matters. But one professor agrees with these three that the NICHOLSON Mill File is a most handy and useful tool.

The lawyer uses it to sharpen the teeth of his saw; the professor for lathe filing in his workshop; and the farmer to keep mowing blades, hoes and other tools sharp.

The cuts of the NICHOLSON Mill File show the coarse teeth, which makes them especially suitable for sharpening edged tools of all kinds and for smoothing and finishing metal.

All the NICHOLSON Files produced to-day are long lived. They file with less effort on your part and less chatter on the job than any other kind of file.

NEBRASKA LISTS ITS ILLITERACY

Census Report Challenged by Women's Clubs

Unofficial Survey Cuts Total Number in Half

Volunteer Inquiry Results Not Taken Seriously

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) Illiteracy statistics compiled by the Bureau of the Census have been challenged as to their accuracy, the implication being that as a nation we are not as ignorant as we have officially rated ourselves.

The only complaint heard thus far comes from one State—Nebraska—where a survey and recount were made at the instance of club women. This was initiated as a part of the nation-wide campaign which the General Federation of Women's Clubs is waging to eradicate illiteracy, the first move in the campaign being to make State surveys to determine how much illiteracy there is to eliminate.

STATE SURVEY

"The State of Nebraska has made a notable contribution to the eradication of illiteracy by making a survey of the State by counties in order to determine how correct was the count made by the Census Bureau," says the statement issued at General Federation headquarters. "A committee was appointed to make a survey with Mrs. Paul C. Perryman, president of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, as chairman. Other members of the committee were John M. Matson, State superintendent of public instruction; J. H. Beveridge, superintendent of the Omaha city schools; M. C. Lefler, superintendent of the Lincoln schools; Mrs. P. T. McGerr, representing the Parent-Teacher Association; Dr. Jenny Callfas, member of the Board of Education; Mrs. Edgar B. Penny of the Nebraska federation.

"Committees were appointed in every county composed of school officials, members of women's clubs, the American Legion and other organizations; some county officials and others chosen by these appointed members."

In thus detailing how these committees were created and their personnel, the showing is made that every precaution was taken to insure a careful survey. Accordingly, it is contended that the findings disclosed by the survey should carry great weight and that when the Census Bureau figures are challenged somebody should sit up and take notice.

And the Nebraska disclosures, as reported here in Washington, certainly give the Census Bureau a black eye:

"Lists of names of all illiterates were secured from the Census Bureau in counties in which the number did not tally with that reported by the bureau and these names were investigated. Instead of the 13,784 as listed by the Census Bureau, the actual count resulted in only 6592.

"In one county among twenty-one of those listed as illiterates were found several college graduates. In another where 110 were said to reside twenty-eight of that number were found to be educated people, some of them able to read and write in three languages. Not a single county was surveyed that did not have more on the census lists than had ever existed in the county.

"Counting all the feeble-minded in institutions, Indians, aliens and colored illiterates, the count was many thousands lower than the census report."

CENSUS BUREAU SILENT

No official notice of this attack has been taken by the Census Bureau and no formal reply has been issued. Unofficially it is stated, however, and with some vehemence, that facts have not been adduced to justify the Nebraska assault on the integrity of the bureau's statistics, but that on the contrary, the manner in which the Nebraska survey was conducted made it inevitable that it would have a far higher percentage of errors than could possibly creep into the enumeration made by the bureau.

The only chance for error in census reports is through a mistake made by the enumerator or by the clerk who punches the card on which the data gathered by the enumerators are compiled. Errors do creep in in this way, but past experience has indicated that they are on the whole few and far between.

The enumerators, even if not given a long training course, speedily learn just what information they want, how to get it, and how to record it, and furthermore they are making a business of their work. It is what they are paid for. They are not taking on the work as their contribution to a social movement and doing it at odd moments of an otherwise active life. Nor have the enumerators any personal interest or community or State pride in the showing made by their reports. Hence, according to the unofficial spokesman of the bureau, in the matter of accuracy, it is a far safer bet to back the enumerators.

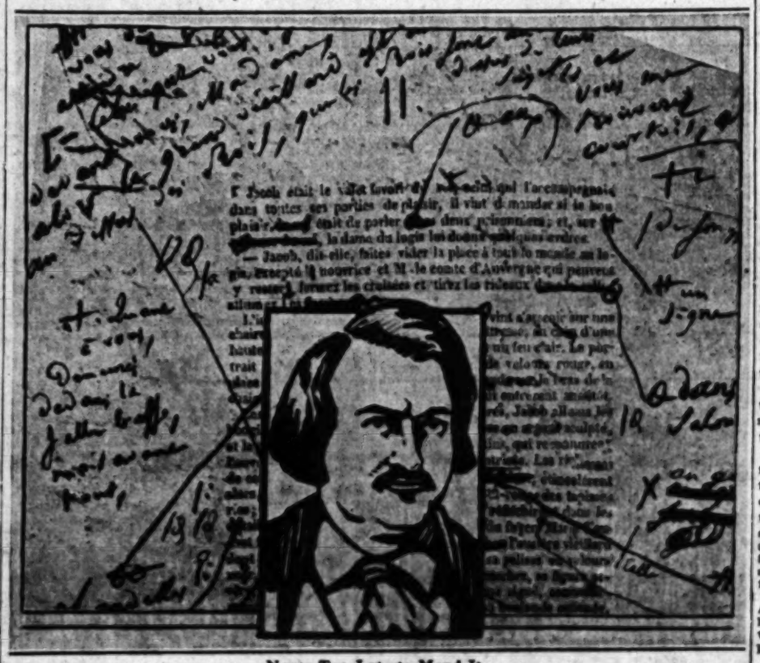
At the same time, it is pointed out, there are several perfectly sound reasons why there might be discrepancies between an enumeration of illiterates made seven years ago and a recount that has just been concluded. In any one county or community there could easily be a wide difference in the number of illiterates in 1920 and in 1927. A large percentage of the illiterates enumerated by the census takers may have died or moved away. Some of them may even have removed themselves from the illiteracy class by learning to read and write.

As to the idea that college graduates could have been listed as illiterates, it is said here that the possibility of that having happened is so remote that it is idle to answer that charge. But it is admitted that such a thing might appear to have happened through a confusion of names. For instance, there may have been only one John Jones in a community seven years ago, who was an illiterate and listed as such. Today a recount might show that again there is but one John Jones in that community, but that he is a college graduate. The obvious answer is that the first John Jones has died or removed from that community, and that the second one is not the one listed by the census.

Those who have seen the elaborate printed forms that must be filled out by the enumerators will find it difficult to believe that they can record and report very much misinformation. In fact it would appear more difficult for them to make mistakes than to be accurate. So much detailed information has to be entered on the sheets in relation to each person listed that the likelihood of confusing the data for two persons is exceedingly small. And the persons are not listed alphabetically.

BALZAC CAUSED PRINTERS' NIGHTMARE

Novelist Virtually Rewrote Volume Already in Type



Never Too Late to Mend It

Page from Balzac's proof sheets, showing that the noted novelist virtually rewrote his work after it had been set into type. The printed sheet served as a spur to Balzac's imagination, students of his work believe.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—The printer of Balzac into type had his troubles.

The University of Chicago has obtained a set of the novelist's proof sheets of part of "Sur Catherine De Medicis," and they look like a cartoonist's idea of a compositor's nightmare.

Balzac virtually rewrote his work after it had been set into type, and every proof sheet is covered with a painstaking and bewildering, scarcely legible array of marks in the novelist's hand-writing.

The printed sheet acted as a spur to his imagination, students of his work believe. He not only made typographical corrections, but erased, substituted and added to his original document. In one instance he wove four fresh pages of manuscript into the work.

The practice, it is recorded, helped considerably to impoverish both the novelist and his worried printer.

The proofs are contained in a volume as large as an atlas, presented by Balzac to a former schoolmate, Albert Marchand of Tours. It remained in Tours until it was brought to the United States by a collector in 1920.

It is a rare volume, for most of Balzac's proof sheets have been destroyed. The university acquired it largely through the generosity of Miss Shirley Farr, o fthe class of 1906.

Dog City's Hero After Rescuing Baby From Fire

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—A huge Newfoundland dog suddenly appeared on the scene of a disastrous city fire, rushed past the battling firemen into the dense smoke, issuing from the inner room of the building and reappeared shortly afterward with a semiasphyxiated baby in his jaws.

Efforts to discover the identity of the "hero dog" and identify the owner so far have been without avail. After saving the child's life the dog attached himself to one of the rescuers, who took him on a round of the newspaper offices and police and fire brigade headquarters to receive the respectful homage of the officials and enthusiastic public.

Meanwhile, a hue and cry has commenced for the discovery of the dog's owner. A movement has been started to present a gold medal to the hero dog who has succeeded in captivating public fancy to an extraordinary degree.

SAFE PRISONERS FREED

Bank Workers Herded Into Vault by Robbers, Released by Police

CLEVELAND, Feb. 20. (AP)—Seven employees and officers of the Star Elevator Company were rescued from a vault into which they were herded by robbers, when F. W. Blazy, president of the company, tapped out safe-combination numbers to police officers outside.

The three robbers had locked up the men after obtaining $650. A workman witnessed the robbery and summoned police.

Police tonight arrested the robbers and announced that a confession had been obtained and part of the money recovered.

SUICIDE TRIAL LAID TO WIFE DESERTION

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Chauncey G. Brooks, 38 years of age, a garage owner of 1107 Washington Boulevard, Venice, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide in a hotel room here this afternoon. He was found unconscious by hotel attaches after he had swallowed poison and was taken to the Central Emergency Hospital. Responding quickly to first-aid treatment, Brooks told physicians he was despondent because his wife had left him, taking their two children with her.

ACTOR CHARGES FRIEND WITH DEFRAUDING HIM

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20 (Exclusive)—"Fraud by wire" is the charge Frank McCandless, actor, made today against his former roommate, G. W. Woolin, also an actor, in a message received here from Butte, Mont., and turned over to police. McCandless said Woolin had obtained money by wire from Mrs. McCandless in Lincoln, Neb., by signing her husband's name to telegrams demanding money. He asked the telegraph company not to accept any more requests of the same nature.

STATE BREAKFASTS SIMPLE

But Invitations to White House Always Arouse Capitol's Curiosity as to Conversation Topic

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—When President Coolidge invites Senators, Congressmen and members of his Cabinet to breakfast, official Washington buzzes with question and conjecture as to the subject of discussion at the table. Farm relief, water power, tax legislation, the tariff, Mexico, China? What do they talk about?

Sometimes nothing of general interest, according to some of the men who have breakfasted with the President at the White House.

President Coolidge is very punctual. That has always been a habit of his. Senators and Congressmen are not required to be at their desks early in the morning. A few of them are, but most of them are not.

BEGIN PROMPTLY

White House breakfasts begin at 8:30 a.m.—sharp. Be there or miss the first course, is the unspoken mandate. The guests are there.

Of course, the first thing to be considered is the food.

Generally the menu is something like this: Fruit, cereal, wheat cakes and sausage, eggs, toast and coffee. For a time the President stopped eating cakes and sausages at the doctor's suggestion, but they were always there for his breakfast companions.

One member of Congress, who attended the most recent of these affairs, in speaking after it said:

"A White House clerk called my secretary one afternoon and delivered the invitation for breakfast the next morning. I had a date for golf, but that had to be broken. It was not long after Mr. Coolidge had reiterated his pleas for economy, and we all expected a lively discussion.

"We talked about everything in the world except economy. The President just listened. He didn't say a word. Once in a while he would smile at some particularly witty remark.

"Finally we all got up to go. The President bade us good-by and we never did find out if we had been asked to breakfast for any particular reason."

ALWAYS A PURPOSE

But these guests still insist there is a purpose in the informal breakfasts at the executive mansion. Naturally, current legislative and political movements are discussed.

The President lets his guests guess what his reasons for the gathering are. Generally these Senators and Congressmen come away from the White House with a muddled idea of what it was all about.

"I guess he just wanted to hear us talk," said one of these men who had been quite a frequent guest at these breakfasts.

Bones of Slain Farmer Found in Deep Grave

OSHKOSH (Neb.) Feb. 20. (AP) With the bones of Frank Boyer disinterred from his fourteen-year-old grave after thirty-six hours' digging in the desolate sandhills of his abandoned ranch, Garden county authorities tonight planned action against his widow, Minnie Boyer, and her common-law husband and nephew of the slain man, Henry Boyer.

The two will be charged with being accessories to murder, which, they confessed at Kearney, Neb., last week, was committed by Henry's brother, Thomas, now dead. County Attorney Dutton said charges probably will be filed tomorrow.

Mrs. Boyer, who lived with Henry from the night they helped Thomas bury the body "fourteen feet deep" in 1913, and raised six children with him as his common-law wife, was held in a rooming house here owing to inadequate facilities at the County Jail.

HUGE GAMBLING RAID NETS 124 PRISONERS

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20. (AP)—A gambling raid of the largest magnitude in recent Yolo county history at Broderick early today resulted in the arrest of 124 men on gambling charges, the collection of $1600 in fines at Woodland and seizure of gambling equipment valued at $8000. Three thousand dollars in table stakes was returned after fines had been paid.

GASOLINE IGNITES

GLENDALE, Feb. 20.—V. E. Cress, 1017 Allen avenue, was burned on the legs and arms today when gasoline, which he was using to clean clothes in the vicinity of a water heater, became ignited. The back porch of his home was slightly damaged by fire.

RAIDS GIVE AUTO-THEFT RING CLEWS

Nevada Officials Believe Cars Stolen in California Sold at Goldfield

TONOPAH (Nev.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Nevada and Federal officials tonight believed that operations of a ring which had been disposing of automobiles stolen in California over a period of eight years had been uncovered through a series of raids in Goldfield. Eight machines sold there recently have been seized as stolen property, and thirty more were listed for seizure when the owners returned to town.

W. H. Braden, owner of the Central Garage there and regarded as one of the town's leading business men, left a week ago after receiving reports that California license officers were investigating the title of a machine bought in Goldfield by E. W. Larson, of the Sugarman Iron and Metals Company. Federal officers have been hunting Braden, who also sold automobiles to the Sheriff and his chief deputy at Goldfield.

Merton Britt, San Francisco, and C. B. Winstead, Los Angeles, Federal automobile experts, arrived here last week to conduct the investigation. The Sheriff announced today that he believed the ring shipping automobiles here had been operating on a national basis. He expected several arrests.

COTTON UP TEN POINTS AT CLOSING

Trade Interests Maintain Price Throughout Week; Farm-Aid Veto Expected

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The market has been held up throughout the week by good support from local and southern trade bulls. Liverpool's firmness, sentiment, large exports and the sentimental influence of Congress passing the McNary-Haugen farm-relief bill. Outside interest from investment or speculative buying has, however, continued on a very limited scale. In fact, most of the daily trading remains confined to trade interest and the shifting in and out operations of the professional trading element principally here and in the South.

March contracts closed yesterday around 13.97@c; May, 14.12½c; July, 14.37@c, and October of the next crop 14.58c. These prices are up 19 points from last Saturday's closing quotations. They are within about 10 points of the highest prices reached in the bull movement of the last several weeks, when March sold at 14c; May, 14.25c; July, 14.48c, and October, 14.68c.

These prices represented a maximum of about 228 points from the lowest quotations reached December 6, or the equivalent of about $11 a bale advance from that level. This is considered enough for present conditions, with the President likely to veto the McNary-Haugen bill. The only difference in this bill from practically the same measure which Congress refused to pass a year ago is that it includes besides grain, hog products, cotton, tobacco and rice. The provision it makes for the government to buy up the surpluses of such crops produced and dispose of them even at a loss, and make up such losses through collections of an equalization fee, are economically unsound, besides which the principle involved is considered unconstitutional.

This makes it appear to the cotton trade that the President will be compelled to veto the measure as soon as it reaches him, and that there will be some reactionary movements in the market from this event in contrast with the recent speculative buying. It is not believed, however, the market will have any important break. This is principally the reason American mill consumption is now running at a rate that is likely to make the total for the year go over 7,500,000 bales and the export movement approximate 11,000,000 bales from the year against the previous highest record of about 10,000,000 bales during the season of 1911-12. Such heavy totals would leave a smaller surplus to be carried over by southern merchants and banks and by speculators on bank loans into the new-crop season than the trade expected up to two months ago.

The amount of the crop brought into sight from August 1 to date is now a little over 15,000,000 bales, against 12,500,000 the same time last year. Of this the world's spinners' takings, exclusive of such crops produced and disposed of total 10,282,000 bales, against 9,584,000 last year. This includes total exports of 7,013,000 bales from August 1 to date, against 6,650,000 the same time last year. The present world's visible supply of all kinds of cotton is 8,761,000 bales, against 6,650,000 a year ago, of which total 7,841,000 bales are of American product, against 5,984,000 at this time last year.

MEXICAN CHIEF'S DAUGHTER WEDS

Mystery Surrounds Marriage of Natalie Calles

Perfunctory Invitation Sent American Embassy

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—President Calles's youngest daughter, Natalie Elias Calles, was married in Chapultepec Castle last night to Carlos Herrera, a young government employee, by a civil ceremony. If any religious ceremony was performed by a Catholic priest, as had been predicted, the President has succeeded in keeping that fact a secret from the public.

Every Mexico City newspaper says that the wedding was by "civil" ceremony and carefully avoids saying anything about a religious ceremony.

No newspaper representatives were invited to the wedding and nobody from the American Embassy attended. One invitation only, addressed merely "American Ambassador" was sent to the United States Embassy, and since this did not include Mrs. Sheffield or any other of the officials and their wives, there appeared nothing else to do but stay away.

Furthermore, the invitation to the Ambassador, which did not mention his name, failed to state the time of the wedding, which therefore was problematical.

President Calles let the newspapers know authoritatively, although not directly, that he "wanted nothing said about the matter" and it was assumed that he had reference to the nature of the ceremony. The papers refrained from hint of speculation.

The groom and bride declined to discuss their marriage, but it is known that the bride, who is a Catholic, expected to have a priest officiate.

AUTO OUTPUT DROPS

January Production Below Years Ago, But Gains Over December

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—January production in the United States amounted to 294,130 vehicles, as compared with 302,741 in January last year, the Commerce Department reported today, listing production as 196,973 passenger cars, and 97,157 trucks and commercial vehicles.

Though the 1927 production has so far been below 1926 totals, the January produciton was well above that of December, in which month 137,381 passenger cars and 28,481 trucks and commercial vehicles were turned out.

SALT LAKE WATCHES MOVING OF MILLIONS

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—Guarded by marines and city police $12,800,000 in currency, coin and securities was moved several blocks through the city's streets yesterday. The local branch of the Federal Reserve Bank opens for business in its new $400,000 home tomorrow. The fortune included $8,000,000 in securities, $4,000,000 in currency and $800,000 in coin. The latter weighed approximately nine tons.

Finder of Huge Nuggets Given Verdict in Suit

WICHITA (Kan.) Feb. 20. (AP) — A jury in District Court returned a verdict in favor of Frank Smith of San Francisco, who had brought suit against his old prospecting "buddy," Earl R. Brown, for the possession of about $5000 worth of jewels and other valuables in a safe deposit box of a local bank.

Smith contended the jewels were a collateral for two large gold nuggets he had found in the Klondike region when the two men were prospecting partners in the late nineties. He had loaned them to Brown to be used in his automobile business at Fort Worth, Tex.

When Brown's business went bankrupt and he became a helpless paralytic the nuggets were sold. Brown is in a local Masonic home.

One of the nuggets was considered the second largest ever found in Alaska.

Workers of the Bahamas have banded together in a demand for a minimum wage of $1.75 a day instead of $1.25 as before, skilled workers demanding even greater increases.

LENS LOVELINESS LAWS LAID

Beware of Fashions Betraying Your Age in Later Years and Never Have Your Picture Taken When Tired, Magazine Warns Women

BERLIN, Feb. 20. (AP)—Don't pose archly with a romantic upward look, and beware lest the style of the clothes that you wear give away your age, are among the twelve rules laid down for women about to have their photographs taken, by the Berlin Woman Magazine, Aus Dem Reiche Der Frau. Here are the rules:

(1.) Never have your full figure taken lest the fashion of your dress gives away your age at some future date.

(2.) For the same reason, never have your hair dressed in any characteristic or conspicuous style and, if wearing a hat, select one that might be appropriate for most any fashion.

(3.) Don't have your hair done otherwise than usual.

(4.) Before going to the photographer rehearse at your leisure before a mirror the most becoming pose with the additional use of a hand-mirror.

(5.) When selecting your gown remember that most colors produce a different effect in a photograph than in nature.

(6.) Blonds may wear white, sky-blue, rose or dark blue, white brunets should chose darker gowns. It also must be borne in mind that scarlet, amber and orange appear as dark gray, dark brown and even black on a photograph.

(8.) Consider the color of your hair and remember that a feeling of general well-being is an important adjunct to a picture.

(9.) At the slightest indisposition, with the resulting look of fatigue about the eyes, don't hesitate to postpone your visit to the photographer.

high-school students, but an important contributing factor is the modern civilization which guards the individual from facing problems of self-preservation, according to Dr. C. S. Smoddy of the psychology department, Indiana University.

Too much excitement and overindulgence excites the unstable, unsocial and discouraged individual, and because somebody else takes their life, he takes his, Dr. Smoddy said. The psychologist declares no particular school condition is responsible for suicide increases. Worry over grades does not affect the normal student, he declared.

CUBA ASKS NO LOANS

Object of Machado's Visit to Invite President Coolidge, Says Official

HAVANA (Cuba) Feb. 20. (AP)—Secretary of State Martinez y Ortiz denied published reports that the purpose of President Machado's forthcoming visit to the United States is to arrange a loan of $200,000,000 to consolidate the Cuban debt. The administration, he said, holds fast to its decision to contract no loans.

The definite object of President Machado's visit is to invite President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg to the Pan-American Conference at Havana in 1928, it was stated.

COLUMBIA CITY (Ind.) Feb. 20. (AP)—A rusty, broken piece of coupling knuckle wedged into a frog switch here caused Pennsylvania Railroad detectives to believe that the wreck of twenty-six freight cars here Friday night was the result of a plot to wreck the Pennsylvania Special No. 2, crack train from Chicago to New York. The loss is estimated as high as $400,000.

HAWAIIAN PARK TO BE IMPROVED

Many Cottages and Addition to Hotel Planned

National Reserve Contains Active Volcano

Museum to Show Seismograph on Small Scale

HILO (T. H.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive) A three-fold program that will make of the Hawaii National Park a great playground for people of small means, moderate fortune and wealth has been formulated by Dan R. Hull, chief landscape engineer of the National Park Service.

The plans for Hawaii perfected by Mr. Hull include small cottages for people who wish to "camp" in the park, the extension of the present Volcano House Hotel for people of moderate income, and the building of a de luxe addition to the hotel for well-to-do tourists and island residents.

Hawaii National Park, an area of several thousand acres, contains the active Kilauea volcano, the famous "fern forest," the bird forest," petrified trees, lava tubes, and many other natural phenomena found only in volcanic regions. It also contains the volcano observatory, an important part of the recently formed department of volcanic research which is headed by Dr. T. A. Jaggar, representing the government.

Volcanics and all its related sciences are regarded as distinctive and interesting that the Federal service intends to build two "museum" instead of one as originally planned. One of these will contain a seismograph on a small scale, so that the one now at the observatory will not need to be disturbed by visitors.

A number of camp cottages have recently been completed in the park, but as these are five miles from the Volcano House they will be reserved for people who wish to "rough it" and for those who care for the life and social activity that centers around the hotel another group will be built near that resort.

In line with the park work it is planned to establish a community center, with a store, a gasoline station, and a public plaza for lectures and entertainment.

A new road that will be an extension to the highway down to the fire pit of Halemaumau, is also to be a part of the plan. Parties visiting the pit can then make a round trip back to the community center.

In addition to the recreational facilities for the public, the area also contains an extensive military and naval recreational camp, where soldiers and sailors from Schofield barracks and Pearl Harbor on Oahu may come for a brief stay. Hundreds of men take advantage of these camps for their leave of two weeks each year.

Mr. Hull's plans will be sent to Washington, and work on the various projects is expected to be under way in a short time.

Assembly grounds are being completed in Umatilla, Fla., for winter meetings of Baptist and other denominations.

LEARNED DOCTOR FAILS TO FIND GNOMES IN CALIFORNIA

BERKELEY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Any one who has seen the golden little Spanish fairies, or the funny digger gnomes, or the nugget elves of California's secluded fields, coves and gulches may compare notes with Mathurin M. Dondo, a real doctor of philosophy, who lectures for the extension division of the University of California.

Dr. Dondo is well acquainted with the fairies of his native Britany, the Gaelic Peninsula of Northern France, but he complains that he has never seen a fairy in California. He has written an article in "The Spokesman" monthly bulletin of the University of California extension division, on "Fairies I Have Seen in Brittany," in which he sketches his acquaintance with the little people, but says he has seen only automobiles and real estate signs and tin cans and newspapers in California.

Editor Picks Up Gold Nugget in Front of House

STOCKTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Streets of gold in California? Sure. After the recent heavy rainstorm in San Andreas, Calaveras county, which washed the streets thoroughly, George Treat, editor of a newspaper in that city, walking out of his front yard, noticed a glittering substance in the road and picked it up. It was a heart-shaped gold nugget, about a half-inch in diameter.

BISHOP'S RADIO TALK IN ESKIMO TONGUE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 20. (AP)—The Eskimo language will be used by Bishop Alfred Turquetil next Saturday in addressing his friends above the Arctic Circle via the radio. The bishop, head of the Oblate Fathers, French missionaries to the Eskimos, will speak as the chief feature of KDKA's fourth special broadcast to the Arctic.

Adults Share in Boys' War About Bands of Burros

TONOPAH (Nev.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Warfare starting between boys of Tonopah and Goldfield over ownership of bands of burros ranging the desert has spread to the adult population, and officials are trying to compose all differences before serious gun-play develops. Each camp charges the other with raiding the bands of "desert canaries" and stealing animals from rightful owners.

Thousands of burros formerly roaming the desert region between Tonopah and Goldfield have taken to the distant mountains, and the remaining animals are at a premium.

AUTHORITIES have often declared that women are the Nation's shrewdest shoppers. For women judge carefully the fabric and texture of each gown, wrap and fur. They insist on full value for each dollar that is spent.

But what of the maintenance and upkeep—the protection of this clothing investment? Does each woman choose her cleaner with the same discriminating care as used in the choice of her gowns? Does she intrust her clothing investment with an experienced, established, dependable firm with a record of proven success?

ON MAY 16, 1863, PEMBERTON, AFTER REPEATED ORDERS FROM GEN. JOHNSTON, MARCHED EASTWARD FROM THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF EDWARDS DEPOT TO ATTACK A UNION FORCE AT CLINTON AND UNITE HIS ARMY WITH THAT OF HIS CHIEF. AS HE MOVED ALONG THE JACKSON ROAD HE ENCOUNTERED A DIVISION (HOVEY'S) OF GRANT'S ARMY MARCHING WESTWARD FROM BOLTON.

PEMBERTON HURRIEDLY FORMED HIS TROOPS IN LINE OF BATTLE, WHILE HOVEY SENT AN URGENT CALL TO GRANT FOR REINFORCEMENTS. FIVE FEDERAL DIVISIONS WERE MOVING TO THE WEST OVER A NUMBER OF ROADS THAT MET AT EDWARDS DEPOT, AND SOON ARRIVED AT THE SCENE OF ACTION.

A GENERAL CONFLICT BEGAN AND LASTED FOUR HOURS. THE CONFEDERATES FOUGHT BRAVELY, BUT WERE FINALLY FORCED TO RETIRE, AND PEMBERTON RETREATED ACROSS BAKER'S CREEK, HAVING LOST MANY MEN AND A LARGE QUANTITY OF ARMS AND AMMUNITION.

GEN. LORING'S CONFEDERATE DIVISION, THROUGH A MISUNDERSTANDING OF ORDERS, BECAME SEPARATED FROM THE REST OF THE ARMY EARLY IN THE FRAY. FIGHTING ITS WAY WITH TWO DIVISIONS, LORING LED HIS TROOPS AROUND THE FEDERAL LEFT FLANK AND SUCCEEDED IN JOINING JOHNSTON'S ARMY AT BIG BLACK RIVER, BUT LOST MOST OF HIS ARTILLERY AND TRAIN.

Local police officers took no part in enforcing the law and reports from other cities of the State were that the usual Sunday business was being conducted, city police saying they had received no orders from the Governor.

Although the laws regulating Sabbath observance date back at least 100 years and were re-enacted five years ago, they have been supplemented by local ordinances in many of the smaller cities of the State.

The State law prohibits practice of a person's usual calling or trade for profit on Sunday or of Sunday sports or amusements, such as hunting, fishing or baseball. Exemption is made for work of necessity or mercy.

CHARLESTON WIGGLES WAY INTO FRENCH OFFICIALDOM

PARIS, Feb. 20. (AP)—The Charleston has wiggled its way into the Elysee, the Presidential palace. It took a private showing of the American ballroom contortions to make President Gaston Doumergue put the censor's stamp on it. He thought it was something quite terrible, possible indecent, and certainly not proper for the most formal social affairs in France.

When the spring dinner and reception to diplomats and officials was due, the President, looking over the program, asked what dances were planned. The arbiter of official etiquette told him there would be fox-trots, waltzes and Charlestons.

"The Charleston," the President was quoted as saying, "Why, a dance like that must not be tolerated."

"Then the young people will no longer come to your receptions," he was informed.

The President hesitated, asked what it was like and soon a young officer was called and there was a Charleston exhibition for the President.

That's how the Charleston got into the Elysee. The President, a bachelor, and not a dancer, saw no harm in it and approved the decision of his official social mentor.

EDUCATION BY RADIO PLANNED

Mexican Government to Give Daily Programs

Official Notices and Speeches to be Broadcast

Military and Farming News to be Disseminated

BY JACK STARR-HUNT

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The broadcasting station of the Mexican Department of Public Education station CZE, will send out an educational program daily, according to an announcement by Miss Maria Luisa Ross, in charge of the station. Miss Ross has outlined the following as the present plan of the Department of Public Education:

The Department of Public Health will send out rules of hygiene; the Secretariat of War and Marine will transmit, twice a month, military announcements. These conferences have been organized by the Department of Infantry, which is headed by Gen. Donato Bravo Izquierdo, and will be dedicated to the instruction of soldiers throughout the country, thus bringing together the troops throughout the various military regions of Mexico, receiving sets for that purpose having been supplied by the Secretariat of War and Marine.

MEDICAL ADVICE

The Director of Biological Studies will co-operate thoroughly, and has commissioned Dr. Emiliano Torres, a specialist in children's diseases, to send out continual announcements giving advice to mothers concerning the health of their children. The counsel of Dr. Torres, it is hoped, will to a considerable degree serve to lessen the alarming infant mortality rate in Mexico.

The Governor of the Federal District (Greater Mexico City) and the Department of Traffic have in the past sent out various notices from CZE and this they will continue to do. The Secretariat of Agriculture and Public Development will send out daily meteorological bulletins, and at regular intervals will broadcast speeches on the growing of crops and on other agricultural topics. The School of Agriculture has always been in contact with the station CZE and has at various times sent out addresses and information on agricultural subjects, by the experts on the staff of the school.

The National Lottery will broadcast after each drawing — held twice a week—the numbers of the tickets winning the major prizes, this to be done shortly after each drawing is made.

SPEECHES BROADCAST

The legislative power will likewise co-operate with the Department of Public Education. This branch of the government has during the past year at regular intervals broadcast speeches of various prominent officials, and will continue to send out the addresses that will be of benefit to the Mexican people.

The Secretariat of Industry, Commerce and Labor is using the station to send out regular commercial bulletins, and at times presents concerts.

For its part, the Secretariat of Public Education will broadcast regular musical programs of the best artists in the republic; addresses by outstanding intellectual leaders in Mexico will be sent out frequently. It is also being planned to broadcast perhaps once every week an address by some distinguished member on the foreign Diplomatic Corps.

TOOTH ENAMEL FOUND COMPOSED OF TISSUE

BERKELEY SCIENTISTS SAY THAT MOLAR COVERING IS TUFT OF TUBES

BERKELEY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—In seeking causes of tooth decay, University of California scientists declare they have found that the enamel which covers human teeth is not solid but built upon an organic matrix or tuft of tissue tubes.

Experiments by Dr. T. D. Beckwith, head of the department of hystology, and Miss Adrienne Williams, research assistant, are said to have revealed that decay is caused by minute surface injuries, through which bacteria enter these surface tubes.

To prove this conclusively, guinea pig teeth were inclosed in celloidin cases and then subjected to the action of acid which dissolved the Calcerous enamel, leaving only organic matter. The enamel, which grows in microscopic rods, prismatic in shape, when removed, left tiny tubes resembling honeycombs.

"STICK 'E MDOWN" NEW ORDER OF HOLD-UP MEN

STOCKTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Two bandits who believe it safer to rob citizens with their hands down rather than up, held up and robbed B. Stirnaman and Monroe Becker, operators of two service stations. Stirnaman was on his way home after closing his station. He was robbed of a watch and a small amount of money. Becker was robbed as he was closing his station, the bandits obtaining $25. In both cases, the victims were ordered to keep their hands "down."

IRRIGATION AND WATER RIGHTS COST $250,000

STOCKTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Purchase of the $250,000 irrigation canal and water rights of the Stockton Mokelumne Canal Company is virtually assured, according to an announcement that the Woodbridge Irrigation District has signed up sufficient acreage to legally bond itself for the purchase. A total of 13,000 acres were in the district when its farmers decided to purchase the canal system. One thousand acres in addition were signed up.

MEASLES EPIDEMIC IN WYOMING DISTRICT

SHERIDAN (Wyo.) Feb. 20. (AP)—There are 700 cases of measles in Sheridan county, according to a report issued by Dr. Earl Wedon here, county health officer. Two hundred new cases were reported last week. There have been only two deaths during the epidemic.

NEW PRICE $1850 DELIVERED IN LOS ANGELES

This Studebaker Big Six Brougham will Out-speed, Out-climb and Out-live Any Car in Its Class

ON its 75th birthday, February 16, Studebaker announced a further triumph of One-Profit manufacture by reducing the price of The Commander, its Big Six Custom Brougham, from $2070 to $1850.

This sweeping price reduction of $220 is added evidence of the aggressive spirit of this Company, because the Big Six has long outsold every other car in the world of equal or greater horsepower.

Price is not everything but this Big Six Brougham has everything at its price—every element of custom beauty, luxury and riding comfort coupled with power equalled by only seven other American cars costing from two to five times more.

Thrilling Performance

Nothing short of driving it can describe the performance of this Big Six Brougham, just as nothing short of seeing it can make you realize its value. It will idle smoothly or take the throttle for acceleration at a speed as low as three miles an hour. It will pick up from 5 to 40 miles an hour in 18.4 seconds. It will deliver 70 miles an hour carrying four passengers.

Get behind the wheel yourself. The steepest hills can't stop the smooth and steady sweep of its power. See how comfortably it irons out rough going—how easily it handles in dense traffic—know the thrill of its flight along the open highway.

Then note the lustrous beauty of its lacquered steel body, the luxury of its interior, the completeness of its equipment—the extraordinary fine-car value that only One-Profit facilities can make possible at Studebaker's new low price—$1585!

More than $100 worth of extra equipment included without added cost

1 Nickel-plated bumpers, front and rear.
2 Full-size balloon tires.
3 Disc wheels and positive acting four-wheel mechanical brakes.
4 Engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on dash. Two-zone incasured instrument board—all instruments grouped under glass and indirectly lighted.
5 Two-beam acorn headlights controlled from steering wheel. Cowl lights and interior dome light. Rear traffic signal light.
6 Automatic windshield cleaner and rear-vision mirror.
7 Oil filter. Alemite chassis lubrication.
8 Silken curtains, Duco finish hardware.

THRONG ORANGE SHOW ON LOS ANGELES DAY

Record-Breaking Crowds Attend Citrus Classic at San Bernardino Sunday

SAN BERNARDINO, Feb. 20.—Following a seething Saturday—the biggest and best in the entire history of this great citrus classic during which the gate clicked to the record smashing tune of 25,253 pair admissions—the Seventeenth National Orange Show today and tonight enjoyed another show-packing performance.

As this is written late this afternoon, every section of the beautiful big exposition is jammed with spectators; by the time the last ticket is sold tonight, the day and evening total will disclose a 60,000 total, another new high mark.

Such was the opinion expressed today by General Manager Roy H. Mack following a survey of the attendance which has been pouring into the show in a steady stream since morning.

This was Los Angeles and Pasadena day at the show. And well did these cities repay the National Orange Show for the designation. For the highways between Los Angeles and San Bernardino were literally black with cars today as the vast army of motorists rolled to the show and every train, trolley or bus was packed all day and all evening.

Tonight, as one of the features of the day, "Uncle John" and little "King Arthur" of KHJ, The Times radio station, were personally introduced to the crowds from the stage.

Monday will be San Diego county and San Bernardino county pioneers' day. The program will be featured by a unique dancing and fiddling contest by pioneers in charge of John Brown, Jr., also the San Bernardino High School girls' glee club, directed by Miss Martha Alice MacKenzie, will render an hour's evening concert.

Recheck by the judges today showed some slight revision and a few additions to the Saturday announcement of prizes. Attention was called to the fact that the reason Pasadena's beautiful exhibit was given a special prize was because that city had stipulated the exhibit was to be entered not in competition, but was merely complimentary of the Crown City to the orange show.

Sacramento's exhibit, a huge tower of striking proportions, was awarded first prize in a class of its own, a newly created class for chamber of commerces regional exhibits, the State capital city's shows having represented other surrounding cities as well as Sacramento.

In addition to the sweepstake prizes for feature exhibits released for publication Sunday morning with Los Angeles first, Riverside second and San Diego third, other feature classes were awarded as follows:

Class 43D—For the best feature with mechanical action, entered by Associated Chambers of Commerce or citrus fruit associations: Orange county, first; Santa Monica, second; Pomona, third.

Class 44E—For the best feature display with mechanical action, entered by a chamber of commerce: Corona, first; Redlands, second; Colton, third.

Class 47Z—For the best feature without mechanical action: Covina, first; Ontario, second; Hemet, third; Pomona, fourth.

Class 44B—For the best feature entered by individual, firm or corporation engaged in citrus fruit industry: Hesperet Orchards, first.

In the rack-display awards the following winners of first prizes in the by-products division were announced today: High schools, San Bernardino High School; junior high, Burbank Junior High School; elementary schools, Kennedy school; unclassified, Sherman Institute; women's clubs, San Bernardino Women's Club; commercial organizations, Corcoran Post Relief Corps, San Bernardino; best general display of fruit by-products made and entered by an individual, Mrs. H. M. Barton, first; Mrs. Nell Aldridge, second; Mrs. S. H. Franklin, third; Mrs. T. B. Simms, fourth.

In dividing D. plate and table displays, the following first prizes, each a certificate, were given: Washington Navels, Mutual Orange Distributors, Redlands; Malta Blonds, Mutual Orange Distributors, Redlands; Ruby Blonds, M.O.D., Redlands; Valencias, M.O.D., Redlands; Sweets, Rivanda Citrus Fruit Association; Tangerines, A.F.G., Riverside; No. 1 Ss. Mixs, M.O.D., Redlands; Bittersweets, M.O.D., Redlands; Pomelos, Thumond, M.O.D., Redlands; Seedlings, American Fruit Growers, Riverside; No. 1 lemon, L. Frank and B. Frank, Riverside; grapefruit, American Fruit Growers, San Fernando; miscellaneous number of varieties, M.O.D., Redlands; most artistic plate display, American Fruit Growers, Lindsay.

WAR MEMORIAL TO SCHOOL STUDENTS

HANFORD, Feb. 20.—A war memorial is to be erected by the local high school in honor of one of the faculty and several of the students of the school who met death during the World War. The classes of 1919, 1920 and 1921 contributed funds for a memorial to be erected to Prof. Birchby, who left here to enter the World War and who perished in France. The classes in assembly have just expressed the desire that the names of all high-school students who lost their lives during the war be inscribed on the monument and this will be done.

CHAMPION DEBATERS

PASADENA, Feb. 20.—Pasadena Junior College debaters appear to be headed for their third successive Southern California championship, following victories over both Chaffey Junior College and Citrus Junior College. The Pasadena debaters have a record of sixteen straight victories, and their coach, Earl D. Davis, can still boast that none of the teams he has coached has ever lost a debate.

DRAWS GUN IN QUARREL OVER TRUNK

Roomer, Police Furnish Excitement at Boarding-house in Alhambra

ALHAMBRA, Feb. 20.—The attempt of August Butzer to retrieve his trunk from the house at 1713 Pepper street led to plenty of action last night. And also to the arrest of J. S. Clayton, 43 years of age, a boarder at the place, on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Butzer had been boarding at the Pepper-street address for some time. Yesterday he decided to move. He owed nothing for room and board, but he did owe the landlady, Mrs. Julia Lewis, $80, which he had borrowed and for which he had given her his note, according to his story to the police. Mrs. Lewis refused to release his trunk and another boarder, Clayton, had threatened him, Butzer claimed.

Accompanied by Police Chief W. J. Shull and Detective Lieutenant Joe Vigneau, Butzer returned to the house and entered. Clayton made a rush for him, blood in his eye. The owner of the trunk retreated hastily with his pursuer close behind. As Clayton leaped out on the porch after his man he was stopped by the heavy fist of the Police Chief.

Picking himself out of a tangle of porch furniture Clayton dashed back into the house and into a rear bedroom, Shull at his heels. When Clayton, a revolver in his hand, it is claimed, faced Shull the next minute, the Chief had him covered with his gun and he was forced to give up.

Clayton was taken to the station and booked on a charge of disturbing the peace. He was later released on his own recognizance.

Butzer again is in possesion of his trunk.

KINGS COUNTY TO BAN FAKE STUDENTS

LEMOORE, Feb. 20.—College students, bona fide or alleged, who have been canvassing this city in more than the usual number recently, some of them being unpleasantly persistent, are to receive the attention of Dist.-Atty. Ferguson of this county if parties solicited will report to him.

From his investigations he thinks a good part of these canvassers for the sale of magazines or books, who state they are trying to secure funds to go to college, are fakers. Two young men of the alleged college sort called on him to make a sale. He warned them they would have to leave the county unless they returned the next morning and showed their credentials, and they did not return.

PLAYGROUND LEADERS TO HOLD CONFERENCE

ALHAMBRA, Feb. 20.—Delegations from all the smaller cities in Southern California are expected to attend an intercity playground and recreation conference to be held under the auspices of the Alhambra City Playground Commission Saturday noon at the Alhambra Athletic Club.

Many invitations to playground organizations and to individuals interested in this phase of community work have been accepted, according to M. E. Carroll, City Commissioner and member of the playground body. It is probable that as a result of the meeting an intercity playground conference will be permanently organized and that meetings will be held in various cities each year.

Ideas and plans for recreation work will be discussed, which will be preceded by a luncheon.

WORK ON PREMIUM LIST

Prizes For Kern County Fair to be Announced Within the Next Thirty Days

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 20.—Within the next thirty days the major premium book for the 1927 Kern County Fair will be ready for publication, and by the end of this week farm centers of Kern county should be notified of the amount of booth space they will be given for their fair exhibits, directors of the Fifteenth District Agricultural Fair Association declared at a meeting in Bakersfield Monday afternoon.

Secretary R. R. Cady was authorized to take immediate action in completing the premium lists, and in an announcement today he declared that premium lists of the women's section will be prepared this week and sent to farm bureaus throughout the county.

All farm center exhibits this year will be contained in a permanent exhibit building containing a floor space of 80x300 feet, to be erected just south of the race track grand stand, the fair directors plan.

Construction of the building will begin about March 1, it is believed, under contracts awarded to Currie & Dulgar.

Though the detailed plans for this year's premium lists have not been completed by Mr. Cady, it is assured, he says, that the book will be bigger than that of last year, which carried 100 pages.

LAST DAY RUSH

Hundreds of Voters Qualify for Primary Election

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 20.—Nearly 1000 belated voters qualified Friday and Saturday to cast their ballots in the city primary, March 22, it was announced today, after a hurried check in the office of the County Clerk of the number registering during the two days. Yesterday was the last day on which voters could qualify for the primary.

More than 400 men and women not previously registered gained a place Friday on the great register, but the real rush did not start until yesterday morning. Six deputies were kept constantly busy throughout the morning, the crowds at times overflowing from the clerk's office into the corridor.

Throughout the afternoon, County Clerk McLees, who remained at his office to accommodate late comers, was kept busy caring for the last-minute applicants and when he closed his office at 5 o'clock last evening a total of approximately 600 names had been added to the eligible list.

Following the primary March 22, the city's general election will be held April 5 and voters may qualify up to March 4 for the battle of ballots.

Business Good in Middle West Insists Banker

PASADENA, Feb. 20.—Laments of the farmers notwithstanding, Charles A. Chase, prominent business man and financier of the Great Lakes region, who is now at the Hotel Huntington here, declares that prosperity abounds in the Middle West and that substantial economic conditions prevail in his home land.

Chase lives at Superior, Wis., twin port of Duluth at the western end of Lake Superior. He is president of the Bank of Commerce there and is interested in industries of the region, chiefly lumbering, mining and shipping.

"Business conditions are good," he says, "and this seems to be true everywhere. There is steadiness apparent in all industries, which means continued activity, regular employment of workers and general stability."

NEW QUARTERS FOR VALLEY POSTOFFICE

SAN FERNANDO, Feb. 20.—After March 15 San Fernando postoffice will be located in the Porter Hotel Building, which occupies the entire block on the westerly side of Brand Boulevard from Celis street to Porter avenue, according to word received from Washington, by Postmaster H. C. Caldwell. The two store rooms at the corner of Celis and Brand will be converted into one room, 40 by 80 feet. J. Leo Flynn, owner, plans to start work immediately remodeling the building and installing new fixtures. The latter will be new and cost will be $7000, he states. The cost of remodeling will be approximately $3000, making a total cost of $10,000.

The word from Washington brings to a close a prolonged wait and a great deal of expectancy on the part of many citizens.

Annual Report of Olive Heights Association Shows Good Season

OLIVE, Feb. 19.—Growers affiliated with the Olive Heights Citrus Association received $666,058.06 for fruit shipped during the season just closed Ben H. Cole, manager, reported at the annual meeting of the organization in Olive Hall yesterday. This amount includes the refund of $42,408.06 which was paid today.

Shipments of Valencias and other varieties increased 368 per cent over the previous season, according to Cole. The crop consisted of 236,743 packed boxes in 867 cars of 400 boxes each. This shipment represents a gain over 1926, the previous banner year of the association, of 185 per cent, or 281 cars.

Since 1924 the acreage has increased from 978 to 1451 acres, or 48½ per cent.

According to Cole's report, the acreage increase is due to a large extent to the co-operation of members in securing new members. Decreased cost of packing is credited by Cole with aiding in returning a large profit to the growers. During the past season it has cost an average of 58.7 cents per packed box for packing, compared to 69.4 cents in 1924.

Together with his comments on the decreased cost of packing is the assurance given the growers of even less packing costs in the future through the installation of new equipment authorized by the board of directors for the coming season.

The program of improvement includes a $5700 building extension, rearrangement of present machinery to cost $1000, a new siner and remodeling of old ones to cost $3523 and additional wiring to cost $1000. An electric counting machine calculated to save time and money by eliminating the necessity for estimating amounts of growers' fruit left in bins and tallying also has been authorized.

With other members of the Orange County Fruit Exchange the local plant is to install a Sunkist stamping machine. According to Cole, the machine is figured to add at least 25 cents per packed box to the revenue of the houses using it. On the basis of this season's crop the machine would add to the local houses' income $61,744, Cole estimated.

Lake Henshaw Impounds Huge Storm Runoff

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 20.—Breaking the silence that shut down on it when the roads and wires went out in the storm, Lake Henshaw, largest reservoir in the county, reported that it caught 22,000,000 gallons of water during the storm and that the runoff is lifting the lake level at the rate of six inches a day.

This catchment is the largest of any reservoir in the county and added to the amount already in storage brings the total of water now in the lake up to 27,000,000 gallons. This enormous amount of water is, however, only about half the capacity of the reservoir, which, when filled, will be one of the largest artificial lakes in the State.

Telephone lines to Henshaw were placed in commission late yesterday afternoon. Word from the lake is that the roads in that vicinity are in very poor shape.

The rainfall for the storm at Henshaw was 26.76 inches. The peak day of the storm was Wednesday, when the rain gauge at the dam showed a fall of 14.46 inches for the twenty-four-hour period.

FIND RELICS OF INDIAN TRIBES

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 20.—Indian spearheads, arrowheads and beads are being found in some quantity by workers encamped on Pelican Island in the dry lake bed of Buena Vista, where they are engaged in mice extermination work, according to the horticultural commissioner's office here.

Pelican Island, in itself represents one of the oddest features of Kern county. It is reported to be an island of shells, some 250 yards long and about fifty yards wide, the surface of which is elevated some height above the dry lake bottom.

About this island the workers are finding water crystals, agates and stone beads, as well as obsidian spear heads.

He wore baseball and football protective devices.

The stunt was sponsored by Earl L. White at Magnolia Park.

Circulation Shows Large Gain in New Quarters

PASADENA, Feb. 20.—The new Pa... adena Public Library, which opened its doors for the first time a week ago, is not only an important factor in civic beautification, but the ... presence in the city of a new building instead of an old one, makes people read more books.

This was revealed today by Miss Jeanette M. Drake, librarian, who reported that during the first five days that the new library was open to the public, the circulation, of books increased more than 25 per cent over the same period last year.

The library staff had anticipated spending most of its time during the first week showing visitors through the new building, but the crowds proved to be eager readers as well as sightseers. From Monday to Friday, the circulation figures of the library were 13,680 books, a gain of 2656 over the same days of last year.

Should the same rate of increase continue throughout the year, the library will show a gain of 100,000 books, which would be twice as large as the previous best record.

HORSE SCORNS TRAFFIC BELLS

Old Plow-Puller Refuses to Stop When Signal is Given

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Old plow horses, as well as old dogs, just naturally can't be bothered learning new tricks, argues Tony Silveria of Hayward. When he was arrested astride a horse that was old when Helen of Troy was young and charged with violating a traffic stop signal, Tony told Judge Jacob Harder:

"Your honor, that horse just never ain't had no use for automobiles and shows his independence by going where autos can't. He simply won't stop for a traffic signal."

and in private and illegal liquor traffic.

AFFRONTS CONSTITUTION

"The true question of prohibition is one having to do with the relation of the citizen to the government and of the government to the citizen, and that question would remain whether the Eighteenth Amendment dealt with intoxicating liquor or whether it dealt with meats and vegetables.

"The Eighteenth Amendment affronts the Constitution and cannot be a part of it, for it is in itself a law-breaking law. Therefore every effort to enforce it is of necessity lawless. You cannot enforce conflicting laws.

"The Eighteenth Amendment organizes legal civil war under Constitutional force, and that is what is going on all over the land to the great distress of our people. Yet we have left the problem of the control of the liquor traffic unsolved.

"If it was necessary to enforce prohibition by national action the path of that action was perfectly straightforward and simple. An amendment to Article 1, Sec. VIII, would have given to Congress power to regulate, control or prohibit traffic in intoxicating liquors. If this had been done Congress would have gained a new statutory power. If Congress passed a foolish law it could have been easily repealed or altered by a new Congress as the public wished.

REPEAL IMPOSSIBLE

"But by this unfortunate act you have put an amendment into the Constitution and you have made its change of repeal impossible except with the agreement of the entire body of citizens. Unless you can impress upon the people the belief this is a question in government, then we will have to face the alternative—a neglect of a fundamental provision of the written law . . .

"We ought to be large enough, brave enough and intelligent enough to admit we have made a mistake in government, and then be brave enough and fine enough to put ourselves to the task of setting things right.

"If this amendment stays in the Constitution, whether it be obeyed or not—and it will not be—it will be an invitation to add statutory legislation bearing directly upon the life and activities of individual citizens."

Dr. Butler outlined a parallel between the present situation in which the great political parties find themselves in considering prohibition and that faced by the larger parties when slavery and secession were the issues. Failure of one party to meet or mention the issue, he said, resulted in its political death.

"Unless all signs fail," he declared, "that same fate awaits the political party in the United States today that will not lead the people to a solution of this new problem . . .

"This problem can only be solved by such measures as are supported by the people of vicinage and State. We must give back to the people the right to deal with the problem as they want it dealt with."

Dr. Butler was careful to explain that he was not personally supporting the use of liquor.

Elopement of Childish Pair Ends Painfully

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The younger man's fancy doesn't wait for the spring to turn to thoughts of love. Byron Berry, who is 13 years of age, reasoned that $5 from his bank, poetic license and the fervid declaration of undying affection from his 12-year-old lady love, Irene Praga, was enough to float the ship of romance way ahead of the birds that sing, the flowers in spring, n'everything.

So away they went.

With the aid of kindly motorists they got as far as Gilroy, near San Jose, where they decided to surprise Byron's uncle on their wedding-less honeymoon. Byron's uncle was duly surprised, and so were the respective parents when notified by telephone. So, by spring, when the birdies sing, perhaps Byron and Irene will be able to sit down again.

The inventor passed it up "cold" to ride out to his winter home in a limousine furnished by his next-door neighbor, Henry Ford.

The flivver followed with the baggage.

Missive to Wife, Expressing Hope of Avoiding War Against King, Discovered by Kansas Artist

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—One of the "lost" letters of George Washington, apparently an enlightening addition to the picture of the great man as husband and general, appears to have been uncovered, the Kansas City Star says in a copyrighted story. Alfred H. Clark of Kansas City has in his possession a yellowed missive, obviously addressed to Martha Washington and signed "G. W.," the newspaper says, adding that the letter is dated June 24, 1776, "and from references and content is seen to fit snugly into the niche of facts and events which surrounded the general at the time."

The writer of the letter, dated ten days before the Declaration of Independence, expressed the hope for a pacific settlement of differences with Great Britain, but added, "I am prepared for every event only one excepted—I mean a dishonorable peace."

LOVED HIS KING

"I love my King," was one passage.

The letter bore the salutation, "My dearest wife and love." Several references were made to "Lund Washington."

A good portion of the long missive was taken up in assuring the person to whom it was addressed that the writer's affections had not grown cold and that such suspicions were baseless.

Clark, a portrait painter and art instructor, explained that it had been a tradition that his family possessed a Washington letter. The missive was found, he said, among papers of Mrs. Alice S. Clark, a sister, who died last October in Lawrence, Kan., at the age of 72. She had lived most of her life around Lawrence, Mass., and inherited from her mother, Mrs. Joanna Houghton Clark, a great mass of heirlooms, letters, photographs and art objects. Clark's mother was a cousin of Amory Houghton, father of Alanson B. Houghton, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, and her grandfather was Jonathan Houghton, an officer of the Continental Army under Washington.

The script of the letter matched facsimilies of other Washington letters faithfully, The Star says, but proof of the authenticity probably rests with handwriting experts.

AIMS ONLY AT PEACE

Discussing military preparations the letter said:

"Suffice it that I say which I have often before told you, that as I have the controul of them, all our preparations of war aim only at peace. Neither do I see the least likelihood of there being any considerable military operations this season; & if not in this season certainly in no other. It is impossible to suppose that in the leisure & quiet of winter quarters men will not have the virtue to listen to the dictates of plain common sense & sober reason.

"The only true interest of both sides is reconciliation, nor can there be a point in the world clearer, than that both sides must be losers by war, in a manner which even peace will not soon compensate for. We must at least agree & be friends; for we cannot live without them, & they will not without us; & a bystander might well be puzzled to find out why we cannot be good friends if given and taken now, as when he shall have well nigh ruined each other by the mutual madness of cutting on another's throats, for all these reasons which cannot be but obvious to the English ecommissioners & ours, as they are to me; I am at a loss to imagine anything can arise to obstruct a negotiation, & of consequence a pacification. You who know my heart know that there is not a wish nearer to it than this; but I am prepared for every event one only excepted — I mean a dishonourable peace. Rather than that let me tho it be with the loss of everything else I hold dear continue this horrid trade & by the most unlikely means, be the unworthy instrument of preserving political security & happiness to them as well as ourselves.

"Pity this cannot be accomplished without fixing on me the sad name, rebel. I love my King, you know I do; a soldier a good man cannot but love him. How peculiarly hard then is our fortune to be deemed traitors to so good a King! But I am not without hopes that even he will see cause to do me justice. Posterity I am sure will. Meanwhile I comfort myself that this has been the fate of the best and bravest men even of the barons who obtained the Magna Charta whilst the dispute was depending. This, however, anxiously, as I wish for it, is not mine to command; I see my duty that of standing up for the liberties of my country and whatever difference and disagreements lie in my way I dare not shrink from it; and I rely on that being who has not left us to the choice of duties, that whilst I conscientiously discharge mine I shall not finally lose my reward. If I really am not a bad man I shall not long to be so set down."

The writer professed the utmost love for the recipient of the letter. "You have hurt me, I know not how much by the insinuation in your last, that my letters have lately been less frequent, because I have felt less concern for you," the letter read. "This suspicion is most unjust—may it not add it is most unkind? . . .

"My heart tells me there never was a moment in my life, since I first knew you in which I did not cleave and clink to you with the warmest affection and it must cease to beat ere it can cease to wish for your happiness above everything on earth."

ONE LOST LETTER KNOWN TO EXIST

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Historians and manuscript specialists in the Library of Congress, in commenting tonight upon the discovery in Kansas City of a purported letter from George Washington to his wife a few days before the signing of the Declaration of Independence, emphasized that only a careful examination of the text could establish its authenticity.

Charles Moore, head of the manuscript division of the library, recalled that Martha Washington shortly after the death of the Revolutionary leader systematically burned virtually all of his letters. Two epistles are known to have escaped destruction, and one of these dated Philadelphia, April 28, 1775, is preserved in a George Washington collection here. The other letter, of unknown date, but known to exist because of allusions to it in contemporary correspondence, passed into unknown hands and has never, so far as Mr. Moore is aware, been identified.

The letter published in Kansas City may be the one sought, but historiographers declined to comment upon the probability until they have had an opportunity to examine the manuscript.

MANUSCRIPT EXPERT BELIEVES LETTER SPURIOUS

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Feb. 20. (AP) Excerpts of a "lost" letter written by George Washington that has been reported found in Kansas City were branded "spurious" here tonight by W. C. Ford, former chief of the manuscript division of the library of Congress. Mr. Ford declared the letter probably was based on a well-known forgery of one of the first President's letters.

The letter from which Mr. Ford surmised the excerpts taken never existed in Washington's handwriting, he said.

"It is known only from printed versions," Mr. Ford asserted, adding that "Mr. Clark may have a contemporary copy, but it is without value as history or as an autograph. No account of his having found it in family papers will offer support of his claim."

In relating the history of the forged letter, Mr. Ford told of the appearance in London in June, 1777, of a pamphlet, "purporting to contain letters of Washington written to his friends and family in Virginia." The editor of the volume stated that they had been taken from a prisoner captured at Fort Lee, who admitted that he was Billy Lee, an old body servant of Washington.

STATUS GROWS WORSE

"Fort Lee was captured in November, 1776, so the letters were four or five months old," he said, "curious things to carry for so long a time in an active campaign. But Billy was never taken by the British and had never spent one moment in their company. Hence the pamphlet received little notice in England and even the leading reviews refused to accept them as genuine."

Mr. Ford said the letter to Mrs. Washington contained in the pamphlet was published in two London magazines and before long it returned to American where it was brought to America where it was brought to wrote to Richard Henry Lee, "not one word of which (the letter) did I ever write."

Several American publications of the letter were cited by Mr. Ford. He then related the circumstantial evidence at the time, tending to show that the letter was written by one Mr. Vardill, a young Episcopal clergyman of New York who went to England in 1776 to take orders. An English review, Mr. Ford stated, declared that Vardill was "undoubtedly" the author.

Showers Halt Proposed Seal Baseball Game

BOYES SPRINGS (Cal.) Feb. 20. (AP) Rain prevented the Seals from playing a game today, and Manager Nick Williams announced that when the sun shone again there would be two workouts daily to make up for lost time.

Bob Geary, pitcher, arrived at camp today, and Williams expects Bert Ellison, Jack Sheehan, Smead Jolly, Frank O'Doul and Gus Suhr tomorrow. To make room for the regulars, Williams released some of his recruits. Neil Boysen and Frank Whitner, Santa Cruz; Frank Warren, Kingsburg; Mike Pavitha, of Oakland, and Tom Pendergast left camp. Pendergast has belonged to the Seals three years, but has been unable to pitch a game, on account of injury to his arm.

RABBI RECOUNTS WOES OF JEWRY

New York Leader Bitter on Rumanian Treatment

Immigration Laws Attacked as Denying Sanctuary

Borah Also Among Speakers at Jewish Congress

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Rumania was accused today by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York of harassing and persecuting its Jews by a violation of rights and infliction of wrongs that stopped only "this side of pogroms."

Addressing the opening session of the American Jewish Congress as its president, the rabbi said the life of the Jew in Rumania had become one of "misery and calumny, of oppression and proscription, of humiliation and shame." He regretted that the United States, not being in the League of Nations, was "impotent to voice a protest." Rabbi Wise shared the speakers' program with Senator Borah, Max D. Steuer, Judge Julian W. Mack of New York and others.

STATUS GROWS WORSE

"Rumania is the only one of the Allied nations with which our country and its arms were associated wherein the status of the Jews has become worse, rather than better, since the war," he said.

As an example of the "perversity of Rumanian law, of the unaccountableness of Rumanian justice," he cited an incident in which a young Jewish Protestant, "dragged into court as if he were a criminal," was assassinated instead of being given the "sanctuary of the law."

"Let Rumania bethink herself," he warned, "lest she seal her moral doom by achieving the succession to Czarist Prussia in the matter of wrong and injustice to the Jew."

In the United States, the rabbi said, there was nothing to record except "an unlessened antagonism to the incoming of the foreigner and especially the immigrant from the despised because inferior Mediterranean lands, which have contributed little of moment to a civilization that lives by cotton, steel and corn."

"Time and again," he said, "we have called the attention of the committees of Congress to the cruelest of the hardships which the quota regime inflicts—the ruthless separation of family members—but thus far to little avail.

TRADITION CITED

"It is unbelievable that America will forever forswear the tradition of asylum or sanctuary, wrought out of and in turn fortifying to one of the noblest moods of America."

Congress reported that the position of Jewish minorities in European countries was not satisfactory because the treaties giving equal rights to Jews were "contravened with impunity." Hungary, it asserted, had not fulfilled provisions of the treaties granting equal educational facilities to all citizens, and Rumania and Poland had failed to carry into full effect their nationality laws.

In Palestine the official languages are Hebrew, English and Arabic, but French, Spanish, Greek, Italian, German and Rumanian are also heard.

Merchants Burn Fingers on Trick Checks Signed by Humorists

STOCKTON, Feb. 20. (AP)—Strangers who attempt to cash checks on Lodi merchants hereafter will meet with resistance.

Last week a nice-looking gentleman made some purchases and tendered a check in payment. The check was signed "N. O. Good." Then along came a strange young woman with a check signed "Mary Christmas."

Both checks came back marked "no account."

CRIME RUNS RIOT DURING POLICE BALL

Bandits and Robbers in High Carnival When Bay City Officers Go to Dance

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—While two-thirds of the police department, smartly attired in dress uniforms, attended the annual police ball last night, thugs, bandits, thieves, robbers and murderers held a crime carnival throughout the city and environs.

Within a mile and a half of the ballroom, one man was shot and killed, another was stabbed to death, one man was beaten, robbed and tossed from an automobile without regard for his fate, a drive-yourself garage was held up and robbed of $700 and there were numerous other hold-ups and robberies.

The stabbing caused the arrest of Charles Walter Hanlon, better known as Eddie Hanlon, one-time contender for the lightweight boxing crown, familiar to flatic fans over the country and of late part proprietor of a Market-street cafe under police suspicion as a gambling resort. Hanlon is held on a charge of murder. The victim was Walter Noonan, 28 years of age, organist of the Grand Lodge of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Three others are held as material witnesses.

The other man killed was one of four who robbed a Market-street garage of $200. He was driving the car used by the bandits and was shot by the night attendant of the garage, as the four fled the scene. The car became unmanageable, leaped a sidewalk and crashed into a building. The other three fled on foot, deserting their wounded companion, who died before surgery could aid him.

DAUGHERTY TRIAL NEAR LAST PHASE

Attorney for Col. Miller Begins Argument Today; Verdict Due by Friday

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) The second conspiracy trial of former Atty.-Gen. Harry M. Daugherty and former Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller will enter its third and final week tomorrow when Aaron Sapiro, counsel for Col. Miller will begin summing up to the jury.

Although Mr. Sapiro rested his case without calling a single witness his summing up is expected to take up the greater part if not all of the day. He contends that the government has failed to connect his client with any conspiracy, either by inference or otherwise.

Mr. Daugherty and Col. Miller are indicted on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the government of their unbiased judgment as officials in 1921. It is asserted that they, with the late John L. King, Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, and the late Jess W. Smith, lifelong friend of Mr. Daugherty, had shared in a $441,000 "fee" paid by Richard Merton, German capitalist, for the granting of a $7,000,000 claim against the Alien Property Custodian.

It is expected the case will reach the jury not later than Friday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (AP) Friends here of Emory R. Buckner, United States Attorney for Southern New York, expect him to retire shortly to private life. For some time Mr. Buckner has found the duties of his office too great a physical strain, and his intimates have advised him to take a rest. They would not be surprised if he stepped out very shortly after the conclusion of the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial he is prosecuting in New York.

BRICKMAKERS STUDY PREDECESSORS' CRAFT

PRODUCT OF 3500 B. C. GIVEN MANUFACTURERS OF TODAY BY ARCHEOLOGISTS

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) When it came to making bricks 5500 years ago or more, along about 3500 B.C., there wasn't much the brick manufacturer of 1927 A.D. could show his predecessor. True, the crude wooden forms have given way to efficient, up-to-date machinery, the sun's heat has been abandoned in favor of more intense fuels, but the product remains substantially the same.

Concrete evidence of the similarity is exhibited in a display of sun-baked brick, the gift of an expedition conducted by the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum, to the Common Brick Manufacturing Association of America, which will open a four-day convention here tomorrow. They are of varying sizes and were made, according to archeologists, by slaves, who marked them in some instances with impressions of their thumbs.

It is proposed that one of the largest bricks be donated to the 1933 World's Fair Commission, to be used as a corner-stone for one of the permanent buildings. They were dug up on the site of the ancient city of Ur.

PAST-DAY GANG MEMBERS MEET

Chicago Business Men Recall Old-time Toughness

Boys' Republic Graduates in Uproarious Reunion

Former Gangsters Testify to Civic Redemption

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Fourteen years ago they were grimy-knuckled, freckle-faced kids, as tough a gang as had managed to keep outside the reform school. They were the Boundary Line Gang, and they ruled with flying fists the territory bounded by Polk and Paulina, Wood and Twelfth streets.

But that was fourteen years ago. Today, correctly hatted and spatted, neatly tailored and impeccably groomed, they rolled up in their own automobiles to their former headquarters, the city hall of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic, for a reunion of the old grads.

It was "Hall, hall, the gang's all here," and "Howdy, boy," and "Hello, Ben, what's the line?" with back-slapping and handshaking and the usual behavior of alumni at the alma mater for a matter of several hours, while time rolled backward and they were boys again.

OLD-TIME LEADER

Somehow the festivizes gravitated, naturally enough, around Ralph Lee Goodman, who was the leader of the near-outlaw gang that formed the nucleus of the club that has since absorbed 6000 members. Goodman was the first Mayor of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic and still retains his interest in the work, although he long ago passed the age limit of 19 at which the "citizens" of the republic automatically were graduated.

Recalling the start of the organization, Goodman explained that it was Jack Robbins, throughout the years the guiding spirit of the enterprise, who first suggested to him that he and his gang form a club for which he would provide baseball uniforms. Jack Robbins remains today as the friendly mentor of the republic.

"There were about thirty-five of us," Goodman stated, "but did we shy at that idea? I remember how I came back at Jack and made him understand that if we did go in for it, there would be just one boss in the outfit and I would be that boss. But he agreed to that and it has always been governed by the boys themselves.

"When we finally started, I could get only seven to join—not enough for a ball team. But the others came in gradually. We did not bar any kid because he was tough, but little by little, rules sort of grew up, and after that, a kid had to be tough within the limits of our laws. If he overstepped, he was arrested, brought to trial and sentenced."

It developed at today's reunion, to which the former tough guys brought their wives and even the second generation, that many of them had followed out the professions that had interested them as youngsters. The first judge of their court, for instance, Oscar M. Nudelman, is now a lawyer. So is the first prosecuting attorney, Harry Malkin.

"Oh, it's great stuff," they say of the "republic."

FRANCE TO PAY ON WAR DEBT SOON

[Copyright, 1927, by Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—France is preparing to pay the United States $10,000,000 on account on the war debt agreement signed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and former Ambassador Berenger, although this has not been ratified by Parliament. Premier Poincare is amassing bullion and gold value securities at the French government treasury for shipment to Washington imminently, it is learned.

The payment of the war debt annuity comes from France's 52 per cent share of Germany's reparations payment, which under the Dawes plan, amounts to 500,000,000 marks ($125,000,000) this year.

The Ministry of Finance officially states that it is impossible for the United States to refuse to accept the payments because the accord is not ratified, as Secretary Mellon personally offered Joseph Caillaux, in September, 1923, a five-year agreement at $10,000,000 annually, besides $20,000,000 for the war stocks, when the Caillaux proposals were rejected.

France, it is likely, will not discuss the Berenger accord in Parliament for several years, meanwhile paying $10,000,000 annually and letting the hostility cool.

Judge Dismisses Floyd Hall Jury as Verdict Fails

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20. (AP) — After thirty hours' deliberation the jury in the case of Floyd Hall, charged with the murder of H. J. Litzberg, reported it had disagreed.

Judge Hughes discharged the jurors, and, immediately after their dismissal, Neil McAllister, District Attorney, announced that Hall again will face a jury for the murder of Litzberg at the first open date on the Superior Court calendar.

From authentic sources it was learned that the jury was unanimous for conviction, but eight favored hanging, while four held out for life imprisonment. Seven women and five men composed the jury, and, of the four whose disagreement resulted in discharge of the jurors, it was said that three of the quartet were women.

POTRERO FIELD THEORY SHAKEN

Showings in Julian Project Stir New Interest

May be Index of Extension in Opposite Direction

Plans for Townlot Operations Somewhat Disturbed

The possibility that the Potrero field may extend in a direction just opposite from that doped out by the majority of geologists is indicated by progress that has been noted in the Julian Petroleum Corporation's Cypress No. 1. At 4800 feet this well picked up a streak of oil sand which, it is believed, may be a stringer of the sand found by the Associated Oil Company in its Cypress No. 1 at a point 1350 feet higher. The Julian well is drilling ahead and unless it picks up the sand within the next 100 feet, probably will have to go on down for a zone below the one found by the Associated Oil Company.

This turn of affairs may revise the entire economic aspect of the Potrero development. Operators have been anticipating a townlot proposition similar to Los Cerritos and Huntington Beach, and on the strength of the prevailing geological theory that the Julian well should be higher on the structure than the Associated well, a dozen derricks have gone up in its vicinity, and one well has been spudded in.

But if present indications are worth anything the field may include only a comparatively small portion of the subdivided district and will instead take in large tracts which the Associated, Marland and Julian interests hold farther to the west. This will mean fewer wells, and probably larger production per well, and there may be a smaller number of operators to profit from it.

It is pointed out that even if the Julian Cypress No. 1 is too near the edge to get the upper zone, there is every possibility that it may pick up a productive lower zone, which as a rule extends farther from the center of the field than the top zone. Should this occur the townlot operators still will have a chance to be in the money, even if they are too far out for the top sand.

The General Petroleum Corporation, which spudded in a well about ten days ago, is drilling ahead at about 1800 feet. None of the other operators who have derricks up has started actual drilling. They are waiting for more definite information as to what may be expected.

WILLCOX OIL PROJECT IN DARK SHALE

Hole is Reported Down 2330 Feet With Outlook Fair for Production

WILLCOX (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The well of the Willcox Oil and Gas Company now is down 2330 feet, in dark shale and brown sandstone, with report of filtering paraffine base oil.

The same interests, headed by F. L. Copening, incorporated as the Bowie Oil and Gas Syndicate, are sinking a well, now 3670 feet deep, near Bowie. Six-inch casing now is being placed.

The last drilling is reported to have been in green sand, carrying some oil. In the Bear Springs section of Graham county, north of here, a rig is being built by the Bear Springs Oil Company, headed by Robert Thomas of Globe.

Dr. W. F. Green, manager of the Adamana district oil operations, states that the well is gassing heavily and that much oil is found in the bailings. A new 3500-foot cable has been installed.

The Great Basin well has been shut down for repairs to the boiler. Plans have been outlined for a second well, in which progress is expected to be speeded by the log of the first. The company has an interest in two wells now being drilled in the San Juan Basin.

MALJAMAR ADDS NEW PRODUCER

Project in Artesia Area Reported Making Nearly 340 Barrels Daily

ARTESIA (N. M.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The Maljamar Oil and Gas Corporation's State No. 1 well on Sec. 16, 17-32, is flowing through the two-inch tubing, and making ten barrels an hour. The Grace Mitchell No. 1, on Sec. 5, 17-32, is drilling at 4050 feet and will be shot within the next few days.

The next completion looked for is the Midcontinent Oil Company's Woolley-Jones No. 1 well on Sec. 21, 17-30, now drilling at 2650 feet and making 2,500,000 feet of gas from a depth of 1800 feet.

The Ohio Oil Company is still working to drill out a couple of oak-um plugs in the No. 1 on the William Mitchell permit, Sec. 12, 17-32, at 4062 feet. Broken tools is being used as the cutting medium. The Prairie Oil and Gas Company's Reed No. 1 on Sec. 10, 17-31, is below 3600 feet with no additional oil sands having been encountered.

Another test is to be put down west of the Pecos River, work to start during the coming week. The well will be known as the Sigma No. 1 and will be on Sec. 25, 17-26. Rotary tools will be used to the artesian water level at about 1000 feet, and the completion will be with cable tools, contract calling for a 2500-foot test.

It is reported that six wells will be drilled by Thomas R. Williams of Long Beach, Cal., who closed a deal during the week for approximately 12,000 acres, including six government permits in San Juan county.

United Republic Gives Result of Mill Test on Ore

The United Republic Gold Mining Company of Los Angeles has received returns from an experimental mill test on ores from its Oatman, (Ariz.) property, the tests being made in this city on about eighty pounds of gold-silver ore averaging $48.66 to the ton, and which was crushed to about forty mesh before mill treatment. Three grades of concentrates were returned with values recorded as follows:

On No. 1, $715.08 to the ton; No. 2, $289.36 per ton, and No. 3, $675.97 per ton. The test, it is stated, proved that the mine run of ore could be economically handled by concentration and at a high saving of the assay value of the heads. The company, which is now arranging for this construction of a concentrating plant for its Century lead-silver mine out of Kingman, in the same State, also has mill installation in contemplation for its Oatman mine.

P. L. Mullen, president and general manager of the company, announces that Charles F. Blanton, an experienced mining operator of Arizona, is now associated with the company and that he will assist in mine development and operation, having acquired an interest in the property.

Oil Operations in Kern Fields Point to Record

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) With fifty-one new oil wells begun in Kern county during the last six weeks, development work here promises to set a new record during 1927. The total of new drillings was swelled by twelve new holes during the past week and these were divided among nearly all the fields in the county.

The new wells are: Union Oil Company No. 19, Section 28, 30-24, Elk Hills, and No. 3, Section 5, 27-28, Poso Creek; George F. Getty No. 2, Section 14, 28-27; Barnsdall Oil Company No. 1, Section 20, 27-23, and Howard S. Mountford No. 1, Section 18, 27-19, hill in Kern River; Standard Oil Company No. 21, Section 7, 32-24; Frank D. Gore-Corporation No. 2, Section 18, 27-19, and General Petroleum Corporation No. 12, Section 32, 31-24, all in Midway; Max L. Fray No. 1, Section 1, 30-20, Temblor; Universal Consolidated Oil Company, No. 46, Section 32, 26-21; McKittrick Hills Oil Company No. 2, Section 18, 30-22, McKittrick; Carneros Oil Company No. 46, Section 30, 28-21, Belridge.

WATER IN OIL IS ALARMING

Operators in Ventura Field Seeking Cause For Encroachment of Moisture; Investigation Likely

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The behavior of the Petroleum Securities Company's Orton No. 1 well on the south dip of the Ventura-avenue field at Ventura is causing many operators to regard it with suspicion. The well started flowing several weeks ago at the rate of about 4000 barrels per day, although it was regarded as being far out on the south dip. According to reports, the production soon began dropping off and the hole began making considerable water. Last week the well was reported to be yielding about 1600 barrels per day, with nearly 800 barrels of that listed as water.

This water problem has been puzzling the company for many days, and apparently the engineers have not been able to determine where the water is coming from. It is generally believed that it is not bottom water. Suspicion points strongly to a faulty casing, according to reports, but there is a still stronger suspicion among other operators that it is edge water, and that it may shortly begin creeping into the whole west end.

Reports during the past few days indicate that the Taylor and Edison wells of the Shell company, adjoining the Orton No. 1, on the north, are beginning to show symptoms of water trouble, and it is feared that this symptom may shortly extend itself to not less than fifty wells in the west end of the field. It is considered quite likely that the cause of the water trouble in Orton No. 1 may shortly be subjected to rigid investigation, perhaps through the medium of the State Mining Bureau, in the hope of removing the danger of the field being flooded with water. It is admitted, however, by a number of operators, that the Orton No. 1 may be entirely blameless in the matter.

It would not be surprising if edge water might be creeping into the oil sands of the west end of the field. There are about seventy wells, closely located in that territory, and many of them have been producing over a period of years extending back as far as 1914. Since they were drilled more than 25,000,000 barrels of oil have been taken out of that area, so it is easily possible that water trouble may be developing there. In the event that it is, however, it is not thought likely that it would reach the more productive part of the field for a long time to come.

Glowing Report on Vallecito Mine Outlook

Upon returning from a trip to Vallecito, Thomas H. Lipps, president of the Vallecito Mining Company, gave an enthusiastic report regarding progress at the mine. He stated that the company has completed over 1600 feet of underground work and that in the last 150 feet of the main drift gold was encountered as high as eight feet above bedrock.

"Recovery from prospecting operations at Vallecito during the past forty-five days has exceeded $3000, although a comparatively small amount of gravel has been taken out," Mr. Lipps says. He reports that 5000 tons, or about $30,000 worth of ore, has already been blocked out and that more is being blocked out daily.

NEW PIPE LINE BEGUN

Project Links Pecos County Pool in Texas to Railroad

McCAMEY (Tex.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Construction of an eight-inch pipe line from the new oil pool recently opened in the eastern part of Pecos county to loading racks at McCamey on the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad is now underway by the Transcontinental Oil Company which, jointly with the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas Company, brought in the discovery well.

This well is attracting wide attention in oil circles, because it showed an initial production of 2200 barrels in eighteen hours from a depth of only 1001 feet, with the hole, only two feet in the sand. The Transcontinental Oil Company has contracted to supply the Humble Oil and Refining Company with 5000 barrels of crude oil daily from the new pool.

RICHFIELD DRILLING POSTPONED BY RAINS

Damage to roads on account of rains has been such that drilling at the Richfield Oil Company's explorative wells in Piru Canyon, Ventura county, and on the Wreden ranch in San Luis Obispo county, has been suspended until April 1. It is foreseen that further rains may again close the roads. The drilling crews are to be temporarily withdrawn and used in the Los Angeles basin.

FOUR ACES ORE FINDS REPORTED

Four Important Strikes Said to Have Been Made Since First of Year

Since the first of the year four important gold-ore uncoverings have been made in the development of the property of the Four Aces Mining Company near Foresthill, Placer county, three of which occurred in the old workings of the mine during the last thirty days.

The last three were of major importance inasmuch as large deposits of quartz were uncovered that were sensationally rich in their gold content, the last find, made a few days ago, consisting of eighteen inches of quartz estimated to carry values of $15,000 to the ton, the rock being so permeated with gold in a native state that the ore is difficult to break.

These new finds were made by means of crosscuts and winzes from the old mine workings, within a circle radius of about 100 feet, the dip of the veins being such that it is believed that all four of the ore shoots will intersect at greater depth, according to Superintendent Martin Costello, who is now sinking a winze to the point of juncture, at an estimated depth of from 100 to 150 feet. Small lots of this ore are being crushed and treated by barrel amalgamation, the last run yielding 203.70 ounces of gold amalgam which, from mint returns, had a value of $3700.41. In making experimental tests by this method a number of similar shipments have been made running from $2000 to $3000 each.

Former Federal Marshal in New Mining Venture

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Tom Sparkes, former United States Marshal in Arizona and for years a mining operator at Prescott and Jerome, now is tunneling into a steep mountainside in the eastern Huachucas, thirty miles due west of Bisbee.

He is working in milling ore that samples about $20 a ton, developing a deposit of remarkable size that can be stoped at a minimum of cost.

Values are in gold, lead and zinc, with the addition of about 1½ per cent copper. The district is a relatively new one and is exciting much interest among mining men.

Operator Rigs Up for Test in Jasmine Area

DELANO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Chanslor-Canfield Midway Oil Company is rigging up on Section 28, 28-27 in the Jasmine district, preparatory to making a test for oil. The company has acquired 1760 acres from Vernon, Eupenia, Inez, Carl and Helen Carver, which adjoin the section upon which drilling will start by March 17.

If oil is discovered on Section 28, the company is to begin drilling on the Carver property within ninety days, and if no oil is found in the Section 28 well, the company must test the Carver holdings within twenty-one months. Oil royalty is to be at one-eighth.

(Exclusive) Mine operators and mining men from all parts of California will convene in Sacramento the 23rd inst. to discuss the administration's plan to group the mining bureau, Fish and Game Commission, board of forestry and State parks into one State department, and other measures vital to the mining industry now before the State Legislature.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of California Chapter No. 1, Kern and San Bernardino chapter and the Mother Lode chapter of the American Mining Congress. It will convene at 10 a.m. at the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce.

DIGGINGS IN OPENING UP CALAVERAS

Boundary Cone Company Expects to Put Project on Early Production

In the development of the gold-placer diggings of the Boundary Cone Gold Mines Company in Calaveras county, the second upraise has been made from the shaft crosscut into the gold-bearing gravel on the bedrock of an ancient river channel. This raise is being timbered, and as soon as completed regular gold production will be under way.

The channel carrying the rich gold bars is from 300 to 500 feet in width from rim to rim, and about a mile in length on company domain. Two upraises to bedrock from the crosscut, have been made to reach the gravel, said to carry gold values of approximately $25 to the cubic yard. Connection may soon be made from upraise to upraise, along the bottom of the channel, and drifting, soon to be carried on, is expected to open up large yardage of rich gravel.

In anticipation of the uncovering of the gravel bar the company had already purchased a gravel-washing machine, which had been delivered to a point a mile and a half from the diggings before the coming of recent heavy storms. As soon as possible, however, the plant will be installed when regular gold recovery will begin.

Some water is being encountered as work progresses, but this is being easily cared for by the pumping plant already in place for such an emergency. The principal office of the company is in Los Angeles.

Novel Type of Quartz Plant in Operation

ROUSE (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive) Two miles southwest of this point, the Great Western Gold and Copper Mining and Milling Company, E. P. McAllister manager, is operating a Denver quartz mill and concentrator of novel type.

The ore is an oxidized light hematite, with elusive flaky gold that has escaped the ordinary methods of concentration and may not be suitable for cyaniding. Instead of the usual concentrating table, the company uses one that has grooves instead of riffles.

This is said to get practically all the free gold, with a saving of 90 per cent of assay values. Other plants on the same ore have saved only about 50 per cent. The mine is four miles from the mill. There is talk of pumping water to the mine and of erection there of a 200-ton mill.

RICHFIELD AREA AGAIN TO FRONT

Oldest Producing District Staging Comeback

Output of Company in Field 6200 Barrels Daily

The Richfield district, one of the oldest producing fields in the Los Angeles basin, having been discovered by the Union Oil Company in 1919, when its Chapman No. 1 came in as a 6000-barrel producer, has again come to the front as an important factor in oil production. Relegated to partial obscurity a few years ago when Santa Fe Springs and Long Beach were at their peak, Richfield has, largely through Union's development, again assumed a prominent place among the basin fields.

In this district the Union Oil Company owns and holds under lease 650 acres, a large part of which is proven territory. During the past year Union has drilled four wells into deeper sand and each now is producing about 500 barrels daily. Their completion proved up approximately 100 acres of company holdings.

Union's production from the Richfield district is now about 6200 barrels a day from sixty-two wells. This is an average of 100 barrels per well, which is considered a high average, considering that many of the wells have been producing for from six to eight years. On the Chapman lease, where the discovery well was drilled eight years ago, Union has twenty producers, with a gross production exceeding 3500 barrels a day. This is an average of 167 barrels per well, the highest of any lease in the field.

Union is now drilling or preparing to drill seventeen wells at Richfield. Two are on the Chapman lease, six on the Stern lease, four on the T. & G. lease, three on the Y.L.G. lease and one on the Towell lease. Several of these wells are nearing the production stage and completions may be expected within the next few weeks.

On the Stearns Fee property in the Brea-Olinda area the production, according to official reports, is encouraging and substantiates former expectations from this property. In this area, as in the Richfield district, the lower sands are being sought.

Four wells have been drilled to lower horizons and completed with an average daily production of about 850 barrels each. Union is now receiving a total of 3960 barrels daily from its Stearns property. This production is coming from twenty-nine wells, an average of 143 barrels per well. Union is now drilling two wells on the Stearns property and has staked locations for two others.

TEST OF NEW AREA PENDING

Extensive Wildcatting Campaign in Southeastern Corner of New Mexico on Program for Year

ARTESIA (N. M.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—A thorough testing of the oil possibilities of the southeastern corner of New Mexico will be made during the current year. Practically all of the acreage in that area is now owned by the major companies, with the Midwest Refining Company, the Marland Oil Company and the Texas Company controlling the majority.

The latest block to be picked up from Texas marine waters, it is believed that mountainous area in Southern Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle prevented widespread connections during most of the early Permian time. Later in the Permian epoch the conditions that brought about the deposition of the terrestrial and near-shore sediments, which now constitute the red beds, spread northward from Southern Oklahoma and westward and southward over Western Texas.

In Clear Fork, lime shales, mostly red, with some sandstone, limestones and beds that now comprise dolomites, were laid down in the longitude of Coke and Runnels counties, while farther west in Sterling county and Eastern Glasscock county, conditions were suitable for the accumulation of considerable thickness of limestone, which was contemporaneous with anhydrite and rock salt deposited still farther west in the more central portions of this shallow inland part of the Permian sea.

A cross-section, peg model map made by the New Mexico Oil Men's Association shows the apparent extinguence of such a "high" from the Big Lake field west, crossing the Permian sea bed. It shows large basins in this sea, one of which is in Loving county, near the Pinal Dome well.

The Texas Company is now building a road through the sands to their location in Sec. 22, 26-37. The next six months will prove or condemn this part of New Mexico.

MILL IN OPERATION

Tom Reed Plant Again Running After Rehabilitation

OATMAN (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The Tom Reed mill has been started again, after rehabilitation company account, and will be operated again by the corporation. It has capacity for 300 tons a day, compared with its maximum consumption of 140 tons during the past period of lease to the Shank interests.

The first ore handled is from the 500 and 600-foot levels of the Rea Harrison property. Other good ore is coming from operations on the Astec 700 level, hoisted at the United American shaft, thence trammed to the mill. This ore body is about eight feet wide and is said to carry $18 in gold.

OIL LEASE TAKEN ON SHEEP LAND IN KERN

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Charles Bloemer of Bakersfield has leased 640 acres from Louis Olcese in the sheep country fifteen miles northeast of Bakersfield, for oil development. The holding comprises the southwest quarter of Sec. 17, the northwest and southeast quarters of Sec. 21, and the northwest quarter of Sec. 27, all in township and range 29-29. Twenty-five dollars an acre annual rent is to be paid for deferred drilling.

CARDER IN REPORT ON ORD MINES

Engineer Says Work of Development is Making Satisfactory Headway

Most satisfactory results are following development work on the property of the Ord Mountain Mines, Inc., in San Bernardino county, according to Capt. J. L. Carder, consulting engineer and general manager, who states that some exceptionally fine ore, both in value and size, has recently been uncovered in the Rio Vista workings, in which there is a generous sprinkling of native copper.

On the 600-foot level of the mine, Capt. Carder says, the cross-cut has been retimbered, while a drift run on the vein to the south has resulted in showing an increase of from six to ten feet in the size of the ore body.

Besides its native copper content the ore carries gray copper and red oxides of copper. The formation is in the sulphide zone, and the recent appearance of water in the face of the workings is regarded as being an indication of more open ground ahead, and the existence of ore deposits of magnitude.

Assays have not been made available, as to the metallic value of the new strike, which is known to carry appreciable values in gold, as well as in copper, but the company has practically arranged for the construction of a 200-ton oil flotation mill and leaching plant, soon to be installed for the treatment of large tonnages of ore already made available in the mine workings, this ore carrying values of better than 5 per cent copper and from $3 to $5 in gold to the ton. The working force at the mine is being increased.

BARRIE AS ELUSIVE AS HIS "PETER PAN"

Barrie is not so much a man as a myth, a fable, a fairy tale, a midsummer night's dream, a creation of moonbeams, a beneficent sprite peering from behind bushes in Kensington Gardens and disappearing in the arch of a rainbow. Barrie is as shy as a fawn, as fleeting as a vision. Bernard Shaw's name is blazoned in a brass plate at No. 10 Adelphi Terrace, but no directory, no telephone book, will disclose the secret of the dweller on the other side of the street. If you want him you must inquire at Kirriemuir (which is pronounced Thrums,) and Kirriemuir is a long ways off. And even at Kirriemuir you would probably not get on his trail, for he fogs the scent of his movements with the cunning of a creature of the woods.

And when at last you have run him to earth he may still elude you by the impalpable garment of silence with which he envelopes himself. When Mr. Frohman went to discuss with him the production of "The Little Minister" he tells us that "during the two hours I was there he did not utter more than twenty sentences and only two of these related to 'The Little Minister.' They were exactly alike and consisted of two words, 'Quite right.'" The stories of such experiences are numberless. It is not a silence of hostility or surliness or scorn. It is as though the faculty of speech will only respond to a certain touch, a hint that releases the genial current of the soul. Then it is that one enjoys as delicate a feast of good talk as this generation has to offer.—[A. G. Gardiner in "Portraits and Portents."

EXTENSION GRANTED TO START DRILLING

TAFT, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—For a consideration of $6414, Julius and Dorothy Fried have given the California Petroleum Corporation eighteen months' extension of time in starting drilling operations on the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Sec. 34, 32-24, in the Midway Sunset fields, four miles southeast of Taft, and an equal distance northeast of Maricopa. The extension dates December 12, 1926.

Fifteen women and men took part in a swim in the Vistula at Warsaw recently with the water 4 deg. below zero.

FLOW LESSENS IN OIL FIELD

Believed Section Has Best Producing Days

Two Outfits Have Struck Oil

The completion of three of the closely drilled wells of the Ventura-avenue field at Ventura in the past week, included the west end of the field where it is seen its best days may be past, production standpoint.

The three wells were among the last. They are on the west of the avenue and are 2 to 3 a week. The Shell Company's No. 13, just west of the avenue, completed at 4000 feet, is making some, and is only down an hour per day. The General Petroleum Corporation's Standard, No. 11, a quarter east side of the avenue, was placed at 4000 feet and is making 315 barrels per day.

These wells are at the west of them either, as the Shell Company's No. 14, at the base of the hill, and the Petroleum Securities Company's No. 1, on the north side of the avenue, are both doing the full limit allowed. Two new wells on the east side of the avenue, the Lloyd well, and the Shell No. 15, are now drilling to depth of 3000 feet.

The Petroleum Securities Company's No. 1, in the southeast corner of the field, is now down 4000 feet, and is making more than 7000 feet.

Ventura Avenue Land Lease Now Operated

The Ventura-avenue oil district has a new operator, as the lease known as the Rogers lease has been taken over by the Petroleum Company, and is said to be financed by Thomas Mellon.

It has passed the first hurdle on the west side of the avenue, on the west side of the Rubel, Chino and Rogers leases, and is planning to drill there in the near future.

The Baker property, on the west of the Rogers lease, and on the north of the Petroleum Securities Association, and which is now drilled by the General Petroleum Corporation, is preparing to test the Upper Pliocene sands.

On the south side of the avenue, the Petroleum Securities Company is drilling its No. 13, just west of the Rubel lease, and is preparing to drill there in the near future.

Two Outfits Have Stuck in Holes

The completion of three wells in the closely drilled area of the Ventura-avenue field at Ventura, during the past week, indicated that the west end of the field apparently has seen its best days from a production standpoint.

The three wells were completed in the flat. Two are on the east side of the avenue and one is on the west. The Shell Company's Rice No. 18, just west of the avenue, was completed at 6010 feet, in the oil sand, and is only doing 540 barrels per day. The General Petroleum Corporation's Notting, No. 11, on the east side of the avenue, was completed at 6230 feet and is only making 495 barrels, although it was expected to yield at least 1500 barrels. General Petroleum's Nutting No. 8, completed at 5600 feet, only produced 215 barrels per day.

These wells are all within 100 feet of each other, on the level land at the base of the 700-foot hill known upon which are situated the famous Lloyd wells, which have been producers from the gusher area. Drilling the hill into the east, the new wells on the flat are on a level with the Lloyd wells which have been drilling to 6400 to 6600 feet.

The Star Petroleum Company's Barnett No. 1, in the northeastern part of the field, is down 6000 feet and the drill is now stuck. The Exploration Company, on the south side of the field, has a failure reported in the Sexton No. 1 which is now over 7000 feet.

Ventura Avenue
Land Leased by
New Operator

The Ventura-avenue field at Ventura has a new operator. The area is known as the Rogers & Midway Company, and is said to be partly financed by Ventura business men. It has leased the Sam Buker property on the west side of the avenue, south of the Rose Chiles and Magnolia leases, and is planning to start a well there in the near future.

The Buker property ranges west of the Risley lease, which was drilled on the land of the Ventura Avenue Association, and which is now being drilled by the General Petroleum Corporation.

On the south dip of the field the Petroleum Securities Company is drilling in its Willett No. 1 at 5000 feet and is making foundation for the Willett No. 2. It is also building for its Orton No. 2, and preparing foundation for the Orton No. 3.

New Shaft at
Progressing

BISBEE (Ariz.) Feb. 19. (Exclusive)—The new Phelps Dodge shaft at Warren now is down about 600 feet, with six feet a day being made, according to the contractors, the Longyear Development Company of Minneapolis. The first station is to be cut at 700 feet or even deeper.

Operations at the Dunn and Shattuck-Dunn Mining Company properties have been resumed, following repair of one of the three engines which was wrecked by a boiler explosion. Work soon will be resumed afresh on sinking the main shaft, now 1870 feet deep, to 2000 feet. The shaft has been timed up and repaired.

More bussess of better type than before are being put in operation at Mexico City.

uating Prices

PRICES and values fluctuate. The strongest railroad bonds, in the early nineties, were selling at prices to yield approximately 3½%; and in 1918 sold to yield as high as 6%. The same bonds today are selling to yield 4¾% and less.

LUCK AND MERIT

Fifteen years ago, Mussolini, penniless, jobless and foodless, walked the streets, begging for work.

Many men, like Byron, have gone to bed unknown and arisen in the white light of fame. Not infrequently those who are swept to the heights of wealth or position fall as ignominiously as Humpty Dumpty.

Fate at times chooses blindly, whether it be in the realms of business, the workaday world we all know or the chancellors of history.

Not merit alone can retain the gifts of luck or opportunity.

The bluffers, four-flushers and false-alarms ride high at times, but the man who stays put in his job does so because he is giving quid pro quo.

There is no magic system for beating the old game, excepting the system of having the knowledge, the skill, and the wisdom to hold your high place when circumstance thrusts you forward.—[Thrift.

HAVOC OF STORM SURVEYED

Summary of Damages in Various Fields of California by Flood and Wind Presented Here

Floods and high winds sweeping through the petroleum producing districts of the State, inundating, those fields which are situated in low or swampy territory, and blowing down scores of derricks on the rolling prairies of Kern county, did much to delay field operations last week. Even where no actual damage to equipment or leases occurred, soft roads, and weakened bridges retarded transportation so that the wildcatting activity of the week was reduced practically to a standstill.

Probably the most spectacular havoc wrought by the storms occurred in Seal Beach, where there was, however, practically no damage to wells or leases. But for several days the only thing which saved the properties of the Mariard Oil Company, Standard Oil Company and Associated Oil Company from inundation was the system of levees which the operators had constructed around their leases for just such an emergency. None of the levees built by the oil companies gave way, although for a time the floods rose to a scant six inches from the top of the dikes.

The county flood-control levee on San Gabriel River, which crosses the Bryant lease of the Associated Oil Company, and the Mariand's Bixby lease was washed out early in the week, and for a time the parts of both these leases, outside the line of levees, were under water. The situation was rendered more dangerous by the prevailing high tide, but as soon as the tide retreated and it was possible to work, scores of men began constructing auxiliary earthworks to reinforce the lease levees.

Thus aside from the imminent danger which prevailed for several days at Seal Beach when the wild waters angrily attacked the earthworks, and threatened momentarily to flood the field, the principal effect on the field was the cessation of operations on most of the drilling wells.

In Kern county, where the wide sweep of low hills and rolling plains gave the high winds an opportunity to do their worst, more than 100 derricks were blown down. Most of the havoc was created by the storm in its first onslaught, in the brief breathing spell which followed the opening blast of the storm, crews were set to work, tightening guy wires, reinforcing weak foundations, and otherwise preparing for the renewal of hostilities, which came, but did little damage. Losses to the oil companies, caused by the storm, are estimated at about $250,000 in the Kern county oil fields.

The worst single instance of disaster occurred at Rose, where an 80,000-barrel steel storage tank on the Union Oil Company's tank farm collapsed, after its foundation had been partially washed out, spilling about 70,000 barrels of oil. Part of the oil was recovered, but due to the fact that much of the surrounding country was under water, considerable of the oil settled down on communities several miles away, and added to the unhappiness of many persons whose homes were already flooded.

Ichthyol Yield in Calavada Oil Well Runs High

COLUSA, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The Calavada Oil Company, operating in the high-gravity Colusa oil field near Williams, announces that its No. 2 well is producing three barrels of high-grade petroleum per day, and that the No. 1 will be drilled out and as the No. 1 is cleaned out and placed on the pump. The management says that the well is yielding nine to ten pounds of ichthyol per barrel, the product being worth $5.80 per pound. The company has added 14,000 acres to its original holdings, and has obtained leases on several inside blocks.

Consorted Petroleum, headed by Joe A. Brown of Fullerton, and other companies controlled by California and Nevada investors, are reported to be preparing to drill on adjacent sections. It is also reported that a small refinery using the Huber absorption process is to be erected within sixty days.

MISUNDERSTAND "CREOLE"

The creoles of Louisiana are the result of intermarriage between the hardy and hardboiled courriers du bois who came down from Canada with Iberville and Bienville and explored and built up the wilderness along the lower Mississippi and the French and Spanish women who came over to make a start at populating the depressingly large province of Louisiana.

They also include the descendants of early French settlers who came to Louisiana from France and the French colonies. Many Spaniards flocked to Louisiana during the Spanish possession and intermarried with the French settlers. The descendants of these marriages frequently retained their Spanish names but adopted the French language and customs and are, consequently, known as creoles, too, writes Kenneth L. Roberts in the Saturday Evening Post.

Many of the leading citizens of the State are proud of their creole ancestry. To their great distress, there has sprung into existence, in northern circles, the belief that the word "creole" is synonymous with the word "mulatto." This belief causes as much excitement in creole circles as would be caused among the members of England's House of Lords if they were credited with being half Tartar and half Siwash Indian.

TOOK IT FOR WHISKY

Edna Ferber, the novelist, said in New York the other day:

"Fads in literature are dreadful things, and I seem to be introducing a libel fad. Well, even a libel fad would be better than the Freudian fad. They all write Freudian novels now, as they all wrote historical novels at one time and Scotch dialect novels at another.

"Do you remember the Scotch dialect period? You couldn't open a book or a magazine without striking page after page of 'Hoot mons' and 'Haversee' and 'Loshes' from the pen of Barrie or Crockett or R. L. S.

"Readers couldn't understand this Scotch dialect. Publishers couldn't understand it, either. I knew a publisher who made so much money out of Scotch stories that out of gratitude he rented a castle in Scotland one summer. Over the granite fireplace in the castle hall was carved the couplet:

'Gang East, gang West,
But Hame is best.'

FAIRCHILD TELLS AJO MINE PLAN

Program for Extensive Development of Estate May Cost $200,000

AJO (Ariz.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—D. D. Fairchild, a Los Angeles mining engineer, states that plans under way may mean expenditure of $200,000 on development of the property of the Ajo Extension Mining Company, three miles south of this point.

The company owns 400 acres with many croppings of carbonate copper ores, developed to a degree by forty-two shallow pits and shafts, at a cost of $55,000.

It is the intention to diamond drill and thus develop the size and depth of the ore bodies. It also is expected that the surface ores may be marketed at a profit with the New Cornelia Copper Company, as they may be reduced readily in the Ajo leaching plant, which now is running at much less than capacity, since operation of the new sulphide mill.

Ore in the Extension claims is said to cover a large area and to be susceptible of economical mining by the same steam-shovel methods that have been so successful in the New Cornelia.

Drilling in New Cornelia ground is said by General Manager Michael Curley to have returned unexpectedly good results, with the development of more and valuable ore at greater depths.

TO STROLL ON SEA FLOOR MILE DOWN

EXPLORER GOES TO HAYTI TO SET UNDERSEA RECORD AND STUDY STRANGE FISH LIFE

William Beebe, director of tropical research for the New York Zoological Society, is going after the world's record for deepest down. In an all-steel, glass-windowed cylinder he intends to drop 5000 feet below the surface of the tropic seas and meander about observing the strange forms of life there.

"What do you expect to find?" the naturalist was asked.

"If I knew I wouldn't go down," he grinned.

The naturalist's eyes, dreamy and withdrawn when discussing plans for his lecture at the Times Square Theater, brightened when he talked of his deepest deep-sea adventure.

"No human being has ever visited the deepest parts of the ocean," he said. "There was a German who went down some 125 feet in a sort of caisson, similar to what I hope to use. It is perfectly simple. You have a tight cylinder, with a screwed-on top, which cannot possibly work loose with a pressure of a ton to a square inch at 5000 feet below the surface.

"You make your own oxygen inside the cylinder as you need it. Physicists assure me the thing is entirely practical. Houdini stayed down one hour in the same sort of arrangement. The only reason no one ever visited the deepest parts of the sea is that there was no financial advantage in such a trip.

"You have a little glass window, also constructed to withstand the tremendous pressure, through which you survey the world about you. It will be perfectly brilliant, just like Broadway, as all the fishes carry their own electric lighting plants. Most of the deep-sea fishes die when brought to the surface, but I managed to keep one of them alive for a few minutes on the Sargasso expedition, and when it was placed in a dark room it became suffused with the most exquisite pale-green light."

The plans for Mr. Beebe's deep-sea dive still are indefinite and dependent largely upon the success of experiments which he will conduct this winter in the coast waters of Hayti, probably in the harbor of Port-au-Prince. He expects to sail shortly for a four months' expedition on which various forms of tropic equipment will be tried out.

He will carry with him down into the fishes' secret haunts a hand motion-picture camera, inclosed in steel with which to record at close range the antics of the finny brethren. He expects also to carry a waterproof telephone through which he will dictate his observation to a stenographer on the deck of the ship above him.

"Whenever I have been down under the water before I have had to come up after ten minutes or so and dictate then what I could remember.

"It was like describing the circus after you reached home," he chatted on. "With the telephone at hand I can describe everything just as it happens. I hope also to wear some sort of warmer clothing than a bathing suit and helmet, for although the water is delightfully warm one begins to shiver after ten minutes or so."

This expedition will be wholly in the neighborhood of Hayti, so that a three-masted schooner is all the explorers need. Tents will be set up on deck, making a deep-sea houseboat.

For his greatest adventure, however, Mr. Beebe plans to circumnavigate the globe along the line of the equator, as far as possible, noting the difference in animal and vegetable life in various sections. The Arcturus, which carried him to the mysterious Sargasso Sea, will again be pressed into service. A side trip, before the equatorial belt is traversed, will carry him down over the deep-sea cliff, known to science as the "Continental Shelf," just off the coast of New Jersey.

This is where in prehistoric ages the water from the American continent plunged over a cliff of great height into the Atlantic Ocean. There is also the Hudson Gorge, which needs to be explored, Mr. Beebe thinks.—[New York Herald Tribune.

TRINITY PLACER FORGING AHEAD

Day and Night Shifts Work on Hydraulic Project

Recent Rains Said to Make Water Supply Ample

Mt. Shasta Silica Plans for Reduction Plant

REDDING, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Day and night shifts have been put to work on the hydraulic property of the Trinity Gold Bar Syndicate, located in the Big Bar district of Trinity county. The management reports that a large deposit of profitable gravel is exposed, with recent storms assuring ample water for a long season.

Water for the dry season is stored by a dam on Big Swede Creek, and piped across the Trinity River. A tunnel takes the water under the State highway.

Plans for the erection of a reduction plant are being completed by the Mount Shasta Silica Company owning extensive properties along the Pit River. Development of the silica deposits has been in progress several years, and a profitable market awaits shipments of the refined product.

Los Angeles capitalists have purchased the Sybil gold mine near French Gulch and optioned twenty adjoining claims, according to advices from the old gold camp. The Sybil has produced considerable rich ore, and recent work is credited with exposing a large amount of profitable quartz.

The old Mad Ox group has passed to new interests and been reopened. A strong demand for promising gold properties and prospects in Shasta, Siskiyou and Trinity counties is reported by owners and prospectors.

Court Ruling Shows Large Profit in Oil

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—A six-year-old court decree filed for record here, wherein the court ruled in favor of the government against seven oil companies operating in the Midway fields near Fellows, defines in brief the tremendous profits accruing from small parcels of Kern oil lands within short periods of time.

The case was an action of the government in 1921 against the Thirty-two Oil Company, Buick, California Midway, Associated, Standard, California Natural Gas Company and J. M. McLeod. The ruling shows that within a period of only a few years $1,500,000 in oil was pumped from one quarter section of land described as the northeast quarter of Sec. 32, 31-28.

The court ordered the cancellation of a placer claim covering the property and ruled that the property be turned over to the government.

A TRIBUTE TO THE HUMBLE BOVINE

In an encomium on the dairy cow it is claimed she has played a highly important part in civilization. It has been stated that nations have reached their peaks socially and industrially by the development of the dairy industry and that in ignoring the cow the period of decay had its beginning. It has also been contended that with the development of the domesticated bovine there has been the greatest advance in sculpture, and that the greatest epics and lyrics ever written might be absent if the contributions of the dairy cow had not made an advancing civilization possible.

In building up this argument the example of the Pilgrims is pertinent. When they landed from the Mayflower they were without cows and it is related that 60 per cent of the children born died. This proved the value of the dairy cow and the Pilgrims immediately imported cattle from Europe. As a result the deaths among the children went down to 10 per cent.

In the draft in the World War 37 per cent of the applicants were deficient, failing to meet the requirements of the service, and it was held that this was because of improper food. Those who have unlimited faith in the dairy cow declared there had been a deficiency in the diet, especially as to milk, and urged a health program to overcome this, which called for four glasses of milk daily for each individual, fresh vegetables, fruit, exercise and plenty of sleep.

Without cows behind the wagons, homes in the prairies would never have been built, say dairy enthusiasts, who declare the dairy cow is still the watchword of progress and that she not only sustains the soil on which she lives but, in addition, sustains man. The humble bovine is exhibited as the great preventive of famine in this country in years to come and, it is urged, should be considered not in terms of dollars but in terms of human welfare, national security and successful husbandry. Whether the dairy cow is entitled to such a eulogy or not the value of the dairy products produced in the United States reaches a tremendous figure annually and there is no question of the importance of her contributions to health and progress.—[Exchange.

The Last Straw

They were lost in a snowstorm and had drifted off the main road and driven their car for miles without catching sight of a sign of human life. They were numb with cold, hungry, drowsy and tired. After what seemed an eternity of wandering they noticed a sign several hundred feet from the road, and a shout of joy went up from the weary travelers.

"That will tell us where we are and direct us somewhere, Henry," said his wife. "Go over and see."

Henry got out, floundered through the drifts in the dark, barked his shins several times, and, his teeth chattering with cold, finally reached the sign. He climbed the post struck a match and read the sign.

The family watched him wearily plodding back to them.

"What did it say?" they asked eagerly, when he reached them.

"'Drink No-Pag. It relieves fatigue.'" was his reply.—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

SILVER STRIKE SPURS ACTIVITY

Rich Ore Find Reported at Stud Mining Claim

Local Group Adds Holdings in Bullfrog District

Mina Mercury Pushing Work to Increase Output

RENO (Nev.) Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Rich Silver ore has been uncovered on the Lakeview claim of the Stud Mining Company by the Hard-Kranjack lease. The vein averages four feet wide, carries ruby silver assaying over $100 per ton, and was uncovered by a drift about 150 feet below surface. The company is controlled by Cooley Butler and associates of Los Angeles, and for several years has been developing gold-bearing deposits in the Last Hope and Mountain View claims. The new strike opens a large area of virgin ground to mining and has stimulated activity on neighboring properties near the old town of Wadsworth.

J. R. Bryan and partners in Hollywood who recently acquired the Pioneer mine in the Bullfrog district, have acquired substantial interests in the adjoining Mayflower mine, according to semiofficial statements. The Mayflower Company recently struck the long-sought Starlight vein, which is said to show two to four feet of ore sampling $20 to $25 a ton in gold. Other ledges have been uncovered in the main workings, and the management is preparing for shipments to mills at Tonopah.

The Mina Mercury Company headed by C. J. Anderson and residents of La Jolla, Cal., is pushing the 150-foot tunnel to open ore bodies below the main workings, with the purpose of increasing production of quicksilver from the present output of forty flasks monthly to over 100 flasks. One furnace is operating, and a large plant is to be erected when the tunnel reaches its objective. Quicksilver is commanding $100 per flask, with the demand reported to be increasing. The property is located near Mina.

Los Angeles and eastern capitalists have optioned the Ownership and Swagger sulphur deposits in the Black Rock Desert, sixty miles west of Winnemucca, and plan the erection of a large reduction plant. The group is credited with containing the only true sulphur vein ever found in the world, with the deposit forty feet wide and indicated for a length exceeding two miles at surface. The holdings are located near the properties of the Humboldt Sulphur Company, in which New York capital is interested.

Discoveries of a four-foot vein of lead-silver-copper ore in the Rebrouck property, and a twenty-foot vein of silver-gold copper ore in the New California, have added to the growing interest in the Quartz Mountain field. The New California management states shipments to the Thompson smelter will start shortly, while the Rebrouck Company expects to commence production in March. Heavy shipments are going out from the San Rafael, with occasional consignments sent out from the West Divide.

Considerable excitement prevails at Tonopah over a promising silver discovery three miles west of the Belmont mine. The ledge was uncovered at surface and is over four feet wide. It is apparently the extension of the main Tonopah ore belt as the formation and quarts closely resembles the deposits opened in the main properties. Hundreds of claims have been staked, and a community fund is being subscribed to defray preliminary expenses.

Mine and Oil Notes From Far and Near

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY

Qualitative analysis will be given to this department of the Times to correspondents on ores and minerals free of charge. Make each sample of an ounce or so in weight. Be sure to write a letter stating what tests are desired and give the approximate locality from which samples were taken. Do not put letters for questions. Give your name and address on paper wrapped with sample.

Quartzchist

DEWEYVILLE (Utah) Feb. 1.—Question: Sample found in Utah, Box Elder county. Please classify it and test for valuable minerals. M.

Answer: The sample is of greenish color and carries microscopic muscovite (potash mica.) It is slightly chromeiferous.

Clays

DEATH VALLEY, Feb. 1.—Q.: Herewith find four samples. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 were taken from near here. No. 4 is from Mohave county, Arizona. Can they be used for any commercial purpose, and are representative clays worth doing a little mining work thereon? B.

A.: No. 1 contains some bentonite (aluminum silicate;) quartz, and a little hydrous magnesium silicate. No. 2 cannot be fully determined by qualitative analysis, it seems to be impure halloysite mixed with calcite and traces of sulphur anhydride. No. 3, if decolorized, and washed might make a filtering clay; it breaks down in water and is hydrous. No. 4 is somewhat on the order of No. 1. Nos. 1 and 4 are fair grade clays. As to working the deposits of clay it is not possible to advise you with four small specimens only.

Uranium Absent

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 2.—Q.: Please analyze this sample of ore and give me the percentages and value of the minerals in it. S.

A.: Qualitative analysis only. Copper is present in several minerals such as azurite, malachite, and traces of indigo-copper. Limonite and traces of microscopic yellow mica (cat gold) found. Traces of auriferous pyrite in the specimen, and not tested for lead, zinc or silver.

Boron Traces

BARSTOW, Feb. 3.—Q.: Will you give me the ores and metals contained in the three samples? All from the Silver Mountain mining district. J.

A.: No. 1 is a tri-silicate of aluminum, magnesium, and lime; boron in low percentage. No. 2 is hydrous silicate of lime and magnesium; lime carbonate present with more or less iron and manganese. No. 3 is impure gypsum known as gypsite (a mixture of clay and gypsum) slight boron reaction. No free gold in any sample.

Not Alumite

RENO (Nev.) Feb. 3.—Q.: Sample No. 1 is reported to be alumite; if so does it contain potash in paying quantities? No. 2 is commonly called "porphyry" around here. It contains some small colitic matter that, when broken, looks like microscopic spokes in a wagon-wheel. Is this a fossil? There are also some white cubes in the rock; what are they? W.

A.: Sample No. 1 shows a slight pinkish tone, which, when wetted, gives a pronounced pinkish-white color; potash in very low percentage. It was given a slight roast, and while hot dropped into water and the solution yielded a slight alum taste. Soda is present; aluminum silicate found, and a reaction for sulphur was noted. The specimen seems to be an altered rhyolite, in part, carrying more or less halloysite (siliciferous aluminum hydrate or kaolin.) The white cubes are porphyritic, and referred to by some authors as "porphyry." Iron oxides present, and it somewhat resembles bauxite, but there is no aluminum oxide in the mass. The microscopic and radiated microscopic wagon-wheel spokes are pyrophyllite (hydrous aluminum silicate,) and not fossil matter.

Five Samples

SAN BERNARDINO, Feb. 4.—Q.: Please analyze the six samples for me. L.

A.: The container held but five specimens when received. No. 1 is chiefly calcite with more or less aragonite, and aragonite is also a variety of calcite. Strontium and zinc both in traces only. No. 2 is a low-grade concentrating ore carrying low percentages of microscopic pyrite, and traces of chalcopyrite. No. 3 consists of low grade mixtures of calcite, iron and manganese. No. 4 is a hand-squeezed boulder of clay, and No. 5 is cellular limonite (hydrous iron peroxide,) mixed with more or less manganese dioxide.

Low-Grade Fertilizer

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—Q.: Please test for fertilizer quality and gypsum content if any. Sample seven miles east of Oceanside, San Diego county, Calif. K.

A.: The specimen is lightweight, impure marl mixed with some gypsum and silica.

Uraplum Absent

SAN FERNANDO, Feb. 5.—Q.: The inclosed sample was found near San Fernando. Will you kindly test for pitchblende. C.

A.: The specimen is rather small for satisfactory tests; it is far removed from pitchblende, however, and it is not radioactive. It carries traces of magnetite and appears to be a mixture of iron silicate with altered hornblende.

Impure Bentonite

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 5.—Q.: Please classify the inclosed sample found in Mineral county, Nevada. Z. G. M.

A.: It is low-grade Bentonite and reacts for more or less hydrous magnesium silicate.

Six Specimens

NEW PINE CREEK (Or.) Feb. 6. Q.: All of the samples come from the Warren range of mountains in Modoc county, California, right on the State line between California and Oregon. Is there any possible chance for chrome or platinum in sample No. 1? Any gold or silver in No. 2? Is No. 3 a red vanadium oxide or vanadium mica? Kindly classify No. 4. No. 5, any gold or silver, and are the peacock colors of iron or copper? Near sample No. 6 is a poisonous spring. Does the mineral carry any arsenic? D.

A.: Sample No. 1 carries no platinum; it is amphibole rock. No. 2 is feldspathic rock; the crystal white matter present is lime carbonate; the yellow is chiefly iron (hydrous) peroxide and free gold is absent. Zinc and lead traces. No. 3, vanadium absent; the sample is pearlyte (rock.) No. 4 is hematite, arsenic present, and sparingly spotted with microscopic asbestos. The peacock colors in No. 5 are those of iron, and not copper mineral. For silver values consult assayers. No. 6 is a mixture of scorodite (hydrous arsenate of iron) with other arseniates of iron sesquioxides; all in low percentages It is probable that all of the samples represent rather doubtful ores and minerals.

Carbonates and Oxide

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—Q.: Have been on another trip to the ——— district. We did a little work on the ledge, but it did not seem to improve, in fact, the deeper we went the poorer it looked, so I have decided not to spend any more money on it. I am sending under separate cover a couple of samples from ledges in the same locality and would be pleased if you will let me know if they contain anything of value. X.

A.: The white sample No. 1 does not react for boron. It is a sugar-white mixture of calcite with some aragonite (another lime carbonate.) No. 2 is a silicious mixture, carrying limonite (hydrous iron peroxide,) with some lime carbonate.

Calcite

CULVER CITY, Feb. 7.—Q.: Sample found in Castaic Canyon. Please analyze it and give its classification. K.

A.: It is milk-white calcite with some dolomite.

ANTELOPE EXPERT ON JAZZ

Listens by Hour to Wild Radio Music

LISTENING FOR A MESSAGE FROM THE PLAINS

CHEYENNE, Feb. 20, (AP)—"Peach" Charles Belden's bottlefed antelope has been awarded a full set of R batteries for the distinction of being a unique radio fan.

The pet antelope, now just turning its first year, is the pet of the Belden family and as such joins the daily family circle around the loud speaker for the radio programs.

"Peach" is connoisseur of jazz music, but does not care for other features that crowd the ether waves. She will listen by the hour to the orchestras and bands, but speeches, never.

Since her capture, when very young, "Peach" has been one of the attractions for tourists who pass the Z Bar T ranch of Belden near Pittsburgh, Wyo. Antelope, according to Belden, are easily tamed and at present, through the operation of game laws forbidding their extermination, are almost as numerous in the State as deer.

In fact, they have become so tame in some sections of the State as to become pests and farmers have petitioned the State Legislature to reimburse them for damage done to hay fences.

FATE ALWAYS PACKS A WALLOP

At the Very Moment His Love Dream Almost Came True Fickle Fortune's False Smile Turned to Leering Mockery Then Blank Overwhelming Despair

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (AP)—Constantly in the midst of romance, Sidney Summerfield is no part of it.

Simply a supernumary like the spear carrier in the grand pageant, as a deputy clerk in the marriage license bureau he interviews prospective brides and bridegrooms more or less mechanically.

Yesterday, though, he sensed the love, even the grief and tragedy, which attend his job.

"I want a marriage license," said a man.

"Yes, of course," said Summerfield. "Your name?"

"John Downes."

"Name of the young woman?"

"Marion Tallius."

"Ahem! You'll pardon me, I hope, if I am mistaken, but another man just has received a license to marry a girl of that name. Care to look at her age and address?"

Downes gulped twice as he read the record, pulled down his hat and hurried out.

Summerfield tore up blank No. 1,111,454, upon which the only entry was:

"John Downes, aged 35 years."

Three Trapped in Mine Crawl Out to Safety

SCRANTON (Pa.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Three miners crawled to safety at 9 o'clock tonight after having been held prisoners in the Archbald mine of the Glen Alden Coal Company at Taylor since 7 o'clock Saturday night.

The men showed no ill effects from their imprisonment behind thousands of tons of coal and rock, and after examination by physicians at the mine were allowed to go to their homes.

Double Slaying in Iowa Laid to Boy's Jealousy

CEDAR RAPIDS (Iowa) Feb. 20. (AP) Kenneth Fehr, 19 years of age, shot and killed Dorothy Oxley, 17, at Marion, Iowa, tonight, and then committed suicide.

Jealousy over Miss Oxley accepting the company of another young man on her way home from church led to the tragedy, police said.

OIL KING IN NEW GOLF SKILL TEST

Rockefeller Will Match Ability in Game Against Archery Experts

ORMOND BEACH (Fla.) Feb. 20. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller will take part in a golf vs. archery match tomorrow on the Ormond Beach Golf Club links.

Paired with Gen. Ames, his golfing partner, 91 years of age, the oil magnate will play his usual eight holes, while Miss Dorothy Johnson, Bedford Springs, Pa., and Mrs. Charles S. Pike of Detroit, both archery experts, attempt to better the score with a bow and arrow.

By rules of the match, the arrows must strike the green before the archers may putt. This will be accomplished by shooting the arrow at a small toy balloon anchored near the cup. Mr. Rockefeller and Gen. Ames will hole out in the usual manner.

"I ought to have blanket insurance, though," Mr. Rockefeller said tonight in accepting the invitation to play in the match. "These arrows, they tell me, sometimes are blown back or the bows backfire, but I will take the chance. I know what I can do playing a golf course with golf implements and I'd like to see if any archer can do better or worse with a bow and arrow."

Mrs. Pike won both the Ormond Beach and all-Florida archery championships last season.

SINCLAIR DENIES TRIAL STAY AIM

Says He Will Return From Mexico for Hearing

Regards International Issue as Reconcilable

Confirmatory Concessions are Granted Americans

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—Questioned regarding a dispatch from Washington that attorneys acting in his behalf were contemplating filing a request for the postponement of his case, which opens March 7, Harry Sinclair denied that he had issued any such instructions. He explained that his present plans include his return to the United States in ample time to appear for the hearing.

As to existing relations between the United States and Mexico, Mr. Sinclair feels that an ultimate adjustment of the difficulties will be made. As to oil legislation in Mexico, he believes this subject is not insurmountable, and that the difficulties between the oil companies and the Mexican government will eventually be solved. These difficulties in the natural course of events cannot stand and should be eliminated, in the opinion of Sinclair.

While he has not stated that he is contemplating a break away from the policy of resistance put up by himself and other oil companies in Mexico against the government's petroleum legislation, Sinclair upholds his right to change his policy should he so desire. Sinclair spent an hour with Ambassador Sheffield yesterday, and declared after an interview, as he did after his talk yesterday with President Calles, "that oil had not been mentioned."

AMERICAN COMPANY GRANTED OIL CONCESSION

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20. (AP)—The government officially announces the issuance to the Transcontinental Petroleum Company, an American corporation, of confirmatory concessions to 2800 hectares (about 6200 acres) of oil lands in the State of Vera Cruz. The rights for oil exploration in this territory were acquired before May, 1917, when the present Constitution, under which the new petroleum law was enacted, became effective.

This is considered an acceptance of the new law by the Trans-Continental Company so far as these properties are concerned, although neither the government nor the company will make any comment on the official announcement.

Santa Fe Flyer Cuts Ten Hours From Schedule

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—A transcontinental speed record for a regular passenger train has been hung up by "The Chief," crack Chicago-California flyer of the Santa Fe Railroad, it was declared by officials today.

On Wednesday, last, at 3:30 p.m., the train left San Bernardino and on Friday at 3:38 p.m. it steamed into the Dearborn-street terminal, making a running time between the points of forty-eight hours and eight minutes. Had the train left Los Angeles, its usual Pacific Coast terminal, and maintained the same average speed, its running time to Chicago would have been fifty-three hours and eight minutes, or nine hours and fifty-two minutes faster than the present regular schedule.

It was endeavoring to make up thirteen hours' lost time between Los Angeles and Chicago that occasioned the extra speed, it was said. The train had left Los Angeles on time on the 18th inst., but had been forced to lie over for repairs at San Bernardino.

CARNARVON ART ACQUIRED

Metropolitan Museum Announces Gift of Late Archeologists' Egyptian Treasures

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. (Exclusive)—The acquisition of the late Lord Carnarvon's private Egyptian art collection, conceded to be the most notable collection of small Egyptian sculpture, faience and glass formed in any country by any independent collector, is announced today by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, through a gift from Edward S. Harkness, one of its trustees.

The collection reached the museum several months ago from High Clere Castle, Hampshire, the English residence of the late Earl of Carnarvon, who gained fame as an archeologist and as the discoverer of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen. Since then the work of preparing the group for exhibition has been completed and a reception tomorrow afternoon will mark the first showing of the collection to museum members.

It contains more than 1400 objects which experts agree could not be duplicated under $250,000, assuming that objects of their character and quality could be obtained today.

Among the foremost objects of value is a gold statuette of Amon about six inches in height. It is of solid gold in the explicit sense of the term, the museum having silently acknowledged its great value by encasing it in glass connected with an electric burglar-alarm system.

OTHER TREASURES

Of special rarity also is a blue faience cup of lotus shape used perhaps by a king of the late dynastic period as a ceremonial drinking cup; and a beautiful set of faience reliefs of birds, the large inlays from a late Egyptian burial shrine.

The collection is one of high reputation among students and art lovers particularly in England, according to Albert M. Lythgoe, curator of Egyptian art. But few have had the privilege of seeing it in its entirety. A part of it was shown at the notable exhibition of Egyptian art held at the Burlington Fine Arts Club in London in 1921, a year before the discovery by Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

The present collection does not include any objects from that tomb, all the works of art taken from its chambers, Mr. Lythgoe points out, having been removed to the Egyptian National Museum in Cairo.

The work of forming the collection was begun by Lord Carnarvon in 1908 and the last object was added by him only a few months before his death. It contains many outstanding objects yielded by the excavations he and Carter conducted on various Egyptian sites, particularly at Thebes, from 1906 until 1913. A larger number he obtained by purchase from private collections in London and Paris.

SMALL OBJECTS

"In forming the collection for his own enjoyment," says Mr. Lythgoe, "and in order that he might accommodate it within the limited space of his own rooms at High Clere he restricted the collection to objects of smaller size, though in range it covers every side of Egyptian art."

It illustrates, he said, that it was Carnarvon's aim, not merely to buy a thing because it was rare but because of its beauty.

The group is divided into several sections. There is a set of statuettes and other examples of smaller sculpture in a great variety of materials, such as limestone, quartzite, red and yellow jasper, gold, silver, bronze, faience, wood and ivory; many rare vases and other objects of colored and polychromed glass and faience, together with exquisitely wrought rings, necklaces and other ornaments of gold, carnelian, amethyst, lapis lazuli, obsidian and faience.

A large collection of scarabs, plaques and seal-cylinders in faience and various stones of the best and most representative types of their periods is included also. These and other miscellaneous objects ranging in date from the early dynasties to the ptolemaic and Roman periods are held to exemplify the highest skill and perfection attained by Egyptian artists and craftsmen.

BAGGAGE IN CAR TAKES FIRE

CROCKETT, Feb. 20. (AP)—Fire in one of the baggage cars attached to the Oregonian Southern Pacific train No. 84, en route north from San Francisco, destroyed a small quantity of baggage and considerable newspaper mail here last night. The train was stopped here and the fire department put out the blaze. Trainmen said the packages caught fire from a stove.

GOV. PEAY REPORTED IMPROVED

Tennessee Executive Gains in Fight With Pneumonia; State Notes Fall Due

NASHVILLE (Tenn.) Feb. 20. (AP)—Physicians of Gov. Austin Peay were more confident tonight that he will recover than they had been since their patient suffered heart attacks Wednesday. They said the executive, who is suffering from pneumonia, had rested satisfactorily and that they had been gradually decreasing artificial stimulants.

Special prayers for Gov. Peay were offered today in practically every church here and in other Tennessee cities.

Meanwhile $2,000,000 in forty short-term notes of Tennessee due Monday in New York, afforded a problem in State finance. Tennessee law requires that the signature of the chief executive be affixed to such notes. It was considered doubtful whether the Governor would be well enough tomorrow to sign his name two-score times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. (Exclusive) President Coolidge is expected to make an important contribution to present-day literature in his coming Washington's Birthday speech, which is to be given a wider "broadcast" by radio than ever before attempted.

The speech will be delivered to Congress in joint session at 12:30 o'clock on Tuesday. It will be broadcast through thirty-eight broadcasting stations in all parts of the country and an attempt will also be made to deliver it to stations abroad.

The speech is intended to arouse interest in the 200th celebration in 1932 of Washington's Birthday.

JULIAN PETROLEUM

No stock in the history of local securities has been the subject of such vicious and continued bear raids. This pressure, we believe, has been responsible for recent low prices.

If this stock was a good buy at from two to three times current quotations, as scores of powerful capitalists evidently believed, it seems reasonable to think that the shares should be a better purchase now; moreover, there are most important developments just ahead.

For those who bought on higher levels existing prices offer an opportunity for averaging down the cost of holdings, either by means of further purchases for cash or on margin, or by depositing collateral security for additional commitments.

We shall be glad to explain this plan in detail if you will express an interest. Convenient ground floor location.

RULING CLEARS REALTY ISSUE

Trust Deed Foreclosure Need Not be Acknowledged

Conflicting Practice Held by Court as Legal

Adverse Decision Would Have Clouded Titles

Notices of sale under deeds of trust do not need to be acknowledged, executed or approved by a subscribing witness, according to an opinion handed down by Judge Edmonds of the Superior Court, in passing on a demurrer of trustee to application to the court of trust, companies and individuals in a case just concluded.

In the test taken the practice of the Title Insurance, acting as trustees under deeds of trust, to have the trustor acknowledge notice of election to declare a breach of the conditions and cause the incumbered property to be sold to satisfy the debt.

The case at bar H. B. Standley refused to set aside a trust-deed foreclosure sale, setting up as a defense the foreclosure proceedings that notice of election had not been acknowledged. In view of the widespread practice of leaving these notices unacknowledged, trust companies and attorneys awaited Judge Edmonds decision with trepidation, fearing that such acknowledgment would have cast title to literally thousands of pieces of realty which have passed through foreclosure.

On the particular point at issue was whether or not a notice of election is an "instrument." The code provides that such notices must be executed and further that "instruments" must be acknowledged to be recorded.

Attorneys R. W. Knapp and Ralph L. Chandler, did not deny the lack of acknowledgement, and the case came before the court on a motion to strike their answer, for failure to make this denial. On this motion the defendants maintained that a notice is not an "instrument" because did not require acknowledgment to a precedent to recording. Judge Edmonds held to the contrary.

He refused to cause wherein an "instrument" has been clearly defined as a writing, signed and delivered by one person to another, transferring title to or giving lien on property or giving a right to a debt or charge. A section of election does not contain that definition, and notice may be recorded as an ordinary instrument, he reasoned. Therefore he denied the motion to strike, saying that acknowledgement is not necessary.

ROBERTS BAND GIVES MEMORIAL CONCERT

A memorial concert in honor of the late Alfred Holland was conducted yesterday at Smith Park, of which he was a trustee 25 seventeen years. The program was given by Harold Roberts and the Golden State Band. On the program also were "Uncle Remus," ragtime artist; A. W. Simpkins, bass soloist, and Jack Langton, 6-year-old protege of Roberts's band. An address was made by President Griffith of the Board of Park Commissioners. Commissioners Frank True and Mrs. Mabel V. Socha also attended. Fifteen hundred persons were present.

PERENNIAL FLAPPER ON VISIT HERE

Fannie Ward, 61 Years of Age, Tells How She Fought to Regain Her Youth

"Women these days haven't any business growing old," declared Fannie Ward, 61-year-old flapper, upon her arrival yesterday to open an engagement at the Orpheum. "They can remain young. It takes effort at first, but the result in feeling and in looks more than compensates for any hardships undergone."

Miss Ward stepped off the train with the remark:

"Just say grandma is visiting her second home."

Miss Ward said she didn't retain her youth, but regained it.

"About eighteen years ago I decided to grow young. I then weighed about 140 pounds. I had several chins, my eyes were beginning to sag; in fact, I looked more than my age.

"I went to the most famous specialists in Paris for beauty treatments. I slowly evolved a whole system of treatment which brought results. Some of my secrets came from India, some from Paris, others I discovered myself.

"And today I weigh 100 pounds and feel fine."

COUNTY AID IN GRADE PLAN

Supervisors' Agreement to Appropriate $70,000 for La Cienega Work Reported to Council

The county Board of Supervisors has agreed to contribute $70,000 toward the cost of separating the grade of La Cienega Boulevard at the tracks of the Pacific Electric Venice line, David R. Faries, chairman of the Los Angeles county grade-crossing elimination committee, has reported to the Council.

Mr. Faries recommended that the Council entirely appropriate toward the cost of the grade separation. The total estimated cost of the separation is $130,000, and with the city and county each contributing $40,000, the Pacific Electric will pay $40,000.

Mr. Faries pointed out in his report to the Council that no action has been taken on compliance with the Board Commissioners's order directing separation of the grades due to the growth of traffic by the city. By the Supervisors' order, the city was to pay $40,000 and the Pacific Electric $40,000. The Pacific Electric has agreed to meet this extra cost as the effect of the county ordinance is to reduce the city's share to one-half.

It is urged by the Council showing necessity for the agreement that the cost of the grade separation Mr. Faries said:

"Since the making of the Railroad Commission order, those property owners along Venice Boulevard on the line of La Cienega Boulevard have given the necessary right of way for the widening of Venice Boulevard. They have accepted this right of way because it is at the expense of the improvement district which includes the property owners who gave the right of way. The former, entirely unusuable strip is no way of crossing the Electric Railway Company tracks, and the property owners have to use the road, although they pay assessments for its

MINISTER WARS ON ICONOCLASTS

Flays Authors Who Would Tarnish Great Name

Rev. Leslie Learned Speaks at Washington-Service

Pleads for Loyalty to Ideals of Our Ancestors

Taking issue with unscrupulous authors who have impugned the motives of America's great men, Rev. Leslie E. Learned, rector of the Pasadena All Saints Church, addressing the annual George Washington commemoration services of the California Society, Sons of Revolution, yesterday afternoon appealed to the congregation of St. Paul's Cathedral to declare against such literature.

"We are well aware of certain tendencies that not only are utterly lacking in dignity, but which fail to maintain the loyalty our ancestors strove so hard to preserve," Rev. Learned said regarding the attacks made by several prominent literary members on Washington's life.

CONCERNED WITH PROFIT

"In two such instances, the man we deeply honor, has been subjected to most sorrowful literary abuses by authors who care nothing for holy precincts of American history, but who are alone concerned with reaping financial rewards from sensational untruths."

Three aisles of the church were roped off for the three-score active members of the Sons of the Revolution and the Society of Colonial Wars, who aided in the commemorative services. Col. William Libbey, president of the General Society, Sons of the Revolution, and a faculty member of Princeton University, was guest of honor.

Conjunctive services were conducted for thirty-three members of the society who have passed away during the last year, including Patrick F. Lewis, the son of a Revolutionary soldier, who died October 13, last. The honor roll was hailed by Rt. Rev. W. Bertrand Stevens, bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Los Angeles, and chaplain of the California Society, Sons of the Revolution.

TOUCH OF PATHOS

A touch of pathos was injected into the services when Rev. Stevens announced that one of his comrades, Col. Holdridge O. Collins, who had attended the banquet in honor of Col. Libbey Saturday night at the Alexandria, was killed almost instantly by an automobile while returning home from the reception.

Because of continued illness, Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, bishop of the diocese of Los Angeles, was unable to make his scheduled appearance. Rev. Harry Beal, dean of the cathedral, and his assistant, Rev. Franklin L. Gibson, among other clergymen, participated in the services.

The committee in charge of the program consisted of Gen. Charles H. Whipple, chairman; Dr. Edward M. Pallette, Rt. Rev. W. Bertrand Stevens, Rev. Hugh K. Walker, Colin M. Gair, Col. Harcourt Hervey, Lansing G. L. Bayre, Rev. David R. Covell and Philip E. P. Brine. Ushers were Merton A. Albee, chairman; Charles F. Bouldin, Edward Bouton, Dr. Daniel L. Ransom, George O. Entz, Arthur W. Sinclair and Alfred J. Comstock.

WORLD-WAR HEROINE RETURNS

"Doughnut Girl" of Trenches Here

Ensign Alice McAllister

RETURNING yesterday to her native city of Los Angeles, Ensign Alice McAllister of the Salvation Army, who met the shell fire of the enemy during the World War with a barrage of doughnuts and steaming chocolate, expressed the hope that there might never be another such conflict.

"Of course, if there should be another we shall all do our part," she said, and added, "there is a certain fascination about being in the thick of it."

Last night the young woman who, with her elder sister and numerous other Salvation Army lassies was nearer the front lines than any of the other noncombatant ministering angels spoke at Salvation Army Temple of Corps No. 1, 832 West Ninth street, but she said nothing about her war experiences.

She and her sister, the latter now Mrs. Harry Booth of Indianapolis, were overseas for eighteen months; both were with the First Division. From her eldest sister, Mrs. Nellie White of 1620 West Twenty-fourth street, it was learned that Ensign McAllister's steel helmet got many a dent from flying shrapnel, that her canteen was on three occasions pierced by enemy fire and that often she was under gas attack.

The marriage of Ensign McAllister's sister some months ago to Ensign Harry Booth was a war romance, the two meeting in France. She contemplates returning to headquarters in San Francisco early in March after a rest here at her sister's home.

TWO KILLED, THREE HURT IN TRAFFIC

Motorist Held in One of Fatalities When Onlookers Say He Was Speeding

Two persons were killed and three injured in traffic accidents yesterday.

Paul Grusling, 45 years of age, a blacksmith living at 4615 Avalon Boulevard, died on the way to the Receiving Hospital after being struck by a machine driven by William M. Patterson, 8223 South San Pedro street, at Forty-ninth and San Pedro streets. Police reported holding Patterson on the story of witnesses that he was traveling at excessive speed.

Pinned beneath his automobile after colliding with another car, Renwood Whittemore, 26 years of age, of 927 Rosemont Place, Glendale, suffered fatal injuries yesterday morning. He died as he was being taken to the Receiving Hospital. The accident occurred at Hill and Jefferson streets.

The driver of the other car, it was stated, was A. J. Flick of 8438 Monroe street. He was not injured.

Heinze Herrmann, 11 years of age, suffered concussion of the brain and possible internal injuries, and his mother, Mrs. Bertha Herrmann, was slightly hurt yesterday when they were bowled over in a safety zone on Sunset Boulevard by an automobile.

Boys Drown in Brick-Yard Pool as Raft Upsets

The capsizing of a raft on which they adventured to the center of a pool at the City Brick Yard, Manchester and Western avenues, caused the drowning of two boys yesterday. The victims were James Stallard, 15 years of age, of 1543 West Eighty-fourth street, and Morris Carlisle, 15, of 1489 West Eighty-fourth street. Both bodies were recovered.

Charles Nordholm, 15, of 1349 West Eighty-fourth street, was the only witness of the accident. He remained ashore while his playmates went out on their craft, consisting of a few planks nailed together, and when it tipped them into the water he ran for help. Traffic Officer Sullivan came at his call and dived into the pool. Though he cut himself on barbed wire, he searched till he brought Stallard's body to the surface. Fire Truck No. 13 was called and its crew worked two hours ineffectually with a pulmotor. The boy was pronounced dead by Dr. Wyant Lamont.

Carlisle's body was recovered by Auto Fireman Walter J. Bird of Truck No. 13 last night.

CHARGES FACED BY REALTY MEN

Spanish Grant Dealings May Cause License Loss

Bar Association's Inquiry Clears Attorneys

Scores Here Victimized on Claim Filing Fees

At least six real estate operators face losing their licenses because of their part in accepting fees for filing homestead claims on the old Spanish land grants of Southern California, it became known yesterday when Asst. U. S. Atty. Jack Layng announced that the investigation of the Bar Association had failed to connect any of its members with the matter.

Scores of Los Angeles residents have been victimized by so-called "attorney fees" amounting to several thousands of dollars. These fees were collected for the preparation and filing of papers on land, the patents to which were given under the Spanish grants. The investigation by officials of the Bar Association shows that real estate men have been encouraging the filing of these claims, although the government has warned applicants for the land that the Spanish land grants have been held valid and that the land has never been surveyed as public domain and therefore can not be filed upon.

TITLES UPHELD

That officials at Washington are not worried over the validity of title to the Spanish land grants is shown by the fact that Attorney Layng during the last week passed on titles to three parcels of land purchased by the government in the territory that was part of the old Palos Verdes Rancho.

In passing on the title, Layng did considerable research work and brought to light many facts relating to the history of the grants. He says the government is bound to uphold the validity of titles to the grants because it was specified by treaty when California became part of the United States that the then existing grants would be upheld.

One of the most interesting points uncovered by Layng was the fact that the grants played an important part in the Civil War. Southern sympathizers were in favor of the cancellation of the Spanish land grants and promised that if California would join the South, the old land grants would be declared invalid. Northern sympathizers took the opposite view and since California remained with the Union, the government then became bound to uphold the titles to the land, according to the government attorney.

FILINGS REFUSED

Land Commissioner William Spry is thoroughly satisfied with the existing titles and recently commended Register B. B. Smith of the local land office for having refused to accept homestead filings on the land covered by the original grants. However, a number of real estate men are continuing to claim that for a fee of $100 or more, they will file homestead papers for their clients.

STAGE LIFE ADOPTED BY RICH WOMAN

Becomes Actress to Show Self That Friend's Doubt of Success Groundless

"A friend of mine told me she doubted my ability to become an actress. That's why I'm on the stage now."

This was the explanation given by Mrs. Ruby Rush, former wife of a wealthy Columbus (Ohio) manufacturer, who left her home four years ago and kept her whereabouts a secret from her friends until yesterday, when she was found playing a role in a play now showing at a Hollywood theater.

"I never want to do the things that are easy," Mrs. Rush explained. "It is always the task which someone declares impossible that intrigues me most. My life seems to have been dominated by a contrariness complex for I've always done the things which others said I could not do."

Although Mrs. Rush left her husband four years ago she did not turn to the stage immediately. "I just flitted about first trying one thing and then another," she said. "For more than a year I acted as New York buyer for a number of Ohio antique shops."

TOURIST INCREASE SIGHTED

Growth in Summer Traffic Predicted by All-Year Club as Result of Advertising Campaign

Prediction that the All-Year Club, under its new program of advertising Southern California nationally, will build up summer tourist business until it equals or surpasses winter tourist traffic was made yesterday by A. Frank, chairman of the business executive committee of the All-Year Club and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce engaged in raising the budget for the advertising of Southern California for the coming year.

Mr. Frank, who is vice-president and general manager of the Ambassador Hotel Company, has gone to Arrowhead Hot Springs for a rest, following the first ten days of the All-Year Club advertising fund of $1,200,000.

"The new fund of $1,200,000 will give us about $400,000 more for advertising than we have had in the past," he said. "The new advertising campaign will be much more effective in promoting Southern California than anything we have had, because we are going to use color and double-spreads in the national magazines. Southern California scenes can be shown wonderfully in colors."

COMFORT ASSURED HERE

In referring to his belief in Southern California's possibilities for growth as a summer resort, Mr. Frank said he has been in every part of the United States in summer and Southern California is the only place giving assurance of comfort.

Saul Magnus, owner of the Paulais stores and a member of the committee of 100 which raised the first advertising fund six years ago, yesterday praised the work of the All-Year Club as one of the greatest influences in the marvelous population growth of Los Angeles.

A large share of credit for the fact that the people of Los Angeles have more than twice the average savings bank deposits for the United States, the comparison being $445 to $211, yesterday was given to the work of the All-Year Club by James R. Martin of Frick, Martin & Co., a member of the fund-raising committee.

GOOD CITIZENS ATTRACTED

"The greatest reason for the difference is in the fact that we are steadily attracting people of means," he said. "The thousands of people who come here every year from all over the world in response to the advertising of the All-Year Club are people of highest standards. Every month or quarter or semiannually or annually they receive their checks from investments, mortgages, bonds and other sources elsewhere. It is this surplus wealth that we have over and above the wealth concentrated here in the sea, the farms, the oil wells, etc., that gives Los Angeles its financial advantage.

"Having learned that the way to this new wealth is through advertising through the All-Year Club, I rather believe that every business man will see that a full budget to the club is the finest thing that he can do for his own business."

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

RUSHING to the defense of George Washington, the Boston parson, Dr. W. E. Barton insists that he really did cut down that cherry tree.

The distinguished gentleman's proof seems to be a good deal like that of the Irishman who offered to bring in a hundred witnesses who did not see him commit a murder. He says he believes the story because it has not been disproven.

WHAT OF IT?

After all, I wonder if it matters a great deal either way. If George had a hatchet when he was a little boy, it is a cinch that he cut something down that he should not; or else he wasn't a real little boy. If it wasn't a cherry tree, maybe it was a pickle tree.

It would be much more to the point if they dropped all the trees and told us something human and intimate and interesting about Washington when he was grown up. Of all the great national heroes he is the least known and least appreciated.

CHUMMY WITH LINCOLN

I think this is partly because he lived before the age of newspapers.

Journalism in those days was a formal and solemn affair. Before the people who knew Lincoln face-to-face were dead, the day of intimate journalism had happened; every little fact and side light was dug up. And so we feel chummy with Lincoln.

Thackeray had trouble finding out about Washington for this same reason. He asked for some colorful facts about him but all he got were stump speeches. "Oh," he exclaimed impatiently, "I don't want to know all that; I want to know if he was a fussy old gentleman who spilled snuff on his vest."

TOO SOLEMN

Those solemn looking Gilbert Stuart portraits also make it hard for us to feel acquainted with Washington. They may be great art—as the critics contend; but they make him look wooden; whereas we know that Washington was a great athlete, a superb horseman, a jovial friend and a very wide-awake person.

ASLEEP ON THEIR FEET

Europe spends most her time bellowing with indignation because America is very rich, while she is very poor.

And here is one of the reasons why: For many generations, European farmers have suffered from the attacks of deadly corn borer. By comparison, the boll weevil is a friendly and harmless sort.

In 1917 some broom corn was brought to America from Italy and Hungary and this terrible pest came along. It has driven whole districts of Canada out of the corn business and threatens to devastate American farms.

Our agricultural department sent to Europe, asking for the names of all the parasites of this pest. The reply from European scientists was that no parasite existed.

KEEN YANKEES

Knowing that, in the nature of things, this could not be so, the United States sent our own experts to Europe to find some.

They found not only one, but ten parasites who make life uncertain and miserable for the corn borer. The most savage enemy is a very thin and hungry wasp.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT

In like measure, American science has helped European industry in other ways.

It is estimated that the invention of the incandescent electric light by Edison, the American, has added about seventy-eight working days every year to the life of everyone. Until the electric light came, Edison says that people went to bed too early.

An increase in prosperity has been shown everywhere that the electric light is in general use.

Confessions of Sutherland Believed Authentic

Slayer of Police Captain Tells Many Crimes

Expected Autobiography Sale to Provide for Wife

Accepting the confessions of Earl D. Sutherland, former notorious bandit, which were discovered in a tin box under a house in Glendale last Saturday, as an authentic document, police detectives yesterday started a search for Sutherland's widow to whom the bandit stated in his confessions, he wished the proceeds of the sale of his autobiography be given.

It was apparent from the wording of the fifty-page document that Sutherland contemplated a quick and violent death and expected that his confessions would be found and published, and that his widow be benefited by what their sale might bring.

It was recalled yesterday by Chief of Detectives Cline, Captain of Detectives Bean and Detective Lieutenant Jarvis, who, at the time Sutherland shot and killed Police Captain Auble on September 9, 1908, were assisting the search for the desperado, that Sutherland's wife was employed in this city as a telephone operator.

It was from Mrs. Sutherland, the detectives say, that the police received repeated warnings that Sutherland was a desperate gunman and had vowed to "shoot it out" before being captured. The truth of the warnings is borne out by the fact that on the same day that he shot Capt. Auble, he swallowed a fatal draught of poison when cornered at Seventy-ninth street and Moneta avenue by Police Sergeant Benedict.

Soon after the death of Sutherland the police lost all trace of his widow. Nothing has been heard of her by police since that time.

The confessions reveal a long list of train, street-car and stage holdups, shootings and attacks supposed to have been committed by Sutherland in the Middle West and California during the years the bandit admits following a career of crime.

TRICK AUTO DOES HEAD-STAND

But Only Selected Few See Stunt

End of the Trail

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Feb. 20.—At a.m. shrieks of laughter, then a crash, then silence; at daylight, a deserted automobile found upended in the sand at the end of the beach promenade at the foot of Wilshire Boulevard.

These remained unexplained till this evening, when C. A. Maxwell of 152 East Twenty-fourth street, Los Angeles, appeared at the police station and furnished the key.

Maxwell said he and a girl friend whose name he did not give were driving in Venice and got onto the promenade, mistaking it in the fog for the highway. They drove to the end, where the car ran off, taking a six-foot drop. Neither passenger was hurt.

The Crescent Auto Park Company of 1930 South Main street, owner of the car, got it onto its four wheels on the beach and ran it off under its own power.

Of 600 private dwellings erected in Durban, South Africa, in the past year, 240 were housekeeping flats.

CITY DRAWS FILM SALES CONVENTION

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to Lay Out Release Program in West for First Time

Five hundred executives, exchange managers and salesmen will gather here early in May to determine the film fare of the world when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will hold its annual nation sales convention for the first time in the West, at Los Angeles.

This was the news brought by Louis B. Mayer, executive head of the M.-G.-M. studios yesterday on his arrival from New York, where he arranged for the convention with Nicholas M. Shenck and other executives.

"In the past eastern cities have always been selected for our national sales convention," said Mr. Mayer on his arrival. "It was a gratifying event to me when Los Angeles, the cinema capital of the world, was designated as the meeting place this year.

"This meeting is going to mean much to the industry next season, as it will bring our production department in direct contact with our sales organization. And it is the sales organization that is in direct touch with the public's desires in picture entertainment through constant association with the exhibitor. Our program for the coming season will surpass anything we have ever attempted in the past, just as our last season's eclipsed anything that had gone before.

"The exact date of our convention has not yet been set, but will be determined soon. It will be early in May, however, and at least 500 film men will gather here to determine the motion-picture menu of the world. We are planning to have this convention the largest in the history of any film gathering."

WESTCOTT TRIAL DUE FOR TODAY

Son Accused of Slaying Father as Result of Row Over Trust Fund

Accused of slaying his father because of an asserted thirst for wealth, Carl Westcott is scheduled to go on trial this morning before Judge Craig of the Superior Court on a charge of murder preferred against him in connection with the shooting October 20, 1926, of Charles O. Westcott.

Westcott was fatally shot on the threshold of his home when he answered the doorbell. On his death bed, according to the District Attorney's office, he made the statement: "Carl, why did you do it?" which led to the arrest of his son and the subsequent charge of murder.

It was stated the case against young Westcott is largely based on circumstantial evidence through which the State will attempt to prove that Westcott shot his father in order to obtain a share in a life trust of $300,000 created by his grandfather for his father's benefit.

According to the terms of the trust, it was said the $300,000 was to be divided between young Westcott and his sister upon their father's death. At the time of the shooting the elder Westcott was said to have been carrying on negotiations with his son to provide for another son out of his interest in the trust, and the State will charge that Westcott killed his father in an effort to prevent the other son from realizing any benefit from the trust.

SOUTHLAND TO LEAD AT CONVENTION

"Times" Assistance Held Factor in Largest Legion Delegation to Paris

California bids fair to lead the country with its representation at the American Legion convention in Paris next September, according to reports of Legion officials. The bulk of reservations are being made from Southern California and this section is expected to receive extremely valuable publicity when its units arrive in the French capital.

Los Angeles county posts are indulging in friendly rivalry concerning the size of their delegations to the convention, which will open in Paris on September 19. Many of the county posts are working to send at least one representative member to the convention by co-operating with The Times on a plan whereby enough money can be saved to pay the expenses of the veteran chosen, or provide post overseas equipment.

It is expected that several local drum and bugle corps will appear in the parade which will be a convention feature. The local France convention officer is Angelo Bessolo, with offices at 347 Pacific Electric Building, Sixth and Main streets.

a season in Europe intent upon opening a studio in Paris for among her talents is the art of painting and sculptoring. But she lost interest in this and returned to America, where she accepted a contract with a Hollywood theater.

The actress explained that she had not left her husband because he opposed a stage career. "He always was very kind to me," she said wistfully. "But he always discouraged my plans for an active life. Once I planned for weeks to open a shop in Columbus but when I told him of my idea he advised me to drop it. We did not quarrel for I abandoned the plan immediately.

"But I got so tired of playing bridge, of senseless teas and talking, talking, talking about nothing. I wanted to do something—that's why I left.

"I had hoped to keep my present occupation secret until I had really succeeded in my profession," Mrs. Rush added. "But I became so enthused with my work that I told my secret to a friend in Columbus in a letter and now it is out. Some day I'm going to play a real leading part."

THRIFT DRIVE FIGURES MOUNT

Sentous Junior High School Students and Faculty Rate 100 Per Cent

Every student and every member of the faculty of Sentous Junior High School now has a savings account, it was announced yesterday. There are 860 in the school, which is the first in the city to reach 100 per cent in the thrift campaign.

Avery J. Grey, supervisor of the school-savings department, who made the announcement, also said that in the first four months of the present school year, the new accounts opened numbered 4552, while the same period of the previous year had only 1986. On January 1, the total of active school-savings bank accounts was 49,876.

F. W. PARKER, LOS ANGELES PIONEER, DIES

Was One of City's Early Plumbing Contractors and Prominent Mason

Francis Marion Parker, retired plumbing contractor and one of the most prominent Masons in Los Angeles, died at 3 a.m. yesterday at his home, 1520 West Twenty-third street of septic pneumonia following an attack of quinsy less than a week ago.

FRANCIS M. PARKER

Mr. Parker came to California in 1873 with his parents, who first settled on a ranch at Pomona. Three years later they came to Los Angeles and for several years the family lived on a three-acre ranch situated at what is now the southwest corner of Eighth street and Central avenue.

Mr. Parker learned the plumber's trade as an apprentice to S. M. Perry, a pioneer plumber of the city, and started in business for himself in 1889 at 304 South Spring street. Later he moved to 630 South Spring street, but the building of the Hotel Alexandria at Sixth and Spring streets again forced him to seek new quarters. From his second location he moved into his own building at 818 Central avenue, which he occupied until the erection of the Masonic Temple. He conducted his business in the latter building for more than seventeen years, retiring two years ago. Since that time he had devoted most of his time to Masonic affairs in which he had always been active.

He was a thirty-third degree member of the order and Past Commander of Los Angeles Commandery No. 9, as well as Past Master of Pentalpa Lodge. He was a member of the Scottish Rite, the Shrine, the Kiwanis Club and the Sunset Canyon Country Club.

Mr. Parker was born in Newark, O., November 16, 1861, and married Frances L. Weber of the same city April 23, 1890.

Besides his widow, Mr. Parker leaves two daughters, Miss Katherine L. Parker, and Mrs. William A. Sumner, and a son, Lawrence. He also is survived by two brothers, Dr. W. C. Parker of this city, and Perry B. Parker of McFarland, Cal.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed yesterday.

VAN DYKES COME WEST FOR DRAMA

Princeton Sage and Wife Cross Continent to See Mission Play Reopening

Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton University is on his way to attend the opening performance of the Mission Play in the new playhouse at San Gabriel on the evening of March 5, according to word received here yesterday. He is accompanied by Mrs. Van Dyke.

Dr. Van Dyke was asked to write the Mission Play in 1910 by Frank A. Miller of the Mission Inn at Riverside, who had returned from Europe after witnessing the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Dr. Van Dyke declined, feeling he would have to spend several years in study in California to acquire atmosphere. John Steven McGroarty was suggested as author by David Starr Jordan.

Dr. and Mrs. Van Dyke will be guests of Mr. Miller at the Mission Inn during their stay in Southern California.

Edward E. Ayer of Chicago yesterday was shown through the new Mission Playhouse by Mr. McGroarty. Mr. Ayer, famous as the donor of a $3,000,000 collection of American Indian relics, birds and fishes to the Newbury Library and the Field Museum, was a trooper in a California battalion in the Civil War.

He put in motion the "Save the Redwoods" movement and stated yesterday he had received word that the Bull Creek redwood area in Humboldt county has been definitely saved from destruction.

Mr. and Mrs. Ayer are at the Huntington Hotel in Pasadena.

DRUGGIST OFFICAL TO SPEND TIME IN FIELD

E. C. Smith, field secretary of the Los Angeles and Southern California Retail Druggists' Association, recently named by that organization to succeed himself in office, announces that he will spend his entire time in the field this year working in the interests of pharmacy in general. Other officers lately elected to serve for the ensuing year are A. H. Vossmeyer, now in his third term as president; C. R. Brogan, first vice-president; Harvey A. Henry, second vice-president; E. C. Roy, treasurer, and Lucille Newton, office secretary.

DIVIDENDS WITHOUT INVESTMENT in St Louis— Mo.

—but— in Los Angeles

Mrs. W., lives in a 3-room apartment on Hebert St., St. Louis. Her electric service is confined to illumination—lamps and wall fixtures. A recent monthly bill covering this service was $1.33.

at Bureau domestic rates this same bill for the same amount of electricity would be $1.12, a saving of 21c. St. Louis domestic rates are 21% higher than in Los Angeles.

A definite policy of the Bureau of Power and Light insists that the rates must be low. In operation, management and expansion, every advantage is taken to perpetuate and extend this policy of giving the citizen "shareholders" the benefit of the lowest rates among competitive cities in the United States.

Bureau domestic rates are lower than in any city of competitive size in America.

Fortunately it requires only residence within the city limits to share in these monthly "dividends." The maintaince of low rates, with best degree of service, makes the Bureau an outstanding institution among public utilities.

Why the Parker Duofold is ever ready to go!

—as you'll discover the instant pen point touches paper

Here's the secret of the instant writing action of the Parker Duofold.

We grind an ink channel between the two prongs of the Parker point. Thus a thin film of ink is always present when the pen is in writing position.

This ink forms a tiny droplet that projects beyond the iridium tip, just as a drop of water on your finger tip projects beyond the surface of the skin.

It's a droplet too small to be easily seen, but big enough to touch the paper ahead of the point. This instantly sets up capillary attraction. So the ink begins to flow the moment you start to write.

The entire Parker Duofold Point is so strong, so skillfully tempered and ground, that we guarantee it 25 years, not only for mechanical perfection but for wear!

You won't find a point like this in other pens, no matter how much they look like the Parker Duofold. Nor this over-size, balanced, barrel of Permanite—Parker's new, light-weight Non-Breakable material. In Black and Gold, Black-tipped Jade, or Black-tipped Lacquer-red—handsome to own—hard to mislay.

All good dealers have them at $5 and $7. Pencils to match at $3, $3.50 and $4. See them today at the nearest pen counter. But look with care for that stamp of master craftsmanship, "Geo. S. Parker—DUOFOLD."

TEMPLE CHURCH GREETS PASTOR

Dr. M. E. Dodd Delivers First Sermon to Flock

More Than 2000 Persons Fill Auditorium at Service

Here to Preach Gospel and Not as Reformer

The announcement that he is here to preach "The Gospel of Jesus Christ, Crucified," to give all of himself in the service of the Master, was made yesterday by Dr. M. E. Dodd, former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Shreveport, La., in delivering his first sermon as the new pastor of Temple Baptist Church. More than 2000 persons filled the auditorium in welcoming him, and Mrs. Dodd at the morning service.

"I enjoy fellowship and contemplate a great happiness here, but I am not here to entertain nor to be entertained," he continued, "and while I believe in personal and social purity as well, I am not here as a social reformer; while I believe in political righteousness, I am not here as a political reformer. I am here as a preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ. That doesn't mean that it does not have its implications and applications in all this, but that it is in essence and very heart of all life we shall be my ministry.

READY FOR CALLS

"Night or day, it will never be too late, too rainy or too stormy—even in California—for you to call on me in the Master's work," he added.

In delivering his sermon on the subject "The Christian's Motive," Dr. Dodd took for his text the words of Paul of Tarsus, "For the love of Christ constraineth us."

"In other words, this man Paul might have said, 'It satisfies the ethical yearning of my heart.' It was a motive of obedience to him. And it is true that that he was constrained by the love of Christ, surrendered by it—all else was shut out of his life.

"The ministering to the hearts and souls of men," Dr. Dodd continued, "is not accomplished by a set rule or patent methods, but by the tried-out path of sacrifice. It is the same everywhere; it was for Paul in Athens, in Corinth and in Rome; and it is so in Los Angeles."

He is only a forceful, convincing speaker, but an accomplished executive as well. Dr. Dodd enjoyed a most successful pastorate of fifteen years' extent at the southern church, one of the largest in the convention.

LETTER FROM BROUGHER

At the morning services there was read by Frank H. Thomas a letter from Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, who resigned the pastorate of Temple Baptist Church to become president of the Northern Baptist Convention. Dr. Dodd was president of the Southern Baptist Convention before leaving the Shreveport pastorate. The address of welcome at the morning service was delivered by Orra Monnette. Welcoming addresses at the evening service were delivered by J. P. Elwell, chairman of the board of trustees of the Los Angeles Baptist City Mission Society; W. F. Harper, executive secretary of the Southern California Baptist Convention, and Dr. A. W. Rider, secretary of the Foreign Mission Society of the Northern Baptist Convention.

A reception will be conducted in Temple Hall on Friday night for Dr. and Mrs. Dodd.

MURDER TRIAL BEGINS

Ray Johnson, a negro, will go to trial before Superior Judge [illegible] charge of murdering Scioto Bland, also a negro, in an assignment quarrel over the slain man's wife. It is charged that Bland, on December 26, was about to throw a brick at his wife, when Johnson drew a gun and shot Bland, who died a few weeks later.

PORTIA PROVES ABLE LAWYER

Deserted Wife Reads Up on Law, Pleads Case and Wins Verdict

When Mary Madrid decided that she needed a divorce from Melvin Madrid, who had deserted her three days after their marriage, she lacked enough money to employ a lawyer, but she did not let that stop her. She knew how to read and she found out where the Law Library is.

So she read numerous bulky tomes and sat down and wrote out her own divorce complaint. Eventually she brought the matter on for trial, and it came up before Judge Summerfield for hearing.

"Is the complaint all right? I wrote it myself," she asked anxiously.

"Just as good a complaint as any," the court replied. Mrs. Madrid thereupon proceeded to testify for herself and to question her corroborating witness, through an interpreter, completing the job with dispatch. Judge Summerfield congratulated her and granted her a decree and Clerk Elmer Doyle remitted the reporter's fee, so Mrs. Madrid got her divorce at a total cost of $7, the charge for filing.

Judge Blake to be Candidate for Re-election

Municipal Judge Blake, probably the best-known and most-photographed jurist on the municipal bench by reason of his having heard the Aimee Semple McPherson case, today will announce his candidacy to succeed himself as presiding judge of Division Two at the city election on May 3, next.

Judge Blake, the youngest jurist on the bench, presided through the long weeks of the McPherson case, matching wits and legal knowledge with an army of leading barristers.

He was born in Redlands on April 1, 1895. Judge Blake has spent his life in his native State and served his career, principally in this city. He is a graduate of the University of Southern California and a member of the faculty of the college of law there.

The judge was graduated from University of Southern California in 1917 and was admitted to practice in that year. However, he joined the army in April of that year and was among the first group from the first Officers' Training Camp at the Presidio. He served overseas with the Ninety-first Division, seeing actual combat in the battles of the Argonne, St. Mihiel and the defense of Verdun.

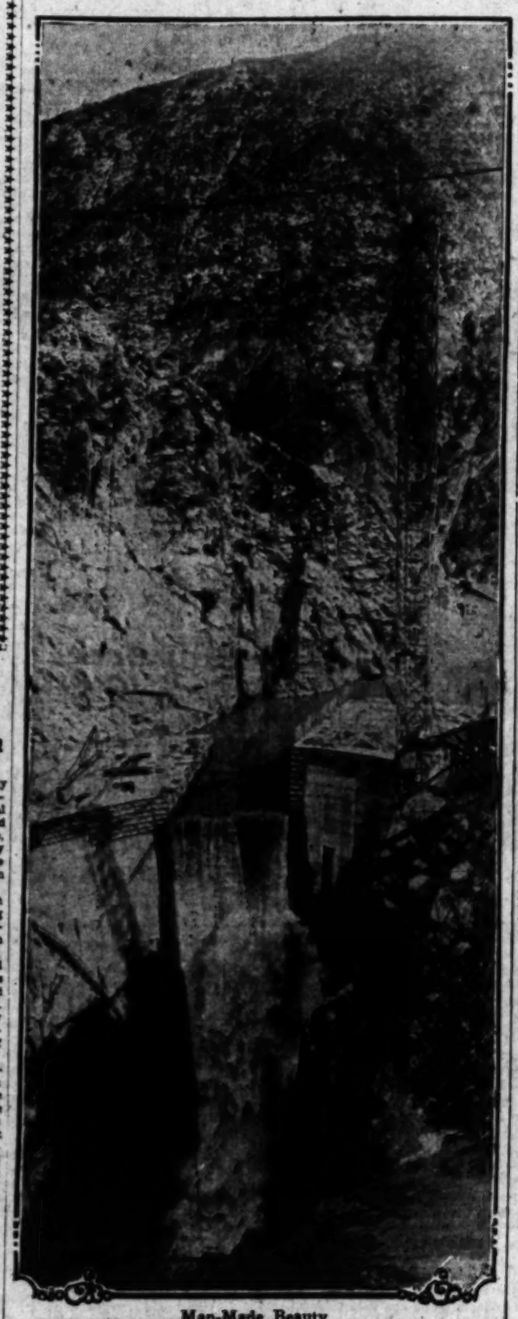
HIGHEST FALL IN SOUTHLAND

Flood Pours Over New Pacoima Dam



Man-Made Beauty

Scene at uncompleted unit of Los Angeles county flood control system with water plunging 150 feet. Dam, when completed, will be highest in world.

THE greatest waterfall in the history of Southern California was pouring over the top of the new Pacoima dam yesterday. It is a sight to stir even the most unromantic soul to its depths to see this man-made waterfall in the deep mountain canyon back of Pacoima.

The new county flood control dam, although only less than half completed, stands about 150 feet above the stream bed. When finished the dam will be about 400 feet high, the highest in the world. When the reservoir back of the dam filled up the excess waters slid over the top of the center part of the dam and went tumbling the 150 feet to the rocks below. The water panels over the dam through a depression left in the center forty-five feet wide and about ten feet deep. At the peak of the flood a stream of water about six feet deep was pouring over the center.

The tremendous force of this water carried tons of thousands of tons of rocks, boulders and sand away from the base of the dam where it had been piled after blasting and swept it nearly a half mile downstream. The truck road is now buried eight and ten feet under giant boulders and chunks of rock. Construction camp houses were half buried and others crushed. A few automobiles were caught and yesterday there could be seen the steering wheel and windshield frame of a Ford protruding from the bed of rocks and gravel. The county's testing laboratory was crushed and the machinery buried.

The damsite is inaccessible to the public, the cameraman obtaining the accompanying picture having had to climb the stairway about 350 feet high to get a view of the dam. Bent Brothers Construction Company is building the dam.

Truckers Fined for Failure to Get City Permit

As an opening to a campaign against illegal operation of trucking and passenger transportation services in and around Los Angeles Municipal Judge Richardson has imposed the maximum fine of $500 on J. W. Ritzman, said to be the head of a large trucking concern. Ritzman was brought before the court on a bench warrant.

Ritzman had been operating motor trucks between Los Angeles and Imperial Valley points for several months without first obtaining a city permit, according to the testimony of Policeman Bert Reynolds, who returned the truck owner from Fresno on Judge Richardson's warrant.

A similar charge against the U. C. Transfer Company of Berkeley resulted in Judge Richardson imposing a fine of $100. According to Deputy City Prosecutor Chotiner they had also operated truck lines in Los Angeles without a permit.

The actions grew out of asserted violations of requirements of the Board of Public Utilities, which demand that interurban freight operators keep on file insurance policies for the protection of the shipping and traveling public in case of injuries. City permits are also required under this ruling.

Miss Florence L. Silvertson, the first woman to be admitted to the Illinois Society of Certified Public Accountants, earns about $30,000 a year as an accountant.

POLICE BALK BOOTLEGGER IN SUICIDE

Fourth Arrest on Liquor Law Violation Held Cause; Still Found on Estate

Chagrin at his fourth arrest on bootlegging charges caused James Nash of Sherman to try to kill himself, it was declared yesterday in a report by Chief Enforcement Officer Contreras, of the District Attorney's staff, concerning his week-end activities. When arrested, the report said, Nash grabbed a revolver from the side pocket of his car and was about to point it at his head when the officers interfered. They had a hard struggle to get the weapon from him.

Near Downey, the officers, with the assistance of Constable Lucas, found, they reported, a huge distilling plant said to be owned by Boyle Heights capitalists on the Killem estate. The fine old ranch home, they said, housed a 600-gallon still on the first floor and 27,000 gallons of mash on the second. They got 900 gallons of whisky in the raid, the report said, and arrested Manus Rosenberg and Maxiam Gonzales, charged with running the place.

Near El Monte, with the aid of Constable Burdick, the officers arrested H. E. Jacobson, Tom Jones, Cotheo Naharro and Y. R. Gomez, all on selling charges. Near Huntington Park, officers arrested A. Hamilton, confiscating his automobile. Hamilton got out of jail a week ago on parole, it was declared. In the same vicinity Anthony Caliri and Frank Caliri, his son, were arrested for asserted selling of wine, and Manual J. Silvia for asserted sale of whisky.

Another automobile was seized, the officers said, from Lee Bowley of Sherman, arrested on transportation and possession charges. At Santa Monica, the raiders arrested Mr. and Mrs. Joe Isabelle.

ATHLETES MAKE HIGHER GRADES

Men's Dean at University of California at Los Angeles Says Survey Shows Outside Activities Make Better Students

As scholars, college athletes excel their more sedentary class-mates by a slight but definite margin, according to a statistical study just completed at the University of California at Los Angeles by Prof. Earl J. Miller, dean of men.

Not only does the survey tend to show that brawn and brains usually go together, but it also discloses that a good many of the objections levied by educators and others at campus activities as "detrimental to scholarship" have no basis in fact, at least among the students at University of California at Los Angeles.

The rather surprising results of the study, undertaken primarily by Prof. Miller to determine on a fact basis the relation between scholarship and those college activities which lie outside of the classroom, have led him to this general conclusion:

"Although the material herein presented does not furnish a sufficiently broad basis for many conclusions, the results obtained have all been favorable to extra-curricula activities. They indicate that the students engaged in activities make slightly better grades than nonactivity students and at the same time derive substantial benefits from their extra-curricula activities. They do not indicate that a policy of curtailing student activities should be adopted. It seems probable that some participation in extra-curricula work on the part of most students is desirable."

The survey revealed also that those students engaged in outside activities which took the most time made definitely better grades than those of the men whose outside interests occupied less time.

In all, 1904 male students, representing almost the entire full-time enrollment at the university, were included in the study.

ROUTE FOR HIGHWAY OPPOSED

Assemblyman Says Plan to Bring Coast Road Through City Not Desirable

Declaring that the bill, now pending before the Legislature which proposes to make Wilshire and Whittier boulevards part of the Coast highway would be of no benefit and would only increase traffic congestion in the heart of the city, Assemblyman Walter J. Little of Santa Monica announced last night that he will fight the enactment of the measure.

"This piece of legislation, the purpose of which seems to be a desire to have all the highways from the north and south empty into the heart of the city, would create a traffic condition that Los Angeles does not want," said Assemblyman Little. "The measure carries with it no program and makes no provision to take care of or relieve such a condition, but leaves it for the city to find a way out.

"There is only one way for the Coast highway, and that is along the coast, following the shore line where ever possible. Bringing it through Los Angeles would be an unnecessary detour and defeat the purpose of such a highway. It should extend, as originally planned, south from Santa Monica and along the coast, connecting Ocean Park, Venice, Redondo, Palos Verdes, San Pedro, Long Beach, and so on down to San Diego.

"The country through which it passes is rugged and mountainous, with beautiful and varied verdure; magnificent canyons, streams and springs, great rock formations, and the highway, winding like a ribbon, looks out for many miles over the waters of the Pacific, a scene of infinite grandeur. That tens of thousands of motorists and pleasure seekers will find delight in its use, when completed, is unquestionable. It can easily be reached by many of the splendid boulevards already leading from the city; and its completion will mean a tremendous impetus and be the greatest factor ever experienced in the development of the bay and harbor regions."

THIEVES TRY TO ROB SAFE OF WRITER

Edgar Rice Burroughs's Office Entered, Nothing of Value Taken

An attempt to break into the safe in the office of Edgar Rice Burroughs, the writer of "Tarzan of the Apes," on Avenida Oriente avenue, near Reseda, was reported to Police Captain Newstetter of the Van Nuys police division yesterday.

The burglar succeeded only in hammering the hinges of the safe and nothing of any value was disturbed in any other part of the office, Capt. Newstetter reported.

Mr. Burroughs, it was learned, left for Ogden, Utah on Saturday, leaving the office in charge of his secretary. The discovery of the attempt to break into the safe was made by Josie Wilson, the maid, yesterday morning.

The office of the author is situated but a short distance from his foothill home, Tarzana, a few miles from the city of Ventura Boulevard. A detail of police finger-print experts was sent to the office late yesterday to make an investigation. The man entered the office, it was stated, by jimmying a pair of French doors leading out to a driveway.

Arraignment in Kearns Hold-up Will be Today

Accused of the robbery of Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey, on December 30, 1926, and of his sister, Miss Helena McKernan as well as the theft of her expensive automobile, Edward W. Xanders and Ray E. Vincent will be arraigned today before Judge Burnell.

It is charged that the two defendants held up the fight manager at the point of a revolver and took $60 from him and his sister's car. Both Xanders and Vincent are reported to have admitted their participation in the robbery, which took place at Beach Road and Beverly Drive, Hawtelle.

BULLOCK'S

Gilfillan Radios

Tomorrow is the birthday of the father of our country. President Coolidge, in Washington, will deliver a speech. It will be broadcast. Millions of persons will be privileged to "listen in".

No need to dwell here on the benefit of Radio. The need is that the Radio shall broadcast accurately; Gilfillan TONE does this!

There are hidden details of construction. There is infinite care, tireless experiments undergone; there is the using of certain materials (mica, for instance, in place of paper, which many consider "will do.") And though these materials cost the more, Gilfillan has utilized them that Gilfillan Radios may be known for TONE. Tone intense; tone delicate as the fluttering of a whisper. Tone powerful, accurate.

Three models bring this marvelous TONE to you. Above is shown Gilfillan No. 30. 2 controls, gang condensers and special coils; 6 tubes, including power and detector tubes. Improved transformers, new Truhe-Hazeltine variable radio coupling system patent. Rola cone speaker built in. Complete, $396. Other models, at $90, $155.50, $265.

NOTE: The President's speech will be broadcast at Bullock's over a Gilfillan Radio at 10:30 tomorrow morning, Tuesday. You are cordially invited to hear it. At Bullock's Music Salon.

MUST BE OILED

A political machine isn't supposed to be ball-bearing. If it isn't dollar-bearing it will mighty soon be left in the ditch.

THE RIVALS

The Democrats would like to turn the McAdoo and Smith embroilment over to the Boxing Commission. There would be money at the gate, anyhow.

PENNY WISE

Perhaps one reason why some women turn up their noses at economy is that, now the fad is for reducing, they're fearfully afraid of being pound-foolish.

THE SONG OF SONGS

He breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, he knew not where.
But long, long afterward, in court,
He heard it read, not one word short.
'Twas filled with goo-goo, tosh and honey,
And helped to swell her alimony.

WORTH TRYING

An Ohio college professor says that there is more practical wisdom in a paragraph of Will Rogers than in a whole volume of the Congressional Record. It must be admitted that the pages of the Record would be considerably brightened if the Beverly Mayor were on its staff.

LUCKY STARS

There's undoubtedly something in the theory that it is luckier to be born under some signs of the zodiac than under others. It is in youth that we imbibe our ideas of the great men of the past—and what immortal here can you call to mind now whose birthday did not fall on a date which called for a school holiday?

LIVING LONGER

Dr. Charles H. Mayo told the American College of Surgeons that man's age lengthened twenty years from the sixteenth century until 1850, when the average was 40. The average was raised to 45 by 1875 and has since advanced to 58. He says the dangerous age for women is from 16 to 18; for man from 50 to 55. Beware when the old boys and flappers meet!

THE CLIMBERS

A Brooklyn schoolboy ran up the sixty flights of steps in the Woolworth Building in nine minutes flat—clipping three minutes from the best previous record. Here is a lad who would seem to need a business manager and press agent. Every record-breaker in these gold-lined days is supposed to have a business agent and surely a guy who can shin up 150 steps a minute is as important as one who can jump over a six-foot fence.

THE OLDEST TWINS

Ohio has been tossing bouquets to its oldest twins. They are brothers, born in Germany ninety-four years ago, but who came to this country when they were 8 years of age and have been associated together daily ever since. Both are on the directorate of their local bank and neither was ever known to smoke or drink. However, they are not boasting that they owe their years and health to the fact that they never walked a mile after a camel.

THE DIFFERENCE

A high member of the executive council of the American Medical Association says that no physician needs the right to use 100 whisky prescriptions every quarter. Before prohibition the average doctor would not be called upon to prescribe alcohol once a week. However, the doctor forgets that in the old days if a man felt that his case needed whisky he could step into the nearest saloon or drug store and get a whole quart for $1.

THE COMING COMET

Next June the Pons-Winnecke comet, which gave us a close go-by in 1921, will switch its tail across the face of the earth. Meanwhile doleful prognostications will be made concerning the effect of the gases carried in the tail. Astronomers pooh-pooh such prognostications. They say gas masks will not be needed. Telescopes can see millions of centuries into space; and, if any heavenly body is going to deface the earth, it hasn't been so much as sighted yet.

REFACING THE SPHINX

The dear old Sphinx is having her face done over by a committee of British archeologists. Something seemed necessary. For the sands of the centuries have cut furrows in the brow and gashes in the lips. And the nose, which the Turks used as a target, has been shot away. Despite the sand and shells, however, the Sphinx has thus far saved her face fairly well. No other face in all the world has fared any better. When the archeologists get through with her she may be more beautiful, but she'll not be the Sphinx we all know so well through countless pictures.

A ROUGH-WEATHER PILOT

Hostile critics of President Coolidge have been unable to pick a hole in his domestic policies, or if they did they only raised a smile from a nation wrapped in unprecedented prosperity. Grudgingly they are forced to admit that he has shown himself to be an excellent fair-weather pilot.

But with the admission they have scented disaster for him when called to navigate dangerous shoals in the teeth of adverse gales. They have said, in effect, wait till some foreign complication arises requiring quick decision and see whether he keeps the course.

The foreign complications which they expected would confound the pilot have already arisen and the ship of state labors in heavy seas. Europe, Mexico, Central America, Turkey and China are posing problems for world affair navigators in which at present the Chinese typhoon looms most immediately perilous. Is there any sign of nervousness or faltering in the hand at the wheel?

Anyone who doubted President Coolidge's ability to meet a difficult foreign situation, to set his mind at rest, can do no better than study the text of the American note to China bearing on international troubles over Shanghai. In its expressed determination to protect American lives and property, if the Chinese authorities are unable to do so, the note is not far different from one previously presented by Great Britain. But in the wording and sentiment of the note there is all the difference in the world.

England makes it clear that she regards Shanghai as a British question to be handled on the basis of British interests first. The American note approaches it from the neutral viewpoint and points out that Chinese lives and interests are threatened no less than those of foreigners if Shanghai is included in the war zone. The British attitude only infuriated the Cantonese. President Coolidge's diplomacy has already brought an offer from Northern China to cooperate in the defense of alien lives and property.

The President knows how to be firm without being provocative, an attribute of incalculable value in preserving our foreign relations from bluster on the one hand and supineness on the other. In the troubled waters of Mexico and Central America, no less than in the Chinese tempest, the President has steered a straight, confident, consistent course, avoiding the Scylla of sacrificed national rights and the Charybdis of aroused foreign resentment. He evinces no desire to steal a march on any foreign country, neither will he permit any foreign country to steal a march on America.

Nor is the power to reach just conclusions and to act on them promptly a new and unexpected note in the President's handling of difficult foreign situations. Almost since his inauguration he has been engaged in a battle with hostile foreign propaganda aimed at America by the countries of Europe. The dignity with which he has maintained friendly relations with European governments, while their nationals were engaged in a campaign of American abuse, the implacable front he has at the same time presented to those who supposed that America would deviate from its fixed course in the teeth of these adverse gales are an unqualified tribute to his ability as a rough-weather pilot.

President Coolidge employs neither the big stick of Theodore Roosevelt nor the watchful-waiting pincushion of Woodrow Wilson, yet he is as careful as the great Democrat and as resolute as the vigorous Progressive. Perhaps in the whole history of America's trials and triumphs—with the single exception of the stormy period 1861-1865—no abler pilot has steered the ship of state nor one who inspired more confidence in the hearts of his countrymen that he will hold the course, no matter what international tempests may arise.

THE NEW FARM BILL

Rarely has the Congressional seesaw ever been more freely and fully in play than in the consideration, rejection, reconsideration and passage of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill. It is evident by the final action of the Federal legislators after two years of this seesawing that they feared any longer to deny the urgent demand of the Midwest farmers for aid of some sort. There is a big block of votes in the corn belt, and in some future November they may come in handy.

As it passed the Senate the measure is little altered from the original that had been battered about Congress for so long and yet has come out so little the worse for wear despite over 100 proposed amendments, only a few of which were adopted. But less consistent than the Senate's action was that of the House, which by passing the measure reversed its position in less than twelve months, having rejected a bill embodying the same general provisions last spring. Two years ago it also voted down a bill of the same sort. The Senate merely reversed its position on a single feature, the equalization-fee clause, which it somehow came to regard as an acceptable one, after all.

The McNary-Haugen bill sets up a "revolving fund" of $250,000,000 and a governing board chosen on the initiative of the farm organizations rather than by the untrammeled prerogative of the President, as is usual. This board is authorized to buy up surpluses of wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, rice and swine whenever crop prices are threatened by overproduction, as they have been in recent years.

By buying and holding the surpluses, according to the theory of the framers of the bill, more favorable marketing can be arranged, with higher prices. The so-called equalization fee is in theory the amount the farmer pays to make the government board self-sustaining. This feature of the bill has been assailed as unconstitutional, but whether it is or not remains to be seen. The problem is as to the size of the fees, the manner of their collection and whether the producers will not revolt when called upon to pay them.

In theory the government would be out nothing by the operations of the board, as whatever would be spent of the $250,000,000 "revolving fund" to stabilize prices would be assessed against the farmers, who thus would have to stand any losses that might be incurred. The operations of the board in case of overproduction would be enormous. It might have to buy in crop after crop until all surpluses had disappeared and feed those surpluses into the world markets. This is one reason why the opponents of the measure have said that it would encourage overproduction. But if losses occur by such overproduction despite all efforts of the government to stabilize prices in a way to afford a profit or to "break even," and these losses are assessed against the farmer, he would readily see that production must be kept within safe bounds.

Few subjects have been so much debated in Congress as farm relief. The oratory on this legislation fills volumes of the Congressional Record. Whether, after all these debates and all the outside talk as to the discussion of the merits or demerits of the bill, it will be found acceptable by the President remains to be seen. His decision is awaited with intense interest by the people of the entire country.

VALUE OF CHECK DAMS

Southern California has received inestimable benefits and suffered some minor damages from the generous rainfall that may bring the precipitation for February somewhere near the record before the month closes. Our first and natural impulse is to rejoice over the benefits conferred; our next and corresponding duty is to learn the lesson taught by the damages reported.

Perhaps we can appreciate the situation better by studying the damages that might have occurred and did not, and the reason why we escaped so easily after so torrential a downpour. Conditions along the Arroyo Seco, before and after the building of the Devil's Gate dam, furnish an excellent example.

Before the building of the dam we experienced a rainstorm in duration and intensity almost paralleling the one that occurred from Sunday to Wednesday of the present week. Older residents will remember well what followed. A roaring young Niagara cut deep into the banks of the Arroyo, houses toppled into the stream, a raging torrent was added to the swollen waters of the Los Angeles River to cause widespread floods from Sweetwater to the bay of Los Alamitos.

Now consider what happened under similar weather conditions after the erection of the dam at Devil's Gate on the upper Arroyo. The increase of flow along the lower watercourse is but that of normal wet weather conditions, while above the dam sixty feet of water had accumulated by Tuesday night in the shape of a beneficial lake that will slowly sink through the soil to reappear in the shape of summer irrigating water. Not a drop of it will be wasted, along with the valuable silt it contains, in the waves of the ocean. In the record of this February alone the Devil's Gate dam has more than paid for its construction.

The unfinished Pacoima dam is holding back about 400 acre-feet of water, thus even in its only 40 per cent completed condition affording protection for a district that in former spells of excessive rainfall always suffered severely. The Sawpit Canyon dam above Monrovia—also unfinished—is an acknowledged factor in saving the lowlands from the usual flood water. The San Dimas dam on Wednesday morning was storing thirty-five feet of water that under old conditions would have run riot among the citrus groves of that banner orange country. At the new Puddingstone reservoir, in spite of the tremendous run-off of the hills, the water level on Wednesday, the third day of the storm, was still thirty feet below the crest of the dam.

Here we have the bright side of the picture, a glimpse of what this southern country will receive from bountiful, if sometimes tempestuous, nature when every stream and river course has been turned to human utility by a complete system of check dams.

To drive home the lesson we must also look at the other side of the picture. The best illustration of this is found in flood conditions along the San Gabriel River. But for the dickerings of peanut politicians and interested obstructionists the long-projected 492-foot dam at the forks in San Gabriel Canyon might by this time have been well under way and its effects in curbing the present unbridled flood water along this principal Los Angeles county watercourse have saved farms, crops and homes in low-lying sections.

Nor is this all that Southern California has to lose through the tactics of those who have delayed the building of the master dam on the San Gabriel, the keystone of the whole county flood control, as devised by Mr. Reagan and engineered in by government engineers. On the third day of the storm 23,000 second-feet of water was rushing down the river below the Foothill Boulevard.

Not only is this tremendous volume of water added to the forces of destruction, but—and this is of equal importance—the same amount is being subtracted from the agencies of blessing. Stored behind a mountain dam all this life-giving water would have been available for growing the crops which in its present form it sweeps away. Nor must it be forgotten that the stored rainfall behind check dams also percolates into the water-bearing sands below the surface and so raises the whole subterranean level for those who have to rely on artesian or pumped wells for their summer irrigating.

A WIZARD'S GIZZARD

When Henry Ford was entertained by Thomas A. Edison on his eightieth birthday recently a New York Times writer dug up the fact that the five-work-day week of the flivver king does not have the sympathy of the wizard of Menlo Park.

Edison even begrudges nature the little sleep he is compelled to take as time out of the big game of life. It seems that the largest content of wizard is plain, common, every-day gizzard. Some call it abdominal fortitude. Billy Sunday defines it in plainer terms still.

Considerable ink has been used up on wizards of one denomination or another. There are wizards of words and wizards of finance and wizards of science. But in the operation it comes out that wizard in every case is just ordinary gizzard.

A recent magazine article announces that the wizards of Wall street are largely the football or cinder-path heroes of other years. They not only have the genius for hard work, but also the stamina to stand up to it.

The person who can take the greatest amount of punishment without taking the count not only wins in the stadium, but also in the laboratory and on 'change.

Upon analysis wizardry of words is found to lack all necromancy. The tongue-tied bumpkin who is willing to grind down his speech with pebbles in his mouth as he yells against the breakers in a cavern by the sea has the making of an orator.

The baseball wizard does it by plugging away at a knot hole in his mother's back fence through the years. The famous "fade-away" was not a gift from heaven, but the product of gizzard for practice.

Aptitude never becomes a substitute for gizzard. The prodigy must begin to claw at the piano and hollow out the keys like spoons at the age of 2. The grind of the gizzard that could digest sawdust without butter made a Weed and a Webster in the law.

Money is found in flivvers and real estate that furnish the most turnovers. Tin cans and old shoes are transmuted into plumes in gizzards of size. Slaves that can make bricks without straw, like goats that can make milk out of rags and old rope, survive all the wild beasts of the jungle.

He who lacks gizzard to go through with it might as well decide in the beginning to be but a chambermaid for another's car the remainder of his life and steer another man's hopes and ambitions.

A tree that yields milk, just as maples yield sweet sap, has been discovered in Central America. It is interesting to know that they raise something down there besides revolutions. If the discoverer of the milk tree had looked around, he might also have found whole droves of milk weeds.

KLIEG LIGHTS AND PEARLS

BY MURZA BARONOVA

I have been to the Garden of Alla, the home that Nazimova lost and lost; and I have seen there a passion flower of the New Russia, a bloom whose petals unfolded within the sheltering walls of the Moscow Art Theater while a hurricane raged outside and a blood mist covered the face of the Fatherland.

Olga Baklanova—daughter of the snows, with eyes as blue as the waters of a Russian lake and hair the color of the golden corn when the sun first pierces the transparent morning haze, and the gleaners come with their dresses tucked high and arms and bosoms bare, and bend low until the heads of the waving grain mingle with the long braids of their yellow hair.

Olga Baklanova—daughter of the Revolution! In each cheek blooms a red rose—symbol of the crimson tide loosed by disciples of Communism—and her throat is as white as the marble of a mausoleum.

RED WAVES

While the tempest raged without Olga Baklanova and the other members of the troupe dreamed only of their art. But it was a tragic art; for the air was charged with tragedy. The cries of triumph of the pursuers and the despairing wail of the pursued penetrated the walls of their cloister-like abode.

Curious enough, all the excesses of Bolshevism halted at the portals of the Moscow Art Theater. Vandal feet and the red torch passed it by. There it stood, an island in a sea of blood; and on that island the troupe produced tragedies before which the rest of the world marveled. The waters of the crimson flood are receding, and the tragedienne who learned their art in that environment now look out upon the world with eyes in which the flames of tragedy are still visible.

Olga Baklanova has come to Los Angeles—to Hollywood—which she tells me was the land of the dreams of the group in the Moscow Art Theater.

HOLLYWOOD FIRST

"I wanted to go to heaven, some time, as all good Russians do," she said to me, as the transparent shadows of the Hollywood hills fell across the window of her bungalow in the Garden of Alla, "but I wanted to go to Hollywood first.

"And now I am here, thanks to the generosity and kindness of Morris Gest, and it is as though a dream had come true.

"How I love the art atmosphere of Hollywood! There is nothing like it elsewhere in the world. The serdid has all been banished. I have been to the studios, and have met in person some of the great artists who were an inspiration to us when we saw them on the screen in Russia. I have not been disillusioned; my illusion just grows and grows.

"Morris Gest tells me that it is possible I shall remain, that I, too, shall be one of them, that I may play a tragic role in a film produced here. But it is so new and strange to me, so unlike the atmosphere of the Moscow Art Theater. It is as though one had stepped on a magic carpet and been carried away to a new planet.

"They are calling for me to come back to Moscow. I am here on a permit from the soviet government. That permit expires in September. There is protest against its renewal. Before September comes I must decide; and my mother is over there. If I overstay my leave I can never return.

"My heart calls me back to my mother, and my art calls me to remain here in the center of the great cinema world. What will be the answer?"

A GARDEN OF EXILES

She held her hand to me, as her lips quivered and a mist dampened her wonderful eyes. I held it in both my own, and told her I, too, had a mother in Russia. I opened a locket that I always wear on a chain about my neck and showed her a picture.

And we sat, as girls in Russia do, saying little but holding hands and dreaming—she, of the great city of Moscow in the north, where she was born, and I, of Odessa, at the southern end of the great steppes: the Odessa that Count Ilya Tolstoi called the most beautiful city of the world.

Americans will not understand; for their hearts are as the mild seas where only the trade winds blow; but the Slav heart is a wild waste of water where hurricanes are loosed when the north wind and the east wind meet.

What will be the fate of this passion flower in Hollywood? She was the favorite tragic actress of the Moscow Art Theater. She created a new Carmen, and Rheinhart and Gest say she is the greatest who has ever played that role. But will she be able to kindle the fire of her passion from a Klieg light?

We Russians are all victims of a willful, uncontrollable temperament. Our passion feeds on the passion about us. In drab environment, we are inclined to ourselves be drab.

Olga Baklanova was the passion of Moscow. But Moscow is not Hollywood. And as I talked with her I marveled that such as she could be a product of Communism. No one seems to know why even the most fanatical Bolshevists dared not lay their bloody hands on the Moscow Art Theater. It is the only thing susceptible in Russia to destruction that escaped unscathed.

How different was the fate of the theaters and the artists of the Crimea! The Odessa municipal theater, one of the finest structures of its kind in Europe, was plundered by the Reds, and the artists were driven forth in exile. Julius Obeka, the leading vaudevillist of the Crimea, fled with the rest of us to Varna on the Vladimir, to be killed later in Sofia.

The acts of the Bolsheviki recall to me some lines I recently read by an American poet, Bret Harte, I believe:

The Heathen Chinee is peculiar."

But Olga Baklanova is here. Although a daughter of the Revolution, her soul is the soul of a Russian woman. In the theater none was greater than she. So will America, will Hollywood provide the environment in which she can give expression to the divine impulse within? Hollywood—are hearts are brains or else as heads!

If she does not take rank with Pola Negri, the fault will be not with her, but with the moguls of Hollywood. The part is about to be cast—but not what waters?

"I think you're wrong," he told the pastor, "your words are likely to deceive, the you maintain that hell disorder will get us if we don't believe. I don't you're wrong when you hatch of punishment beyond the grave that penitential fire will warm unless we learn to quit bein Man lives and smokes his last dossier to be good, decent, true fair; man dies and then he rises forever and there's the wailing whom. Man lives and works and hears his burden that with living he may thrive; dies in punishment or question he must pay while he's alive.' He was a fool while he was here, he mocks, clouped his gaping head, and while he lay, all cramped bunting, the snowbound sat, "for nearing death." And while the newboss played a philip on his theme, stern and grim he prepared. "Call the village parwish to have a word with me." The parson came, all gloom learning, to talk about the pa white throne; and Hackmatack, his childhood turning, recited texts he then had learn. BANDIT FORMED A PROCESSION

Though they lacked the finesse of the modern American bandit in the matter of motor mobility, highwaymen of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries could still give points to their motor-driving brethren of today.

In 1793, for instance, the mail from France was held up and robbed in the very fine, busy part of Pall Mall, within earshot of the guard at St. James's Palace. A sedan chair passed the bandits, and in some manner managed to get the purse and more of the late Lord Chancellor of England. The way it got the first notice bandits in Pleiads to his lodging on the cliff rocking with laughter when it came out.

With the appearance of motor buses a public procession was formed, a man bore the purse at his another carried the mace over shoulder, others made an escort behind came Baron Eldon, the Lord Chancellor. He, a man doubted the courage of the age, did not carry a blunderbuss hanged for it at Tyburn in 1800. [Manchester Guardian.

Featherweight Bun Competition

Fruit as an ingredient in a bun stands considerable comparison. This is of weight into the scale, but in addition ing to its commercial value, it is also same principle can be applied to the bodding back great volumes of bun has been proved within the last few or four months in a competition at Stevenson Manor in Cumberland, a mere egg-shell of pastry, only feet high and very thin, was filled thick as the bun, and having placed against the wall, was required to knock by the right arm, his head being bound even during an Olympic bout by the single arch but does not by the ginnering Press Association. height is equal to a man's height feet, is perhaps the most unique and less costly dish ever produced. ture election posters and meeting projects.

Coal Consumption for Fuel

By close attention to the subject of coal consumption on the railroads the railroad companies of the country have been able to effect a cutting down of the fuel bill. There been some increase in the cost of coal in the engines, but on the whole the coal, and the average train now gives us 142 pounds of coal per mile, 1000 tons of freight a mile, whereas it was necessary to go as much as 200 pounds of coal per mile to haul the same load a few years ago.

BANDIT FORMED A PROCESSION

Though they lacked the ferocity of the modern American bandits in the matter of sheer audacity, highwaymen of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries could still give points to their trans-Atlantic brothers of today.

In 1786, for instance, the royal mail from France was held up and robbed in the even then busy street of Pall Mall, within earshot of the guard at St. James's Palace. But the palm must be given to a somewhat earlier thief named Sadler, who by some means, managed to steal the purse and mace of the Lord High Chancellor of England. The way he got the loot across Lincoln's Inn Fields to his lodging set the country rocking with laughter when it came out.

With the assistance of some friends a public procession was formed: one man bore the purse on his cushion, another carried the mace over his shoulder, others made an escort, and behind came Sadler himself aping the Lord Chancellor. Not a soul doubted the authenticity of the procession. The humor of the exploit did not save Sadler from being hanged for it at Tyburn in 1677.—[Manchester Guardian.

The Oak Trees and the Lady

Wayne B. Wheeler had been answering a correspondent's criticism of prohibition. He concluded: "We are all inclined to expect too quick results. A day will come when the average American will no more dream of drinking whisky than of drinking coal oil, but we want it to come too soon. We are like the urchin who said after his first morning at school: 'That school's no good. I ain't able to read yet.' And he threw down a newspaper very disgustedly.

"Or we are like the woman who bought a house and lot in the suburbs. The day she made her first payment, she said to the agent: 'Thank you so much for those acorns. I planted them in the garden. Are you really sure they'll grow up into big, strong, handsome trees?'

"'Quite, madam,' said the agent.

"'Then,' said the woman, 'on your way back to town will you kindly stop at Smollett's and tell them to send me up a hammock?'"—[Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Featherweight Dam Construction

Frail as an egg-shell is, it withstands considerable pressure taking its weight into consideration. This is owing to its convex shape. That the same principle can be applied to dams holding back great volumes of water has been proved within the last three or four months in a canyon on the Stevenson River in California where a mere "egg-shell" of concrete, sixty feet high and only twenty-four inches thick at the top, but bowed inward against the water pressure at precisely the right arc, has refused to break even during an October flood. This single arch test dam built by the Engineering Foundation, and whose height is about to be raised to 160 feet, is pointing the way toward much less costly dam construction for future electric power and irrigation projects.

Coal Consumption Cut Down

By close attention to the subject of coal consumption on the locomotives, the railroad management of the country has succeeded in materially cutting down the fuel bill. This has been accomplished by improvements in the engines, scientific inspection of the coal, and through the instructions given to firemen. Today less than 142 pounds of coal is required to haul 1000 tons of freight a distance of one mile, whereas in 1923 170 pounds was necessary to do the same work.

ORATORS KEEN FOR CONTEST

Enthusiasm Growing Among Schools of District

Hollywood Hopes High for Finals Contestant

Outside Prizes Offered Add Zest to Tryouts

Continued enthusiasm among the high schools in the Fourth National Oratorical Contest is revealed by last week's reports received from various school journalists by Director Nichols.

"The Fourth National Oratorical Contest is arousing great interest in Hollywood," writes Miss Gretchen J. Garrison of Hollywood High. "After Herbert Wenig's success last year, we hope to have another contestant go through to the finals.

"The history and English departments are co-operating with the public-speaking classes by giving credits to the students in the contest. The contestants are busy studying the historical background of the Constitution, as well as the document itself. The progress of the contest is announced each week in the Hollywood High School News."

SCHOOL OFFERS PRIZE

"Enthusiasm increases as our plans develop for the local part in the National Oratorical Contest," writes Mrs. M. Kirkpatrick, one of the teachers of Chino High School. "The dramatics class of the school is offering prizes of $5, $3 and $2 to the local winners as an added incentive."

"There is much discussion and speculation on who will be the winner in this year's contest," writes Richardson Hastings of Long Beach Polytechnic High School. "In previous years it was fairly well settled who would probably place first in the finals, but this year there are so many good and experienced speakers that nobody can tell what will happen.

"One of the most interesting of the contestants at Long Beach is Theodore Rodriguez, a native of Mexico, who despite a marked accent, nevertheless possesses ability to hold the interest of an audience. Theodore was in last year's contest, also, surviving to the district finals. His foreign appearance and method of dealing with his subject, which differs from that of the native American, always creates interest."

WORKING OUT DETAILS

"Details of our school's part in the National Oratorical Contest are now being worked out," writes Miss Dorothy Fleine, reporting from Montebello High School.

"A large number of our best students are writing orations, among them Clifton Douglass, president of the sophomore class in '26, treasurer in '26, football star and crack debater. Other contestants are Georgia Hollis, secretary of the junior class and also vice-president of the Girls' League last year, secretary of the student body this year, and particularly distinguished for dramatic ability; Frank Patterson, literary manager of the student body and prominent in dramatic work, and Lois Elliott, former class president, brilliant student of dramatics and a participant in last year's oratorical contest."

SEMIFINALS REACHED

"Debaters at San Bernardino High School are bending every effort to be prepared for preliminary tryouts in the fourth National Oratorical Contest," says Charles Haydis, reporting for that institution. "San Bernardino was first represented in the contest in 1925 when Virgil Pinkey, after winning first place in the county districts, reached the semifinals.

"Although our contestants are all inexperienced this year, the enthusiasm displayed assures our school a creditable showing. Oratory always has held a prominent part in the school activities and this year is no exception."

"Our public-speaking classes, under the direction of Mrs. Grace Baumann, are diligently at work on orations in the Fourth National Oratorical Contest," writes Miss Alice Doty of the Ventura High School. "Much interest has been added by several prize offers to our contestants. Oscar T. Conklin, editor of the Ventura Free Press, has offered $10 in gold, and a similar prize has been offered by the Ventura Chamber of Commerce, while the local Order of Elks is offering a cash prize of $25 to the district winner."

WET COURT EMANATES SUNSHINE

Bargains With Liquor Defendant Not to Tell Idaho Folks About Storm in Consideration of Mere $50 Fine for Having Jug of Wine in His Car

As far as Paul Holmes is concerned, Los Angeles' recent rainstorm and attendant flood conditions will never be broadcast through the towns and villages of Idaho. If he should write back to the home folks, his remarks on weather conditions will be such as would bear out sunny California's reputation for ideal climatic conditions.

And all this can be credited to the high public spirit of Municipal Judge Turney, who, backed by Chief Trial Deputy City Prosecutor Thoms, saw his duty to California and carried it out. Through the efforts of the jurist and prosecutor, any inkling of the wet weather will be suppressed from Idaho residents if Holmes has his way.

Holmes, a recent arrival from Idaho, stood before Judge Turney to plead technical guilt to a charge of possession of a gallon of wine. The wine was in his car when he was arrested by Officer Stammers at 4264 Van Nuys Boulevard Friday night, he admitted, but how it got there was a mystery.

"I came to Los Angeles to settle down and I had gone out to Van Nuys to see what damage had resulted from the flood," Holmes said. "Back home in Idaho we always thought of California as sunny and warm and that rain was a big surprise to me. I'll have to write the folks about it."

Judge Turney looked concerned and Prosecutor Thoms sprang into action. They discussed the matter at length and concluded there had been enough publicity about the storm.

Holmes agreed that he would say nothing of the storm if granted leniency in the matter of punishment on the liquor offense, with the result Judge Turney imposed a fine of $125 and suspended $75 of that amount.

CHAMBER'S BANQUET TO SET RECORD

More Than 1000 Reserve Places and Noted Men of City and Nation to Speak

All previous Chamber of Commerce banquets are expected to be eclipsed tomorrow evening at the Ambassador when D. F. McCarry is inaugurated president of the chamber for 1927, according to A. G. Arnoll, secretary and general manager, who states that more than 1000 reservations have been made. Hundreds are expected to be turned away before the day is over, Mr. Arnoll stated, because of the large demand for the few remaining tables.

However, with the arrangements completed to broadcast the program, between 8 and 10 p.m., members unable to attend can learn the happenings of the evening. The speeches will be broadcast by courtesy of the Franklin Building and Loan Association and the Western Auto Supply Company.

"Ships and Commerce," the principal address of the evening by Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company and former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, is expected to prove of interest to business and shipping men.

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, now in Los Angeles arranging for the locating here of a branch factory, and George M. Reynolds, chairman of the board of the Continental Commercial Bank of Chicago, will also speak.

Retiring President Arthur S. Bent, will review briefly the events of the past year, while President McCarry will outline plans for the coming twelve months. J. Dabney Day, president of the Citizens' National Bank, will be master of ceremonies.

Attorney Hopes to Save Stone From Gallows

Pleas to save S. C. Stone, former Glen Airy-district night watchman, from the gallows for the murder of the Martin sisters, May and Nina, Bush of Los Angeles. Bush left for Young in Sacramento today by the condemned man's attorney, Chandos Bush of LosAngeles. Bush left for Sacramento yesterday loaded with petitions and affidavits to submit to the Governor.

One of the petitions to be presented to Gov. Young when Bush makes his plea to commute sentence of Stone to life imprisonment was signed by nearly 1000 residents of the district in which Stone was formerly a watchman and where the two young sisters resided. It was said also he had affidavits from a number of the jurors who voted for infliction of the death penalty, as well as a letter from the mother of the murdered girls, who asks that Stone be saved from the gallows.

Dr. John Salles Holmes, representative of the United Church Brotherhoods, which has been aiding Stone in his fight for commutation of sentence, went to Sacramento with Bush. The latter made an appointment for today through the Governor's executive secretary, Keith Carlin.

FILM PAIR LEAVE ON EASTERN TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd

Harold Lloyd, film comedian, and his wife, Mildred Davis, also featured on the silver screen, left last night on the Santa Fe for New York on their first trip east together since the birth of their daughter Gloria. Miss Davis used to support her husband as leading woman until they were married and Gloria came along. Now that she has reached the toddling age her mother decided to re-enter the pictures, and one of the reasons for the Lloyds' trip to the eastern metropolis is to witness the premiere of "Too Many Crooks," which marks Miss Davis's return to the screen.

The Lloyds expect to remain in New York for at least three weeks, returning here late in March.

COOLIDGE ASSURED WISCONSIN

Badger State Editor, Here for Winter, Says People Will Back President

Despite Wisconsin's Socialistic tendencies, that State is strongly back of President Coolidge and his policies, and the Chief Executive can depend upon Wisconsin support in case he seeks re-election.

That was the statement yesterday by John L. Sturtevant, former vice-president of the Associated Press, former president of the Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League, and the present editor and publisher of the Wausau (Wis.) Record-Herald.

Mr. Sturtevant, a political power in the Badger State, is spending the winter in Los Angeles as a guest at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel. He is thoroughly "sold" on Southern California, despite the record storm of last week, and says he will spend all his winters here in the future. In fact, when he retires he may come to Los Angeles to reside permanently.

"That was only a shower you had last week, and I know that it meant little or nothing to your tourist guests from the Middle West," Mr. Sturtevant commented. "I arrived shortly before the storm started, and found inclement weather prevailing all along the route here. The storms have been general, it appears, throughout the country."

The publisher added that Wisconsin looks upon Los Angeles as an industrial center that will equal the larger manufacturing sections of the country, and that capital of his State is available for plants here.

Davies Rites to be Conducted Here Thursday

Funeral services for Hywel Davies, member of the United States Board of Railway Mediation, who died in Washington, D. C. Thursday night following an operation for intestinal trouble, will be conducted Thursday at 11 a.m. from the Little Church of the Flowers. Interment will be at Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Mr. Davies, who last December was appointed by President Coolidge to a five-year term on the board, was 67 years of age. A native of Wales, he had resided most of his life in Louisville and Lexington, Ky., coming to Los Angeles in 1918 from the latter city.

The deceased leaves a widow, Mrs. Ella C. Davies, residing at 208 South Normandie street, and the following children: H. Brooks, A. Wayne, Paul B., John F., Wilda T., Alleine B., and Helen G. Davies.

Honorary pallbearers for the services will be announced today.

JACKDAW FLIES TO MARKET

Not to be left at home by his master, Reginald Martin of Peterborough, Eng., the boy's pet jackdaw followed him to market by flying above the auto for six miles recently. Then he helped in the marketing, lost the car for a few minutes, found it again and flew in its wake back home. He usually follows his master to school.

ARBITRATION OF DISPUTES URGED

Head of National Association Tells Advantages

Judge Grossman, Visitor, Says Plan Grows

Quicker Decisions One of Many Benefits Cited

Settlement of commercial disputes through arbitration rather than by court procedure is proving unusually successful where the method has been adopted and the movement to promote this form of settlement of controversies is growing, according to Moses H. Grossman of New York, credited with being the founder of the American Arbitration Association, which is taking the lead in arbitration promotion.

Judge Grossman, formerly a member of the New York bench, is a Los Angeles visitor, being here on a vacation. "I started out to take a vacation, but find so much interest in the arbitration movement that I am devoting a good bit of time to giving talks on it before various meetings," he said.

Briefly, the method of settlement of disputes involves the submission to arbitrators of controversies over money or property. To make the settlement legally valid, the parties to the controversy must have agreed at the time of entering into the transaction that led to the dispute that they would abide by an arbitration settlement.

AGREEMENTS RECOGNIZED

Four States, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Oregon, have enacted laws providing for the recognition by the courts of such settlements to the same extent that court decisions are recognized. The Federal government has adopted a similar law with reference to interstate commerce, admiralty and maritime matters, and there is at this moment pending in the California Legislature a bill for an arbitration act similar to that of New York.

"The advantages of arbitration settlements in disputes involving money or property are numerous," said Judge Grossman. "First, it prevents delay. A case submitted to arbitration may usually be settled in a week or two and often only a few hours are required. A suit in court, on the other hand, usually requires years for settlement. In New York City at this time, for instance, there are 39,000 pending lawsuits. This means that a litigant in New York can't hope for settlement in less than three years. And this is only an illustration of the crowded condition of court dockets all over the country.

DECISION BY EXPERTS

"Another advantage is that the decision in an arbitration case is always rendered by persons who have intimate knowledge of the matter in dispute. For example, two merchants get into a dispute over a cargo of silk, which one has undertaken to purchase from the other. The arbitrators selected to pass on the merits of the claims of the disputants in this case would be expert silk men and not a jury composed of persons probably not even cognizant of the fact that silk is produced by worms. The complicated rules of evidence applying in a court case are disregarded, common sense being used instead.

"Perhaps the greatest advantage, however, is that in virtually every case of arbitration the disputants are friends when the case is settled. A good illustration of this fact came under my observation a short time ago where a Chicago merchant claimed a New York merchant owed the Chicago man $12,000. The case was settled by arbitration, the New York man lost, paid his $12,000 and almost at the same moment placed a large order for goods with the successful claimant."

PREVENTABLE WASTE

Judge Grossman called attention to a recent statement made by Secretary Hoover to the effect that outside of war, the largest single item of preventable waste today is commercial litigation. "This waste can largely be eliminated by submitting commercial controversies to arbitration and this fact is becoming increasingly recognized throughout this country."

An interesting observation was made by Judge Grossman as to how the lawyers regard the arbitration movement. "They're for it," he said. "As a matter of fact it has been shown that the lawyers profit by this form of settling disputes because it enables them to handle a far greater number of cases with a minimum of expense to themselves. It was largely due to the support of the American Bar Association that the arbitration acts of the States that now have them were passed."

Comedy Drama of World War Held Success

That Del Lord, with his first feature, "Who Goes Where?" for First National, has added another important comedy drama of war is the opinion expressed by those who have seen the picture run off in the rough. New situations, new "gags," riotous fun, the amusing action surrounding Charlie Murray and George Sidney as soldiers, stamp the picture as a success, according to the general verdict.

Beginning with the action in a prewar saloon with Charlie Murray as a "cop" and Sidney as its owner, the scene shifts to recruiting times and later to the trenches, with a fade-out that shows the two soldiers as sorry specimens of humanity. The finale came to Lord as he was halfway home one night from the studios, when he dashed back, had sets rushed and shot the action with his usual "bang."

For the manipulation of the machine guns and explosive, Lord had the aid of gunners from the United States Army who directed all this business. Hundreds of extras were used in the trench sequence.

For the first time in three years shipbuilding in the world is showing an increase over that of the year previous.

ORIGINAL CAST WILL BE ON HAND

"Is Zat So" Brought to Belasco by Two Former Angelenos

"Is Zat So," a comedy which has been presented on two continents, will have its western premiere at the Belasco tonight. It features the original New York and London cast—headed by James Gleason, a former Angeleno, and Robert Armstrong, Earle Boothe, also a former resident of this city, who is presenting this fight play on the Pacific Coast, brought the entire company here direct from New York.

Leaders of society in Pasadena, Hollywood and Los Angeles have made reservations for the premiere, it is said. And aside from the many screen stars that attend a large opening, many local boxers will be present.

The management is presenting a special Washington Birthday matinee tomorrow afternoon. This however, does not interfere with the regular Wednesday matinee, it is said.

COMEDIENNE HEADLINES PANTAGES

Vesta Victoria, Famous Singer of Comedy Songs, on Variety Bill

Vesta Victoria, English singer of comedy songs, will appear this week as the headliner on the Pantages bill. She first came to this country in 1906 and since that time has made five complete trips around the globe, singing in all of the English-speaking countries.

Her program will consist of selections from over sixty songs from her repertoire of comedy masterpieces. Two of the most popular of her group are "Poor John" and "Waiting at the Church."

On the same bill will be five other vaudeville acts. Among them is the Busch, Glaister and Harry Gaskin and their special orchestra. The team will present a striking and interesting act of singing and dancing.

The acrobatics on the program will be furnished by Bobby McGood and company.

Cliff Nazaro, who is an exclusive Columbia record artist, is another member of the group, and will present a splendid program of songs, mingled with a breezy line of chatter.

ORCHESTRA COMES HOME REJOICING

"Pop" Concert Has Vacation Verve; Reuter Plays Brilliantly; Flesch Arrives

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

Los Angeles' Philharmonic Orchestra and its conductor, Walter Henry Rothwell, returned home to their natural habitat at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon after an adventurous week in the wild places between San Diego and this city, where they were stranded because of the storm. The players demonstrated their gratitude for deliverance by the brilliant performance of a varied Pop program with only a short Saturday morning rehearsal in which to prepare it.

The soloist was Rudolph Reuter, eminent pianist of Chicago, who chose the Rubinstein fourth concerto with which to be presented to Los Angeles. He gave it a scintillant reading with sparkling runs and certain rather flashy gestures quite unnecessary to the text. His tone is as unlike a diamond in its brilliance. The attraction of a singing cantilena was lacking.

Another musician from Chicago was represented in the Symphonic Prelude by Rossetter Cole. The work created interest and is enjoyable. Its principal theme is an obvious one. The minor statement was not so clear. The rich harmonic development of the melodies was in no way unusual but pleasant. Violas and 'cellos were lavishly and effectively used in the second part.

Weber's "Preischutz" overture opened the program gracefully, its smooth climaxes demonstrating the ability of this exceptional band. The other numbers were an Intermezzo from "The Jewels of the Madonna," the Boccherini Minuet from Quintet No. 11 and Caprice Espagnole by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

CARL FLESCH ARRIVES

Carl Flesch, whose violin concert occurs Tuesday night immediately following that of Fritz Kreisler on Monday, is of the same school. They both studied in Vienna and went later to Paris. Their musical lives have been parallel in many ways.

One of the chief differences between these two famous violinists is that Carl Flesch has been an extremely successful teacher. He is at present at the head of the violin department at the Curtis Institute of Music at Philadelphia.

Departing from the usual custom of the artist, Mr. Flesch has deliberately chosen to give part of each year to pupils. It is his broad view that a player who does not teach loses invaluable opportunity for learning himself and for leaving a lasting impression upon the world of music. He is correct in the assertion that artists who do not teach have a tendency to become egotists.

Part of the year Mr. Flesch spends on tour, part at Philadelphia and part at his home in Baden-Baden. Pupils follow him to this country reversing the old order which drew American music students to Europe.

His program on Tuesday contains a group of Handelian arias from opera which he discovered in some old archives and set for violin. Although this is his first concert in Los Angeles, those who know of his high ideals and exceedingly fine reputation in the violin world will be in large attendance.

FRITZ KREISLER TONIGHT

Fritz Kreisler, one of the greatest violinists today, will play his only Los Angeles recital tonight at Philharmonic Auditorium. It will be a typical Kreisler program, opening with Mozart and Bach, then groups of shorter pieces from the old violin masters down to contemporaries. The concert takes place under the Behymer management.

YOUTH, AFTER ALL, IS RELATIVE TERM

Fannie Ward at Orpheum Has Outwitted Time With Joyous Spirit

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

There is an interesting field for comparison at the Orpheum this week. Two stars, whose names have been familiar for these many years, are appearing on the same program. Fannie Ward, who made her stage debut back in the eighties, and who boasts of being a grandmother, has miraculously outwitted the ravager, Time and today is young and beautiful. Trixie Friganza, the Leviathan of joy, hasn't worried about losing her figure or the fact that her hair has turned silvery gray. But she's young, too.

So, you see, age is only a relative thing. Not a matter of appearance so much as of spirit.

Fannie Ward hardly looks a schoolgirl, all publicity to the contrary, but she is an amazingly youthful and airy person for one who confesses to sixty years, in her playlet, "The Miracle Woman."

This play, written by Edgar Allan Woolf, presents a mother years younger in appearance than her daughter. The audience scents a romance between the perennial ingenue who refuses to grow old, and the juvenile, but the denouement introduces the youth as her grandson.

"The Miracle Woman" is no great shakes as far as dramatic construction is concerned, but it serves Miss Ward admirably. Appearing in support are Ben Taggart, Dwight George, May Gerald and Mannie Pressey.

Charles Derickson and Burton Brown deserve a whole flock of superlatives in praise of their musical offering. Derickson has a full, lovely tenor voice, and Brown possesses splendid technique on the piano. Derickson scores with his "Pagliacci" offering, but his voice appears to best advantage in ballads. Brown plays the familiar and popular Rachmaninoff Prelude. The audience wouldn't let the two boys go without a speech yesterday.

Louis London's character songs are different and seemed popular, but he forces his work. However, he brings back that beautiful song of several years ago, "Brown October Ale," from the light opera, "Robin Hood."

"The Plasterers" is a rough and tumble, thoroughly nerve-racking offering with the players falling in the orchestra pit, and hitting each other with planks and bricks. O'Donnell and Blair are the chief members of this black and blue, slap-stick comedy. A little goes a long way.

Ralph Bevan is amusing as the fifth husband of the stalwart widow in "Love Mates." Beatrice Flint was the much-married lady, and Earl Mayo played the other four husbands, with different sets of crepe whiskers for each characterization.

"At least I'm doing business with an established firm," said Bevan when informed that there were four predecessors.

Some clever stepping is done by the Los Angeles Ensemble, a dance revue which closes the bill. Lester Land and Elsie Travers possess third-row voices but their dancing is superior. Miss Travers does well in the "Shawl Athletic," and Lane is a very agile and graceful youth. The ensemble offers a series of drills, with the Black Bottom winning the most applause.

Trixie Friganza is always welcome at the Orpheum. Her songs, her characterizations, and her "dancing" are guaranteed to dispel the deepest clouds of gloom. This is her second week at the Orpheum and this time for good measure she does a delightful burlesque on the familiar adagio dancing team.

The Takesas, who have the opening spot, are dexterous with their feet. Their stage setting, made in Japan, provides a brilliantly colorful background for their number.

NANCY CARROLL TO APPEAR IN REVUE

Nancy Carroll, who appeared in the old Music Box Revue, and who was co-starred with Allan Conners in "Loose Ankles" during the Los Angeles run and also during the road tour, has been signed by Louis O. Macloon as a featured principal in his "New Music Box Revue," starring Fanny Brice, it was learned yesterday.

Macloon "discovered" Nancy, and her appearance in the new revue is expected to be another step toward her ultimate stardom. Nancy made her first theatrical appearance in "All For You," the musical comedy which was produced in Los Angeles a year and a half ago, and has since been making rapid progress, it is said.

"DEVIL'S ISLAND" INTERESTING

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

There is a new thrill about "Devil's Island" now showing at the Figueroa Theater, which is certainly satisfying. Furthermore, though this Chadwick Production starring Pauline Frederick has had little publicity it is in my estimation, one of the most interesting pictures I have seen in some time.

In the first place the plot is not threadworn with constant use. It is based on the historic fact that French life prisoners are sent to "Devil's Island" off the coast of South America and, after seven years, are paroled to Cayenne, where they are allowed to marry and live—although still prisoners. The dramatic note is struck through the fact that their wives and children are also life prisoners.

With this situation for its basis, "Devil's Island" is directed in a thoroughly excellent manner by Frank O'Connor. The situations are new and like a clear cool breath of air. This picture shows what can be done with a good story when it is well directed and fitted out with a competent cast.

Pauline Frederick is seen in the role of a woman of high power in France who gives up everything to marry her officer lover at the end of his seven years' imprisonment and who lives her life in practical imprisonment with him.

It is a mother role really for the drama of the picture is in preparing the escape for the son who is born on the island. Miss Frederick portrays the drama of this situation admirably, although at times she seems to be too haggard and emotional. There is little of the sparkling humor in the well-known actress in this picture which has so endeared her to stage audiences the world over.

George Lewis is excellent as the son. Lewis seems to be a fine type of young juvenile and is especially attractive in this role.

Seldom has Marion Nixon been seen to such advantage as in "Devil's Island." As the little island girl she reveals herself as a dramatic actress of great depth, and her peculiar oriental type of charm makes her role an outstanding one. Richard Tucker is seen to advantage as the sentenced soldier; William Dunn and Leo White have small, but interesting, roles, while Harry Northrup is more than adequate as the commandante. John Miljan is good in a small role.

The screen play and scenario are by Leah Baird and a great deal of credit is due her. Whether it is her thought or not, the radio has been used to great dramatic advantage in this picture in a thoroughly novel manner. In fact, "Devil's Island" holds any number of dramatic thrills.

There is an interesting musical program at the Figueroa Theater this week with Salvatore Santaella directing. One of the most striking numbers is Gounod's "Ave Maria," with an altar vision of the Virgin Mary in the background. It is exceedingly well performed.

TIMBERGS HAVE BUSY DAY OF IT

New Hillstreet Bill Features Heavily Clever Boys in Songs and Patter

With laughter the keynote of yesterday's performance at the Hillstreet Theater, the new bill featuring the comedian Herman Timberg proved a decided success.

To say that the comical Herman Timberg was featured, is expressing things mildly. In fact, he, with the addition of his clever brother, Sammy, comprised the biggest part of this week's offering.

The bill was rather a "free-for-all" affair, including most everyone in the acts, in each one of the separate acts, winding up with an extra big mix-up" entitled "Something for Nothing."

Opening the program, was Herman Timberg, who announced that the production offered was going to be a bit "different," and he certainly proved his statement true.

He scored an individual triumph however, in each one of his numerous appearances, and by the applause that greeted him, he could have continued his "clowning" for hours, and still have an enthusiastic house left.

Besides his numerous and diversified "wise-cracks," Timberg put over an act with a violin that was a veritable riot. His dancing, too, proved equally popular.

Sharing popularity honors with Timberg, was the charming Spanish dancer, "Rosita." Rosita's charm, her grace and winning personality, made her quite the feminine favorite of the afternoon, and her group of songs, accompanied by the comical Herman and his fiddle, appealed tremendously.

To add more laughs was the comedy team of Burke and Durkin. In general, their bit of the program was composed of wise-cracking dialogue and songs, but the best part of their act was the character songs, sung by Mr. Burke. Two proved to be scarcely a sufficient number to satisfy the audience.

"The Rebellion," a skit threatening the modern craze for jazz, was also a Timberg specialty, featuring Herman's brother, Sammy.

This skit was a rather hectic affair, lending itself principally to jazz music, blue singing and Charleston dancing. All of the numbers rendered were good, and Sammy proved himself to be not only a comedian, but an excellent pianist.

The final skit, "Something for Nothing," was characterized by an imaginary bullfight. Herman was also responsible for the laughs in this number.

As the film offering on the bill was "Midnight Lovers," featuring Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson. It's all about war heroes and deserted brides, and is amusing in spots.

Shorter films concluded the program.

BILLIE DOVE WILL APPEAR AT LOEW'S

Billie Dove, who has the leading feminine role in "An Affair of the Follies," will make a personal appearance at Loew's State Theater tonight. This will be Billie Dove's first stage appearance at Loew's State, and that theater is billing her as "The Screen's Most Beautiful Woman."

Miss Dove is making great preparations for her personal appearance. Miss Dove will appear on the stage with the entire Fanchon and Marco company, consisting of Gene Morgan, Doris Eaton, Edna Covey and the twenty-four Serpentine Girls.

Frank Currier will essay the role of a Mexican in W. S. Van Dyke's next production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring Col. Tim McCoy in "Conquest of California."

'SYNTHETIC SIN' OFFERS DIVERSITY

Not Full-Fledged in Its Novelty, but Rather Amusing, Is Hatton's Latest

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Whatever dire and dark suspicions of evil the title "Synthetic Sin" may seem to provoke, the playgoer need be under no dread apprension. He or she (as the case may be) will hardly have to go through a soul-shriving process after indulging in the stage piece of Frederick and Fanny Hatton, which opened yesterday afternoon at the Morosco Theater.

This product from the pens (or typewriters) of the authors of "Upstairs and Down," "Lombardi, Ltd." and other successful attractions is merely a harmless essay at entertainment, and centers around the character of the good little girl who wants to appear bad so that she can make people take her seriously.

"Synthetic Sin" had a premiere of some eclat. There is always interest hereabouts in what the Hattons accomplish or attempt. The first presentations of their writings for the theater have become something of an institution.

It cannot be said in the instance of their latest offering that they fared the most advantageously in an initial performance, nor that the cast which appears in "Synthetic Sin" is in all respects adequate.

However, the matinee audience greeted what happened with response and a high degree of enthusiasm demonstrated in a considerable ovation after the final curtain. The success was, I understand, rather similarly duplicated in the evening, when the action was moving more smoothly.

"Synthetic Sin" is announced as a play that has everything, and it is evident that the Hattons have spared little in keeping up to the promise. There is a very great deal that happens at any rate; the measure of its importance may be another thing, but, at least, it is not uninteresting, excepting for those dull and talky spots that crop up as any opening.

I wonder, though, whether the Hattons have hit a note of any timelliness in this piece. The title is certain to be popularly intriguing. It may even draw quite a number of people, sans any other urge whatsoever.

Furthermore there are lots of what in film parlance would be termed "gags" in this show. Some of them are rather visibly dragged into the action. There is one scene, for example, in which Harry Garrity makes his solo appearance in the play, which is simply to introduce a new medium of distributing illicit vintages—said medium being a somewhat revamped baby carriage, with the baby itself (a doll) constituting one of the containers. The head of this doll is removed to permit an outflow of liquor.

There is another semigag in a terrific fist and wrestling battle between the hero and the villain that is made visible to the audience through the shadow expedient. That is, the forms of the two men fighting cast their outlines on the back wall of the stage, while they are supposed to be engaged in their battle in an adjoining room off stage.

The climax of "Synthetic Sin" is incidently tricky. It voids apparently a rule of good taste, and that is that jokes cannot usually be made about a dead man. I believe it is sometimes the fashion, goodnaturedly to do this in morgues and other mortuary establishments to relieve the depression, but it is not customary to bring the suggestion of this sort of atmosphere into the domain of the footlights.

The Hattons have succeeded in causing their villain to be so thoroughly detestable that they are almost successful in making the light treatment of his demise inoffensive. On this point there may be some slight difference of opinion.

On the whole, I would speak of "Synthetic Sin" as interesting, but not too wildly exciting. Its plot, especially that part about the girl going to an apartment hotel infested with notorious characters to gain sophistication, is not entirely plausible, but might be strengthened by laying a better foundation.

The first act of the play is pretty slight, anyway—little more than a prologue. It is rather dull in the writing.

Except for a few protracted lapses the Hattion lines come in air many laughs. On the whole, the dialogue is much livelier than in the case of either "The Waning Sex" or "Playthings," which were their last offerings.

Many of them need "putting over" as well as polishing.

Elizabeth Allen is the ingenue heroine. She is far from ideal for the part in stage presence, because she inclines to be a character rather than a straight comedienne type. I could imagine an actress of Mary Newcomb's personality making this sort of role very plausible. Mirthful outbursts were, however, Miss Allen's reward for the brighter sallies permitted her in the dialogue. The only utterly preposterous spot from audience standpoint was the seduction scene in the third episode, and it is a question whether she or Bertram Grassby who played this very heavily was the more to blame for this. The writing of the Hattons is very weak and old fashioned at this particular point.

Mitchell Harris is a great hit as usual in a role of comedy. John Litel is satisfactorily cast as the romantic hero. Alma Tell's role is not of exceptional import. Jane Morgan made an excellent impression. Arthur Belasco amused.

Summed up, "Synthetic Sin" does not at the present time look like more than a fair winner. The timeliness note is most lacking, unless this is supposed to be a cross section of life in certain portions of a large city. It might be that, but the play needs a more up-to-date heroine, quite aside from the matter of performance of the role, which, to some extent, may enter into this estimate.

BRILLIANT PREMIERE SCHEDULED

Mystery Melodrama Will Have Western Premiere at Biltmore

George M. Cohan's mystery melodrama "The Tavern," will have its western premiere under the management of Louis O'Macloon tonight at Erlanger's Biltmore.

With Alan Brooks in the leading role of the vagabond, and Kate Campbell as Violet, tonight's presentation of the George M. Cohan success will mark the first time "The Tavern" has ever been staged outside of New York and Chicago.

THE CURE FOR INFANTILE PARALYSIS

The cure for infantile paralysis! I know that the heart of every reader of these words is gladdened just at the sight of them, for there is no disease the thought of which terrorizes more than infantile paralysis.

Infantile paralysis is the common name for poliomyelitis, an inflammation of the front part of the spinal cord (the brain and other parts of the body are also affected, but not so much as the spinal cord.) If you remember the articles I wrote on the subject some time ago, you will recall that I said the reports from the use of poliomyelitis antistreptococcus serum had been very encouraging. Now comes a remarkable testimony in the American Journal of Diseases of Children, January, 1927, number, which shows that if taken in time this serum not only prevents death from the disease but also the paralysis. The report is given by Rosenow and Nickel of the Mayo clinic of Rochester.

Perhaps you have been reading the literature of certain health faddists and antimedical people, and think of serums as filthy animal matter? Filthy animal matter! If there ever was anything that could merit the name of "pure," certainly serums such as the antidiphtheritic and this antipoliomyelitis serum can.

The actual germ of poliomyelitis has not been discovered yet, and the disease is thought to be due to one that is so infinitesimal that our most powerful microscopes cannot detect it. Such a germ is known as a filtrable virus; that is, there is no filter known that is dense enough to hold it. However, there is apparently always associated with this virus some germs of the streptococcus group, and it is these streptococci taken from the cases of poliomyelitis that have been used to make the serum against the disease.

As in the diphtheria antitoxin, young, healthy horses are used. They are given injections of the germs, not large enough to bring on the disease but still large enough to cause the horse's blood and tissues to react and develop a neutralizing substance (called in medical language, antibody.) The doses are gradually increased as the animal develops the defense, but never to the extent that the animal does not remain well or loses weight. After horses have been immunized in this manner for at least six months, some of their blood is drawn painlessly, allowed to coagulate and the clear serum containing the neutralizing substance which the blood has developed, with a very small amount of antiseptic added so that it will keep, is the God-given remedy designated by the anti-medical people as filthy animal matter.

Before this serum is used on human beings, it is tested on animals to gauge the dosage and to be sure that it is nontoxic.

The report given by Rosenow and Nickel includes not only some hundreds of cases treated by themselves at Rochester, but over 1000 cases treated by other physicians that occurred under widely different conditions and in widely separated regions of the United States and Canada, over a period of five years. About 90 per cent of the injections were made between the muscles; about 10 per cent directly into the veins (these were chiefly in desperate cases.) There were none given directly into the spine. The number of injections varied from one to five.

The lowering of the death rate and the stopping of the paralysis was so much greater in the treated cases than in other cases which for some reason or other would not take the treatment, that there can be no doubt as to the very great value of the serum, both as a preventive of deaths and of the paralysis. The earlier the serum is given, the better the results, as in the antidiphtheritic serum for diphtheria.

PARADE of FASHION
HERE AND ABROAD

FASHION SPOT LIGHT TURNED ON RIVIERA

While buyers and dressmakers connive behind closed doors trying to foresee what spring fashions will be the people on the Riviera just walk out and look at them. What's worn at Nice in the pre-spring months is considered just as important by the smart ones as that designed in Paris.

White coats are one of the most interesting Riviera forecasts. There are top costumes for sport, for tea time and for evening.

One of the pretty ones recently worn combined black seal with white silk alpaca. The coat was heavily stitched from the belt to the hem. A bow at the side held with an enameled ornament made it a particularly interesting model.

BUCKLE ORNAMENTS ARE IMPORTANT ACCESSORIES

Paris spring styles are more a matter of smart accessories than ever. One of the essentials of the mode is ornamental buckles. One house puts out buckles of a material called galalith, said to be a formula in which milk and sulphuric acid are blended. The greatest recommendation of galalith is its lightness. The house has worked out many attractive designs in the composition which can be made to simulate wood, enamel, reptile skin or leather.

FRILLS OF MATERIAL FAVORITE TRIMMING

Narrow pleated frills of woolen material are recent Paris trimming innovations. Sport frocks often choose this form of trimming for spring. Plain color on a checked dress is a favorite. One of the pretty frilled coat models was of cerise wool velour made on princess lines and edged in ruchings of the pleated velour. The same narrow pleating upturned trimmed a little narrow military collar.

Well-known musicians acted as judges in a contest between 100 entrants to decide the mouth-organ-playing championship of Great Britain and Ireland, held in London recently.

Blind of London are being taught to operate power-driven machinery, one man having proved efficient in operating a machine for making knitting needles.

An Englishman holds the records of having broken the bank at Monte Carlo thirty-eight times in one season and four times in half an hour one Sunday afternoon last year.

SOCIETY

BY JUANA NEAL LEVY

There is less independence than usual in the Salon of Independent Artists, which opened last week in the Grand Palais in Paris. Or there is more independence—depending upon the point of view. There is less independence of the conventional ideas of perspective, anatomy and the classic composition. There is more independence of the unconventionality of Cesanne, Matisse, Utrillo and Picasso, in itself become conventional after twenty years of imitation.

There are fewer sensational pictures among the 4000 exhibits at the Grand Palais than in previous exhibits at the Palais de Bois, where the salon formerly was held. Therefore there are also fewer bad pictures and many more that are pleasing to look upon.

Americans exhibiting include Mrs. Virginia Berresford, Anna Brown, Camberon Burnside, James Butler, Theodore Butler, Sybil Emerson, Albert Gihon of Philadelphia, Robert Hollowell of Denver, Colo., Minnie R. Harvavy, Vladimir R. Japowicz, Blanche Lazzell of West Virginia, Elizabeth MacCord, Susan Miller, Myron C. Nutting of Nevada, Betty Bierne Parsons, Jules Pistchal, Alvin Abraham Rattner, Alexander Robinson of New Hampshire, Mary T. Robinson, Nancy Root and John A. Ten Eyck of Connecticut.

News received in Paris from Berlin is to the effect that the first interallied exposition shown in the German capital since the war has been received with acclamation. The first picture sold was "The Orange Woman," from the brush of Gerald Cassidy of Santa Fe, N. M., who, with Mrs. Sassidy, is wintering in Africa. Mr. Cassidy gave a show, arranged by Miss Leona Kohl of New York, in Paris last autumn and so insistent has been the demand for his work that he is giving another one in the French capital next spring before returning to America.

Miss Eulabee Dix, miniature painter, who studied at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, addressed the American Women's Club of Paris last week on the history of miniature art. Examples of Miss Dix's work were exhibited.

J. Massey Rhind, the sculptor, of New York City, whose work is known in many American cities, and Mrs. Rhind are staying at the Pension Girard in Florence, Italy, where Mr. Rhind is studying Italian art. J. W. Cox, the New York painter, and Mrs. Cox have taken an apartment in Florence for the winter.

Mrs. Lillian Fisk, the brilliant portrait painter, is at her studio in Paris for the winter.

M. H. Stowitts, the California painter, who was Pavlowa's only American dancing partner, was responsible for the set of maquets for the new Chinese opera, "Fay-Yen-Fa," or "The Perfume of Flowers," being shown at the New York Operahouse this winter. Mr. Stowitts completed the maquets in his Paris studio.

A painting by M. I. Abramofsky of Toledo, O., exhibited in the Salon du Franc, has been purchased by the French government. Mr. Abramofsky has been working in Paris for the past year.

Mrs. Deighton-Simpson and her daughter, Miss Constance Deighton-Simpson, who returned to Los Angeles for the winter, are expected in London again for the coming season. They make Claridge's their headquarters while in the British capital, and entertain frequently during the summer. Douglas Deighton-Simpson is widely known in younger sporting and social circles.

Miss Grace C. Strohm, Miss Mary Ann Strehn and Mrs. George B. McCauley, all of Los Angeles, were noticed dining in a party at the Restaurant la Tour d'Argent in Paris last week.

Mrs. William T. Henshaw of Los Angeles and the Avenue du Bois-de-Boulogne, Paris, was hostess last week at a small dinner party for a group of her friends.

Mme. Cornelia Rider-Possart, the Los Angeles pianist, gave a dinner of twenty covers last week at the home of Baroness von Wegerer in Berlin for Baroness Anita von Kleydorff and her fiance, Capt. Walter Warlimond, officer of a cavalry regiment of the German Reichswehr.

News has been received here of the death in Switzerland of Frau Clara Kapell, wife of Col. Adam Kapell, formerly of the German imperial army. Frau Kapell, who was a Californian, was a sister of the late Jacques Mayer, head of the European company of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company. She had passed the past year in Switzerland, but still owned a beautiful villa in the Grunewald suburb of Berlin and a large block of shares in the Mergenthaler company.

H. V. B. Acker has been stopping at the Hotel Eden in Rome.

Elbridge Rand, second secretary at the United States Embassy in Madrid, has departed for Washington, D. C., where he has been assigned to the Department of State.

Carl Wiecking and Robert Power have been staying at the Hotel d'Angleterre et de la Grande Bretagne in Nice on the French Riviera.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Hoffman have been passing some time in Paris.

Miss Florence Anthony and her friend, Miss Proper, have arrived in Berlin to pursue their musical studies after enjoying some time in Rome. Miss Anthony is a pianist and Miss Proper is a violinist.

YOUR BABY and MINE
By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mrs. Eldred will be glad to answer all questions pertaining to babies and children. A stamped and self-addressed envelope, forwarded to this office, will bring a personal reply.

LET 'EM CRY

Perhaps there is no one thing which so upsets the new mother as her baby's crying. If the baby is born in a hospital and has been out from under the mother's eye for a large share of each day, she imagines, no doubt, that it never cried until she brought it home and that something terrible must be wrong with it. Hospital babies cry just as regularly as babies at home, but the mothers don't hear them.

Babies sleep most of the time, but their wakeful hours are in many cases crying ones as well, for babies "yap" almost as easily as they breathe and for no very good reason. A loud, healthy yell in which the infant grows red in the face and kicks and squirms should not be stopped. Let him yell it out. It's the best kind of exercise and brings him to his dinner with a fine, lusty appetite.

If babies are constantly taken up each time they begin to cry, and fussed over and "shushed," they will soon demand just this kind of attention and very soon the mother will not know whether the child is crying because there is really something the matter with him, or if he is just desirous of a little attention. It is a wise rule to give the baby loving attention and cuddling when he isn't crying and try a little wholesome "deafness" when he is. It is usually easy enough for the trained ear to detect the signs of real pain and distress in the baby's cry, and realize that it is time to help him.

The sick baby wails and whines rather than cries. It is a melancholy sound and wrings the heart. Such a cry is less noisy than the healthy baby's, but it indicates the need for more than loving attention. The baby needs real treatment.

The overfed baby will usually cry less at night than he does in the daytime, for the reason that his small stomach is getting a longer rest and he is more comfortable.

The underfed baby will more than likely sleep fitfully all night, waking numerous times to be fed and swallowing great doses of water or anything else that comes to his hungry mouth.

This applies also to the baby of 7 months or so who has been in the habit of sleeping all night and then suddenly begins to waken two or three times nightly demanding to be fed. This baby needs more food, and a change and enlargement of the diet. Weaning is in order for the nursing baby and more food or a stronger formula for the bottle baby. Then he will go back to sleeping all night again.

Sometimes more food at the 4 o'clock feeding will do this same thing for the younger baby who sleeps poorly at night.

Don't be too nervous about crying if the baby is healthy and gaining; don't be indifferent to it if the baby is not.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Clean Comforters
One Mother Says:

I made the inside of baby's quilts good and firm by tacking fine cheesecloth over the cotton batting. Then the outer covering I made in the form of a pillow slip, the opening at one end to be fastened with snap fasteners. By having two of the outside slips the same inner pad can be used, and the lower snapped edge can be the foot of the quilt and does not show. This slip may be tacked lightly in the center to hold it in place. This arrangement is much easier than washing and drying the entire comforter each time.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Out of the Way

When using a can opener grasp the can near the bottom with the other hand, so if the can opener slips, your hand will not be there to receive an ugly gash.

The Maid's Room

Encourage the maid to keep her room clean and in order, even if your guests never see it. Give her time to attend to her own domain and she is much more apt to remain contented, at the same time helping along the sanitary condition of the home.

To Tempt Them

If the youngster does not like bread, try some other sort of bread than the usual wheat bread. Frequently raisin bread is attractive and whole wheat and graham breads often succeed where wheat fails; all of these are just as nutritious, some of them more so.

Silk Covered Buttons

When covering button molds with silken material cover them first with soft flannel and then with the silk. They will look much better.

Crisp Lettuce

Lettuce will keep crisp and fresh for several days and will always be ready when needed, if washed thoroughly in cold water and placed in a paper bag with the top tightly folded. Keep in the top of the refrigerator.

LISTEN, LADIES!

Boil a new clothesline. It will prevent it from stretching and make it last longer.

Let potatoes stand in cold water for a half-hour before peeling if you want them to be white.

Ground ginger used for a plaster instead of mustard is just as effective in drawing and it never blisters.

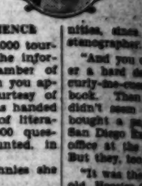
Meet Your Neighbor
By VALERIE WATROUS



AT THE FOUNT OF PATIENCE

Were you one of the 1,000,000 tourists who went straight to the information bureau of the Chamber of Commerce? If you are, then you appealed to the unfailing courtesy of Mrs. Phila L. O'Neil, who has handed out nearly 3,000,000 pieces of literature and answered 10,000,000 questions, funny ones not counted, in the past fifteen years.

Here are some of the funnies she has been asked to answer:

"I want to find a cousin who owns a ranch in Montana;" "Why is Los Angeles?" "How can I get to New York without paying my way?" "I want to get in touch with Judge Mitchell who recently came here from Alaska." "A salesman from a store here is making love to my daughter, I want to find out if he is married." "I want to find an old friend who came here years ago, but I only remember his first name." "I came out from the East with a man going to Wasco. Could you tell me how to find him?"

Oh, well, why shouldn't Mrs. O'Neil's hair be gray? I wonder she isn't chasing elephants around a padded cell at Patton.

I have known her for several years and have always admired her resourcefulness and courtesy, but never heard her story until I decided to place her on my list of delightful neighbors.

Mrs. O'Neil arrived here with four healthy youngsters ranging from 9 to 16, and a total capital of 30 cents. Yes, the room rent was paid half a week in advance, but that was all. She had a master's degree from a freshwater college, she whose graduates have helped to make this nation's history. But it was not one of those accredited by the State of California, and she was therefore barred as a teacher.

During the first two years Mrs. O'Neil washed dishes in a restaurant and, hung clothes in a laundry, cooked in a college cafeteria, went into the country and cut apricots, always the children helping in such ways as they could.

In all this struggle she realized her work was a makeshift, it was feeding and sheltering them, yes, but that was all. When her older son found employment she learned typing and did copying, but found few opportunities, since very few use stenographer.

"And you can't date anyone a hard day's work and thirty-one cents in a book. Then one day she didn't seem to be in a rut bought a paper and saw that San Diego Exposition was in office at the Chamber of Commerce. But they, too, were full.

JUSTIFIED DIVORCE HELD HOLIER THAN WEDLOCK

Methodist Divine, Speaker of KHJ, Favors Legal Separation in Interest of Purity

Declaring that marriages should be dissolved "where incompatibility, discord, cruelty or hate exist," Dr. S. D. Fleming, resident minister of Wilshire Methodist Episcopal church, in an address from The Times broadcasting station KHJ, avowed his conviction that "some divorces which result in shattered homes are more holy than the marriages which [illegible] them."

"And you can't darn stockings after a hard day's work and keep curly-ine-cues in a shorthand book. Then one day when you didn't seem to be a cyc of [illegible] bought a paper and saw that [illegible] San Diego Exposition was opening office at the Chamber of Commerce. But they, too, wanted a stenographer.

"It was then that I met that old Hoosier-Californian, Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and shortly I was installed as a buffer between the city and the public. He helped me. He raised me what books to read, and formed a habit I've never given up.

"I am amused at the women looking for a 'white-collar' job. They are absolutely untrained. They say, 'You have a nice position here. How did you get it? I could do . . . just stand here and hand out literature and answer questions.'

"In my girlhood I planned to become a missionary, and have ever since accept this work as my chance for doing good. People are so helpful and most of them mentally lazy. Why, I've known a man to walk blocks to ask me a question when he could have found that information in his telephone book if he stopped to think about it."

Men are more easy to handle than women, says Mrs. O'Neil, but she never has conquered "her" man. Of the woman who asks about a meeting, or for some other information which is quite beyond the bureau's scope, and then says curtly: "And you're informed, I'm sure."

INCREASING SLATE PRODUCTION

Roofing slate, formerly produced almost entirely by hand, is now turned out by mills equipped with traveling cranes, power saws and special pneumatic splitters. Besides its long-lasting use for roofing, slate is valuable to surface walls and to make mantreads, floor tile and hearth stones. It is also employed in the manufacture of electrical switchboards, billboards, billiard tables, etc.

Legislative council chamber constructed to overlook the Indian Ocean at Colombo, Ceylon, was completed in two years.

TESTS ANNOUNCED FOR TWO POSITIONS

Announcement of competitive examinations for the office of Deputy Public Defender and the position of curator in the junior museum department, has been made by Sam J. Chappel, secretary and chief examiner of the Los Angeles County Civil Service Commission. Further information may be obtained at the headquarters of Secretary Chappel, 1007 Hall of Records.

MILLIONAIRE T BE CHRISTIAN

[illegible] be either a [illegible] is the topic [illegible] yesterday by [illegible] at Pilgrim [illegible] Dr. Culbert- [illegible]

[illegible] may because [illegible] lack of willingness [illegible] of misunderstandings in [illegible] not yet [illegible] Christianity. Christianity [illegible] deliver us [illegible] it is for the [illegible] dynamic, [illegible] of God, transforming [illegible] the physical [illegible] while a Christian may become a pauper our civilization will not be truly Christian until we have found some brotherly way, not charity, of lifting all worthy strugglers with fate into a more rightful place among the members of the world-family of the brethren of Christ.

"A true Christ-like Christian may make a million dollars, honestly and fairly, by applying his genius to the organization of industry, by inventing or discovering something of value, or by pleasing the multitude as an artist or actor. Can a true Christian, one who is like Jesus, keep $1,000,000? That is a deeper question. Certainly we cannot imagine Jesus keeping $1,000,000, living in luxury, attended by a retinue of servitors, spending thousands of dollars for His own comfort and selfish pleasure. The only condition on which I can imagine Jesus keeping $1,000,000, would be in order to use it, as a carpenter would use his tools, for the furtherance of business in such a way as to serve and bless mankind, with utterly no selfish advantage considered."

MATCHLESS MESSAGE IN SERMON ON MOUNT

"The Matchless Mountain Message" is the subject of a sermon preached by Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper at Westlake Presbyterian Church yesterday. Dr. Tupper said, in part:

"The Sermon on the Mount is the Magna Charta of the Divine Kingdom. It is the incomparable classic of Jesus, pre-eminent in the combined qualities of refinement of thought, elevation of sentiment, sublimity of conception and purity and beauty of expression. It is, indeed, the matchless message of the sky. Interpreted with slavish literalism, it becomes unintelligible and impracticable; interpreted from a spiritual viewpoint and in the light of common sense and Hebrew thought and expression, it is gloriously intelligible and practicable."

REASONS GIVEN FOR SKEPTIC'S ATTITUDE

Dr. Isaac Ward, pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church, preached yesterday on "The Need of Reality in Religion." He said in part:

The world does not understand religion because people do not understand God, and they do not understand God because they do not see enough of God in some who claim to know Him. The world is to some extent from Missouri on the question of religion. The world is long on religion but short on Christianity. We should be able to give as good a reason for being Christians as for being Americans. No true American will sneer at religion; it occupies too large a place in the Constitution. Too many follow Christ at a distance, and half-way to Christ is a dreadful place to live. Many people are dissatisfied because they have dowed up in experimental religion and it is half devotion that makes hard devotion. The oratory of words loses its zest if not illustrated by living deeds. True religion will operate between Sundays."

DECLARES AMERICA HOLDS GOD'S FAVOR

Rev. William C. Iasti, pastor of Amanda Chapel, Carthay Center, preached yesterday on "Favored of God." He spoke in part as follows:

"It is difficult for me to believe those who proclaim that America is losing favor with God. I am not blind to the evils prevalent in our country, to the dangers of wealth and the temptations of power, but in all this power and wealth I see the blessing of God. National prosperity is a sign of God's favor. I mean when the whole people are prosperous and the wealth not in the hands of a few, as in the days of the power of Assyria, Egypt or Rome. The staunch and sturdy character of Americans, the free and open worship of God, advocacy and leadership in righteousness among the other nations, all lead me to the conclusion that America is a nation favored of God and receiving His divine blessing, given to us so long as we strive to do the right thing among the nations."

Rabbi E. F. Magnin of Temple B'nai B'rith preached yesterday on "Religion and Philosophy." He said in part:

"Religion begins where philosophy leaves off. Man is a feeling as well as a thinking animal. He has emotions, moods, aspirations. He must lean upon something greater than himself. That something cannot be had through philosophy. God for him must be personal. He must be able to communa. He feels His presence even though he cannot analyze his own feelings. Philosophy is good mental exercise. It satisfies the craving and hunger for knowledge. Man is curious and wants to know the why and wherefore of things. But no two philosophers can agree, nor should they. The mind is limited and finite. But because philosophy leads ultimately to skepticism and the recognition of one's own limitations the more the need for faith."

COMPTON COMMUNITY BEHIND RABBIT SHOW

With more than 4800 citizens working on committees or scheduled to take part in programs, the annual industrial and rabbit show of Compton is reported nearing readiness for its opening on March 1, to run one week. Hubert Allen, general chairman, issued a statement saying that while the affair was sponsored by the Compton Chamber of Commerce, in effect it is a community enterprise, due to the large number of volunteer workers. The show will contain 175 merchandising and manufacturing displays, a rabbit section with more than 3000 prize entries, a historical museum and an amusement section. Numerous entertainment programs are planned for the main or industrial tent.

GEST ANNOUNCES BENEFIT

Special Performance of "The Miracle" to be Given For Actors' Fund and to Aid Local Charity

A special benefit performance of "The Miracle," the proceeds to go to the Actors' Fund of America and a local charity, not yet named, will be given next Sunday evening, it was announced yesterday by Morris Gest. The benefit, the first that has ever been given of this play, is a grateful compliment, Gest said, to California's climate for restoring his health, for the patronage the State has given his production, and for many other benefits he has received from the Coast. It will also be the first performance of "The Miracle" to be given on Sunday evening.

Lady Diana Manners will play the Madonna and Iris Tree and Eleanor Patterson, with the other stars, will also be in the cast.

In giving his reasons for the benefit, Gest said that last October in Philadelphia, he had a collapse which kept him in bed several months, and that when he started for California it was against the advice of his physicians. They predicted he would be able to get no farther than Chicago. But a few weeks here put him on his feet again, the producer declared.

Gest said also that California has always been an inspiration to him. As a newsboy in Boston, he read the stories of the California pioneers with interest and profit. David Belasco, his theatrical mentor, is a native Californian, and Mrs. Gest, Belasco's daughter, is also a native of the State.

Muskrat Farm Beats Rabbits, Says Promoter

That every California family has an urgent desire to own a pair of muskrats and raise these animals for their fur is the opinion of A. P. Smith of 2126 South Los Angeles street, who applied to Deputy State Corporation Commissioner Walther for permission to sell stock in a muskrat enterprise. Smith told the commissioner his brother has a farm of 15,000 muskrats at Medford, Or.

To be sure, Smith admitted, muskrats thrive best in a swamp and the swamp area of Southern California is rapidly diminishing since the rain stopped, but Smith says he has an option on a piece of land he believes will answer the purpose. A pair of muskrats will cost no more, he says, than a fairly good dog, say about $200, while the progeny of a single pair, he figures will amount to $2,400 in four years, which holds rabbits. The application was taken under advisement.

CAREER OF CRIME LAID TO YOUTH

Lad, 14 years of Age, Accused of Burglarizing Nine Cafes, Two Groceries, Two Hotels, Two Shoe Stores and a Drug Store for Good Measure

Walter Vallivero, asserted 14-year-old master bandit, has been accused of sixteen burglaries in a complaint filed against him in Judge Archbald's Juvenile Court.

The youth, who is now confined in the General Hospital, is said to be the son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Vallivero of Haledon, N. J.

According to Police Officer Evans the youth is also suspected of being "in" as a "go-between" on most of the large burglaries perpetrated recently in Los Angeles.

The boy was said to have acted as an agent through whom professional burglars disposed of their loot to a professional "fence."

Burglaries charged to the boy include those of nine cafes, two groceries, two hotels, two shoe stores and a drug store.

When Vallivero was arrested, the police report said, he first gave his age as 19 years, later reducing this number to 16 and finally to 14.

Efforts will be made to ascertain definitely his age through the authorities of Haledon, N. J., it was stated.

Arrest Made in Asserted Plot for Extortion

Stanley A. Rood, said to live at the Commodore Hotel, Seventh and Lucas streets, is under arrest on suspicion of extortion, following two complaints made to the Hollywood police of an asserted scheme to get money from victims after involving them in apparently compromising positions.

He is said to have been one of four men who endeavored to obtain $100, in the guise of a fine, from Ralph MacFadyen, 6971 Sunset Boulevard. He was arrested by Officer Taber.

Robert C. Monroe, 940 Lillian Way, a studio employee, was pushed as a victim of the Hollywood Public Library, he reported to police yesterday. The men, he said planned to call at his home for $200 for an asserted bond this morning.

The same gang, police believe, is involved in both cases. In each case, it was said, one man flashed a badge and all the men posed as officers. One man, it was declared, was used to entrap the victim.

A New and Better Gasoline

LOW FLASH POINT

Gilmore Hurls a Bomb Into the Gasoline World

...It's here—the perfect motor fuel—a brand new gasoline—Gilmore Low-Flash-Point Gasoline.

...It will supplant the prevailing weak-kneed fuels as certainly as the automobile erased the "one-hoss shay".

...Gilmore engineers have quietly worked on the development of Low-Flash-Point Gasoline. Old theories were discarded. New channels of experiments were followed—a better method of producing this superior gasoline has been discovered.

...This new motor fuel vaporizes at lower temperatures—hence its name "Low-Flash-Point"—it vaporizes completely, cold mornings or warm, while the usual commercial motor fuels merely atomize.

...When Gilmore Low-Flash-Point Gasoline goes through the carburetor, it vaporizes into pure dry easy-to-fire gas—no liquids remain to reduce efficiency or destroy lubrication.

...Gilmore Low-Flash-Point Gasoline is not treated with compounds. It is an inherently anti-knock gasoline!

...It's now on sale—for the first time—only at Independent Service Stations handling Gilmore Oil Products. Fill your tank with this new and better gasoline. It will put a new heart in your motor car—keep more money in your own pocket.

T. A. BOYD
of the Research Laboratories General Motors Corp., is the authority for the following:*

...motor fuel should be a liquid that is easy to vaporize—one that can be used in an automobile, even when the weather is cold, without the application of much heat to the mixture to make the engine function as it should.

The introduction of heat with the fuel-air mixture is undesirable, both because it seriously reduces the volumetric efficiency of the engine and because it has a large influence in inducing knock.

LIENS FILED FOR INCOME TAXES

More Than 100 Companies and Individuals Named

Motion-Picture Actors Among Persons Involved

Other Suits Awaiting Audit of Accounts

More than 100 Los Angeles business firms and individuals, among them a number of motion-picture actors, are named in income-tax liens filed by Galen Welch, Collector of Internal Revenue. The amount of taxes delinquent is in excess of $235,000. This amount represents but a small part, however, of the total amount of delinquent taxes, and a number of other suits are now being prepared by Mr. Welch and will be filed as soon as a complete audit of the accounts can be made.

Among suits now on file are: William King Baggott, 7240 Franklin avenue, $361.91; Malcolm C. Ross, 538 North Harper avenue, $360.32; Mrs. Bertha S. George, 7887 Hillside avenue, $9681.19; E. J. LaFon, 1018 Van Nuys Buildings, $10,543.71, and Colby Management Corporation, 1700 East Ninth street, $1198.58.

BOBBED-HAIR BANDIT BEFORE COURT TODAY

What actuated the asserted activities of Mrs. Jennie Fraschaur, 20 years of age, so-called "bobbed-hair" bandit, is expected to come out today upon her arraignment in Judge Burnell's court on two counts of robbery. It is charged that she accompanied Emerson B. Smith, recently sentenced to San Quentin, in various robberies, and that she held a revolver pointed at the victims while Smith robbed them.

DOG ALLOWED HIS ONE BITE

Owner Not Responsible for Bull Pup's Crunching Airedale's Paw

A dog's right to one bite has been upheld by Municipal Judge MacCoy sitting in Small Claims Court when he found for the defendant in a suit brought by Franklin Eddington against Elmer Marston for $38.

Eddington said his Airedale was sleeping peacefully on his front stoop when Marston's Boston bull happened along, grabbed the airedal's paw between his teeth and gave a crunch. The bill was for treatment at a dog hospital.

"It is evident," said Judge MacCoy, "defendant's pet was merely taking the one bite the law permits and that his owner cannot be held financially responsible."

WILMINGTON TO VOTE ON BONDS FOR PARK

The City Council has called a special election in the Wilmington district on March 10 to vote on the question of issuing $278,000 in district bonds for the purchase for public park purposes of the twenty-acre property which was formerly the Banning homestead. The calling of the election was petitioned by Wilmington residents.

SEARCH CONTINUED FOR MISSING FISHER

Deputy Sheriffs Peters and Blasdell yesterday continued their search for Hugh Kiefer, a fisherman whose boat was found floating off San Clemente Island on the 2nd inst. The officers said they had not discovered any tangible clew which would lead to a solution of Kiefer's mysterious disappearance. It is their belief that Kiefer met with foul play. This theory is given weight by the fact that his watch recently was received in the mail by his mother, Mrs. M. L. Simpson of 2856 Fifth street, San Diego. The watch was accompanied by an unsigned letter in which the writer stated the watch had been received from Kiefer for repairs.

MEN AND women prominent in motion-picture life were at the Santa Fe station last night when Joseph M. Schenck and Samuel Goldwyn, film producers, departed for New York.

Goldwyn declared he was going east to buy the next two stories that United Artists has under consideration. Schenck asserted that the distribution of United Artists' pictures and the erection of proposed theaters in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia furnished reasons for his trip.

Among screen celebrities who appeared at the station to see Schenck and Goldwyn off were Douglas Fairbanks, Norma and Constance Talmadge and a host of other figures prominent in the film world.

Bogota, Colombia, is to have a new theater.

FRAUD CONSPIRACY CHARGED TO PAIR

Calaway Rice, according to charges on which he and Ruth Richardson will be brought to trial today before Judge McLucas, had a wrist, which served him on occasions, but which had long since been broken. The two are accused of conspiracy to obtain money by false pretenses, in that Rice, assertedly supported by the young woman, attempted to obtain $2500 from the Yellow Taxi Company, on the grounds that the wrist had been broken while he was alighting from one of the company's taxicabs. It is charged that Rice and the other defendant pretended to L. H. Garrity, claim agent of the company, that the wrist was broken due to negligence of the taxi driver, but that such claims were false.

HOLLYWOOD THEFT CASE CHARGES UP

"Lady Diana Bathurst" to Appear Today for Plea in Jewelry and Gowns Case

Flaming-haired Virginia Hurst, widely known in certain Hollywood circles as "Lady Diana Bathhurst," today will appear before Municipal Judge Ballard for preliminary examination on felony charges growing out of her asserted thefts of jewels and clothing said to belong to former friends.

Miss Hurst was taken into custody last week on a complaint signed by I. F. Baring charging grand larceny based on the asserted theft of a bar pin valued at $780 belonging to Daisy B. Chapman, wife of R. B. Hay Chapman, wealthy local stockbroker. A second count of grand larceny charges the theft of valuable shawls and a dinner gown from Louisa Fletcher, former close friend of the woman.

In Miss Hurst's arrest on the felony complaint is heard an echo of several other events of the past months which brought the charming red head into public prominence. It was Miss Hurst who occasioned the arrest of Miss Fletcher and Mary Miles last January on assault charges and which resulted in the two girls paying fines after pleading guilty.

To Miss Hurst was also attributed the arrest of Stoughton Fletcher, III, son of a prominent Indiana financier and brother of Louisa Fletcher. He was charged with grand larceny ringing about the same clothes, but the charges against him were dismissed.

The hearing will be conducted before Judge Ballard in Division One at 2 p.m. Miss Hurst is at liberty on $2000 bail.

Poland has an acute car shortage.

TO HONOR WASHINGTON

Societies Plan Celebrations on First Birthday and Many Public Buildings

With many celebrations planned and with many private institutions closed, Los Angeles tomorrow will honor the day of George Washington.

A dinner to be given by the Sons of the American Revolution assisted by the Daughters of the American Revolution at the University Club will be one of the outstanding functions in memory of "The Father of His Country."

Frederick Warde will address those that gather at the dinner on "Popular Conception of Washington." He will be followed by Mrs. Jessie H. Shreve of San Diego, State regent of the women's organization, and Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey, vice-president of the national body.

A patriotic program has been arranged by the Steuben Society of America to be given at the Turnverein Germania, 936 West Washington street. State and city officials are listed as speakers.

Many State societies will observe the day at picnic reunions to be featured with Washington programs. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual banquet at 7 p.m. in the Ambassador. Speakers will include Arthur S. Bent, president of the chamber during 1926; D. F. McGarry, recently elected president for 1927, and Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who is scheduled to deliver the main address. J. Debney Day, banker, will act as master of ceremonies.

Official dedication of the Mt. Vernon Junior High School will also take place tomorrow. Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, Superintendent of Schools, will formally open the new building. "George Washington's House Warming at Mt. Vernon," a short play, will be given at the dedication ceremony.

MUSIC CLASS FOR TEACHERS

Miss Frances Wright, associated professor of music, University of California at Los Angeles, has been engaged by the extension division to give an evening course in secondary music education, to assist teachers in the junior and senior high schools. The first meeting is set for tonight at 7 o'clock in Room 11, Woodbury Building.

...ting stations to give out two hours a day of government information, news, educational talks and musical programs. The commission expenses will be met from the fund and the balance is to be preserved until a sum sufficient to establish governmental stations for public service has been acquired.

Fees per annum are two pesos for each crystal set and ten pesos for each tube set excepting for government officials and officers of the United States Army, Navy or Marine Corps. The sale of sets must be reported and recorded as well as transfers and records of home-made sets. A fine of twenty-five pesos is to be meted out to those who fail to comply with the legal requirements.

KHJ STUDIO SERMON

The 10 o'clock studio sermon from KHJ yesterday was delivered by Dr. S. D. Hutsinpillar, resident minister of the Wilshire Methodist Episcopal Church. This was followed by the music and service from the First Methodist Episcopal Church until noon and again from seven to eight o'clock in the evening.

The evening program included the usual half-hour broadcast of Burr McIntosh, the cheerful philosopher of KHJ, with his talk on Americanism and the poems of the week.

Harold Rodgers, Australian concert pianist and a new arrival in Los Angeles, offered two selections: "Raindrop Prelude," by Chopin, Polish pianist-composer who was peculiarly gifted in bringing out pianistic effects that show "novelty; and "Gopak," a number written in 1865 by Mussorgsky, Ukrainian composer who was an early protege of Cui and Balakirev.

Frederick MacMurray entertained with request numbers on the viola unaccompanied, and also on the violin with piano accompaniment. His selections included his own arrangement of "My Old Kentucky Home," the Schumann "Traumeri," and other musical masterpieces.

Mrs. Edward Crossman, contralto, offered the old Welsh air, "All Through the Night," "Morning Winds," by Branscombe, Canadian composer now living in New York; and "Song of the Soul," by Brell, American theater-musician and composer of operatic selections.

Of interest on the musical broadcast was a number played particularly for Mr. and Mrs. Isaac F. Pearson, of Glendale, in honor of their sixty-first wedding anniversary.

The Moana Hawaiian Preserves Entertainers, under the direction of B. H. Karman, provided a half-hour entertainment during the evening program. Mr. Karmen was at one time manager and announcer for KGU, the Honolulu station, and he is making a tour in the States of the group which sings and plays native Hawaiian tunes.

BOASTED "DRAG" ONLY PULLS TOWARD JAIL

Elmer Condon's asserted "drag" must have been in some other court than Judge Scott's. Condon is a guest at the County Jail, where Judge Scott gave him a five-day sojourn in which to think over the evils of not paying alimony. "My husband is a private detective and a former deputy sheriff," began Mrs. Condon, "and he says he has such a strong drag that no judge is going to do anything to him. But he's been spending his money on another woman and not paying me any alimony and I don't know where to go about it except here." "This is exactly the right place to come," replied Judge Scott. "As to this 'drag' you speak of, I have never heard of it."

A MAN LOANED ME
$10.00

That was four months ago. He also gave me a job, and out of that job I have made more money than I ever made before. Prior to that time I was a professional man, but in the four months in this new line I have found that my previous years were practically wasted. I have now been put into a position where I can employ other men in the same line and if you have any "get up and get" to you there is no reason why you cannot make better than $100 a week. I prefer young men who have previously sold something, but that is not absolutely essential. If you want to earn money and have the right amount of ambition I can put you right to work.

Come in and see me today, between 8:30 and 12 only. LIEUTENANT ROBLES, 726 S. Spring.

WE have an opening for a few men desiring a permanent, profitable position with a responsible company. Men with some selling ability preferred but not essential. See Manager, between 9 & 12 a.m.

NAME FROM ROYALTY

New York Took Its Title From the Duke of York

The infant settlement of New Amsterdam was still in its swaddling clothes when across the sea, in the palace of the English King, Baby Stuart posed to Anthony Van Dyke for the prim little portrait that has become so widely known and beloved. The "Stuart Baby," second son of Charles I of England and Henrietta Maria, had no thought then that the struggling village one day to be the pride of the western world—would years later be named in his honor, New York.

The child, who in his turn succeeded to the English throne as James II, was at 9 years of age created Duke of York and Albany. Upon reaching manhood he precipitated himself into various wars, all of which he came through with a reputation for brilliant personal courage.

In 1664 Charles granted New Netherlands to the Duke of York, and an English force under Col. Richard Nicolls took possession of the city, naming it New York in his honor. Subsequently the Dutch recaptured the province, but the English quickly took it away from them again, restoring the name of the Stuart prince.—[Mentor.

LOCAL HUNT FOR WHALES HALTED

Fleet Ceases Activities Off San Clemente Island

Invade Mexican Waters as Finbacks Run Away

Navy Fire Ends First Harvest Here in Generations

The whaling fleet of the California Sea Products Company has abandoned operations off San Clemente Island, and will sail the middle of this week for Mexican waters. It marks the end of the first whaling operations off Southern California in generations.

The premature withdrawal however is not regarded as discrediting local waters as a whaling field. Rather it illustrates the timidity of finbacks, nothing more. For finbacks were amazingly bountiful, romping about the island in shoals of forty to eighty whales each when Capt. F. K. Dydrich first brought his fleet from San Francisco late last year.

Then came "force firing" by the battle fleet and the booming of big guns in the whaling waters. That was in mid-January, when the four killer boats were killing three to four finbacks daily, each.

It was a "whale of a harvest," opening the eyes of veteran Arctic whalers who declared they had never seen the mammals in such numbers.

But the navy firing was as disastrous to the whaling fleet as it was to the imaginary enemy which it vanquished. Immediately the mammals for a hundred miles around turned tails and disappeared. For more than a month the killer boats have explored the waters and the fleet held on, hoping for the finbacks' return in numbers. It was in vain.

The rich harvest was turned into what would have been a debacle for any except a well-financed fleet. The mothership Lansing maintains a personnel of ninety men, and each of the killer boats a crew of nearly a dozen. Three thousand barrels of oil were their total, when normally, it is estimated, it might have been more than twice the amount. Scores of thousands of dollars were lost in those few minutes when the big ships belched forth their smoke and steel.

BAD WINDS DELAY GLOBE-CIRCLING LINER

Bucking of head winds the last several hundred miles has delayed the Dollar globe-circling liner President Hayes, due into yesterday from New York, and she did not reach port until after midnight this morning. She will pass quarantine at sunrise and is expected to reach her dock at Terminal Island about 7.30 a.m.

Promotion of her 100 passengers aboard are distinct for Los Angeles, and she will drop more than 100 tons of general merchandise, picked up in a score of ports around the world.

Thirty Los Angeles persons have booked passage through to Europe by the Hayes, it was said by the company agent, and the liner will take on more than 1000 tons of Los Angeles cargoes, cotton, borax and oil comprising the bulk of it.

Due to her delayed arrival, her hour of departure will not be definitely on until early this afternoon, but she is expected to get out for San Francisco around midnight tonight.

Storms put a crimp in the week's ship arrivals at this port, the number dropping from 134 the week previous to 113 for the seven-day period ending Saturday night. Of these, thirty were passenger carriers, thirty-one were cargo ships, thirty-six plied in oil traffic and thirteen in the coastal lumber trade. Inbound cargoes totaled 347,000 board feet, or from 17,471,000 to 19,-000,000 feet. Oil shipments, however, boosted 4,145,128 barrels, a gain of 600,000 barrels over 3,515,382 the week previous. This week, however, promises big things in the petroleum movement, with the Standard Oil fleet, the second day, arrived of ten tankers today and fourteen for tomorrow.

A new aid to navigation will be inaugurated by the lighthouse service of the Department of Commerce March 1, when four Pacific Coast lighthouses will start broadcasting their weather reports by radio. These reports will go on the air between 7 and 8:10 a.m., 12 to 12:10 p.m. and 10 to 10:10 p.m., 431 m. Those broadcasting their weather reports will be the San Francisco, Blunts Reef, Columbia River and Swiftsure Bank lightships. Each ship will transmit its report twice, remaining about two minutes, and during these two-minute periods all other stations and ship stations are ordered to keep off the air.

Harold R. Buckley, recently appointed assistant trade commissioner at Australia, will fly to Los Angeles the 22nd and 23rd inst., to interview business men and exporters interested in that antipodean field. He will make headquarters at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

One of the oldest institutions, the dump-car lead line, used for depth soundings, is about to go the way of the old square rigger, according to Lieut. Tom Hamilton, Bucket. It is to be replaced by an echo-sounding gear, designed by the Submarine Signal Laboratory. The latter is said to record the depth of water beneath a ship by means of precise and automatic determination of the time interval between the emission of a sound wave and the reception of its echo from the sea bottom.

The liner Harvard will resume her coastal passenger service today when she sails at 4 p.m. for San Francisco. She has been at the Bethlehem Shipyards the last three weeks getting her annual overhaul and minor repairs.

A. R. Pegg, local representative for the International Marine Compositors, returned yesterday from a week's conference in San Francisco with officers of the C. G. Chinch & Co., coast agents for the paint firm.

Going back to his business as hard as they smashed the gridiron lines, three members of Red Grange's football team will sail on the Panama-Pacific liner Mongolia today for New York. They are Gerald Mahoney, end; Steve Sebastian, center, and George Pease, quarterback. The former is from Dartmouth, the other two from Columbia University. Barnstorming over the country's gridirons has been highly diverting, but all three have had their fill, they confess, and now are ready to tackle the commercial game with the same driving power.
